On page 16 strike out the proviso beginning with line 5 and ending with line 13.

And the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Butler, is:

In line 10, page 16, strike out the word "five" and insert the word

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. BUTLER,

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. CHAIRMAN. Now the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Burke.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

For travel allowance to enlisted men on discharge, $900,000.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out, in line 21, page 16, the word "nine" and insert the word "eight."

Page 16, line 21, strike out the word "nine" and insert the word "eight."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I do that by reason of the amendment adopted yesterday afternoon. I am informed that the travel pay on discharge of 3,980 men is $120,000. In order to be conservative we only move to strike out $100,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For clothing not drawn due to enlisted men on discharge, $800,000.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

At the end of line 24, page 16, add the following proviso:

"Provided, That hereafter the allowance of clothing for enlisted men shall be the same for all enlistment periods, and, exclusive of blankets and other articles that are or may be issued or supplied gratuitously, shall be as prescribed for the first enlistment by a War Department general order, No. 67, and bearing date May 25, 1911."

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, there is no question but that the proviso is subject to the point of order. It will be observed that this item is $200,000 more than is submitted in the Book of Estimates. The proviso that I have just offered was proposed at one time to be inserted in the bill.

Under the order referred to in that proviso the amount of clothing on discharge was the same for the second enlistment as for the first enlistment. The order reduced this clothing allowance from $69 down to, I think, $33 on the second enlistment. I spoke about this the other day when the question was up. The purpose of this proviso is to give back to the enlisted man an amount which has been taken from him by an order of the War Department, and I hope the point of order will not be made. Of course if it is made there is no doubt but that it is subject to the point of order. If the point of order is sustained I shall move to reduce the sum in the bill to the amount estimated for by the department.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I think we can understand with little fuller explanation on the part of the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. HAY. I will be very glad to answer any questions that may be asked.

Mr. MANN. I do not know enough about it to ask a question. Mr. HAY. I will say this, Mr. Chairman: Last year, after the bills were introduced by myself for the purpose of bringing about these economies, and particularly the five-year enlistment bill, the War Department issued that order, which they had the right to do, because under the law the President fixes the clothing allowance. Heretofore the clothing allowance has been the same for enlistments, the same for the second enlistment as for After this bill was introduced an order was issued reducing the clothing allowance upon the second enlistment, so that they were thereby enabled to save, as was stated by the Chief of Staff, half a million dollars; but I observe they have cut the appropriation only $200,000.

That in effect is a reduction in the pay of the Mr. MANN.

enlisted man?

Yes. Mr. HAY.

After the first enlistment?

Mr. MANN. After the first enlistment? Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. MANN. And that was for the purpose of discouraging—

Mr. HAY. Reenlistment, as I understand it. Mr. MANN. Possibly.

Mr. HAY. It was said it was done for economy, but unquestionably when you decrease a man's pay and the emoluments which he has been in the habit of getting, it will not encourage him to reenlist.

Mr. MANN. An enlisted man under the regulations before this last order, reenlisting, received first an increase in his pay.

Mr. HAY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. And would receive the same clothing allowance as on his first enlistment.

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. MANN. Under this order on reenlistment he receives his increase in pay

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. MANN. But does not get the same clothing allowance that he used to get.

That is right. Mr. HAY.

Mr. MANN. I never have thought that the enlisted man got any too much.

Mr. HAY. Nor have I. Mr. BUTLER. I understood the chairman to say in answer to a question submitted to him by the gentleman from Illinois that the real purpose of this order was to discourage reenlistment.

Of course that is my interpretation of it.

Mr. BUTLER. Oh, I know the gentleman is not committing the department on it.

Mr. HAY. No; I could not commit the department to anything. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUTLER. I am asking the gentleman's opinion, and I think he is capable of giving us accurate information. not understand, and I am groping around trying to learn, why the allowance for clothing should be reduced on the second enlistment. I thought the department always encouraged a second enlistment.

Mr. HAY. I will say to the gentleman that the department heretofore has always encouraged reenlistment.

Mr. BUTLER. Yes.

Mr. HAY. But under the present régime they propose to discourage reenlistment, save noncommissioned officers and a few privates who have some technical skill in different branches of the service.

Mr. BUTLER. Does the gentleman have any reason that he could give me why that discouragement is made?

I do not know, except they want to create a reserve in this country; they want to have a reserve, and they do not want men to stay in the Army more than three years, but want them to go back to the body of the people.

Mr. BUTLER. Well, I know nothing except the gentleman's statement surprises me. I know it is accurate, but his reasons for it surprise me.

Mr. HAY. I stated my judgment was this allowance was taken away from these men because they wanted to discourage reenlistment. The department has never admitted that that is the reason for it. They said they did it to bring about economy. I think it is a bad place to bring about economy.

Mr. BUTLER. If the gentleman's amendment should prevail, I understand it will restore to the enlisted men that which was taken away by this order. Mr. HAY. That is right.

Mr. BUTLER. Then, I hope no point of order will be made against it.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. Certainly.

Mr. KAHN. As I understand the purpose of the amendment, it is to restore to the enlisted man the clothing allowance that was given him under General Order No. 119, which was dated June 25, 1910?

Mr. HAY. It is to restore to him the allowance which was taken away from him by the last order of the War Department, fixing the clothing allowance.

Mr. KAHN. Now, in discussing this matter the other day the gentleman from Virginia also stated that he would offer an amendment later on in the legislative features to also restore the clothing allowance.

Mr. HAY. No; I propose to offer it here now, because this is the place where it belongs. I said I would offer it later on in the bill. This is the amendment to which I referred. the bill.

Mr. KAHN. The gentleman replied to some figures which I submitted, in which he endeavored to show that the saving to the country would be much larger if the five-year enlistment plan was put into effect if the order of June 25, 1910, regarding the clothing allowance of soldiers would be restored.

Mr. HAY. Well, no; I did not do that. I said the basis upon which the calculation was made of a saving of $2,230,000 a year in favor of the five-year plan over the three-year plan was upon the basis of the clothing allowance which was in operation when the bill was introduced, and I said if the present clothing allowance as fixed by the War Department remained as it is now the saving would be much greater.

Mr. KAHN. As a matter of fact, if the clothing allowance were to be restored in accordance with the amendment now pending, the figures on page 44 of the committee's report would be entirely erroneous.

Mr. HAY. No; they would be exactly as they are, because they were made on that basis.

Mr. KAHN. Well, on page 44-Mr. HAY. What page?

Mr. KAHN. It is page 44 of the committee report, showing the saving made to the country in case the five-year enlistment plan is adopted. I have figures here which show that this amendment will increase the clothing allowance by $463,625.534 per annum, so that instead of showing a saving at all, if the five-year enlistment plan be adopted, there will be an absolute loss to the country; the expense will be materially increased, and the figures on page 44 are erroneous to the extent of $1,346,119.13. I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to insert the figures in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California submits a request for unanimous consent that the figures indicated by him may be inserted in the Record as a part of his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

CLOTHING ALLOWANCE FOR THE PHILIPPINE SCOUTS ANNUALLY.

The following are figures which show the clothing allowance of a Philippine scout, at the present time, under the three-year plan, based on General Order 67, War Department, May 25, 1911:

Clothing allowance based on 15 years of service. Initial allowance, first enlistment...

Clothing allowance based on 15 years of service.

Yearly allowance for 5,732 scouts, the authorized strength. 158, 891, 04

From the above it will be seen that the clothing allowance for the Philippine Scouts would be exactly the same under the five-year plan if General Order No. 119 of 1910 is put into effect as it is now under the three-year plan with general order 67, 1911, in effect.

From page 1 it will be seen that a change to the five-year plan and the putting into effect of the clothing order, General Order No. 119, June 25, 1910, which is the proposition of the chairman of the committee, instead of saving anything to the Government on clothing furnished to enlisted men will actually cost the Government $463,625,536 more per year than it does now. Counting this as an increased cost to the Government, which it would really be, and adding it to the $882,493.60, shown as a saving in the first two items in the table at the top of page 44, report of committee on Army appropriation bill. it will be seen that the figures in those two items alone are in error, or will be if the proposed amendment is put into effect, in the sum of $1,346,119.136.

The error in the two items referred to alone would make the sum total at the bottom of the table at the top of page 44, report of the committee on the Army appropriation bill, $884,647.184 instead of $2,230,766.32 as shown.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, in reply to what the gentleman

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, in reply to what the gentleman has said, I will state that this calculation was made on the 9th day of May, 1911, by the Quartermaster General of the Army, showing that if the 5-year enlistment was had, based upon the number of 76,912 men, that the saving on the clothing would be $859,107.04. The gentleman had some figures here the other day which were based, as I understand it, on the present allowance of clothing, and I desire to ask unanimous consent to file in the RECORD a memorandum with reference to the table which the gentleman put in the RECORD the other day, showing that he was entirely erroneous in his figures which he then gave the House. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia submits a request for unanimous consent that the figures indicated by him may be put in the Record as part of his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The figures are as follows:

Memorandum with reference to the table submitted by Mr. Kahn, con-cerning savings under five-year enlistment bill and printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 8, 1912, pages 1938 and 1939.

On page 505 of the hearings before the Military Committee, House of Representatives, volume 1, on the appropriation for support of the Army for the fiscal year 1913 the following figures are given as savings due to the five-year enlistment period:

Army transportation _____Clothing and equipage_____ $198, 272, 72 656, 884, 13

By reference to the hearings on H. R. 5949, a bill to fix the term of enlistment in the Army, etc., beginning May 9, 1911, before the Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives, it will be noted that these reductions were estimated as follows:

Army transportation Clothing and equipage $198, 272, 72 882, 493, 60

It will thus be seen that the comparison in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 8, 1912, pages 1938 and 1939, has been made with the original figures and not with the revised amounts.

It will also be noted that the figures in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 8, 1912, above referred to, are based upon every enlisted man in the Army reenlisting for a period of 15 years, which is an unreasonable assumption and not borne out by the records of the War Department.

The figures published in volume 1 of the hearings referred to above, so far as relates to clothing and equipage (the correctness of those under Army transportation not having been disputed), were arrived at in the following manner:

Mr. HAY. Now, I hope that the point of order will not be insisted upon and that these enlisted men, whether they be under the three-year or the five-year term, will have restored to them this allowance which they have had so long.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, may I have one minute?

Mr. HAY. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. I would like to have made plain that which I do not understand, and some of you gentlemen who are well informed can put me straight. I understand that this amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia, if adopted by this committee, will restore to the enlisted men a certain amount of money as allowance for clothing which was taken from them by reason of an order of the War Department. Certain men did reenlist, notwithstanding this order, as I understand.

Mr. HAY. That order was only issued on the 25th of last May. Of course some men may have reenlisted since, perhaps.

Mr. BUTLER. If the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia is accepted by this committee it will pay to those men who have reenlisted that which has been withheld from them by reason of this order?

Mr. KAHN. It will not.

Mr. BUTLER. What is the purpose of the amendment, then?

Not to pay any man who has retired from the service?

Mr. KAHN. As I understand it, it will give the man who reenlists after this should be adopted the allowance that prevailed in 1910.

Mr. HAY. It reestablishes the old clothing allowance. Mr. KAHN. But it does not give the man who reenlisted between May 25, 1911, and the present time any back allowance. Mr. BUTLER. It does not do that?

Mr. KAHN. That is what the gentleman from Pennsylvania was trying to find out, as I understand it.

Mr. BUTLER. This affects only the men who have reenlisted

Mr. KAHN. The man who will reenlist after this amendment is adopted, if it be adopted.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand it pretty well. I am satisfied other gentlemen understand it, too.

Mr. PRINCE. My objection is that here is an attempt at violation of the rules of the House to pass by one coordinate branch of the Government a law which takes the place of an administrative act of another coordinate branch of the Government. That is all there is to it.

Mr. HAY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes.

Mr. HAY. Did the Congress confer upon the President the right to fix clothing allowance?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes.

Mr. HAY. And has it not the same right to take it away from him?

Mr. PRINCE. It may have that right. Congress can do as it pleases. You have given that authority, and they have acted in good faith under the authority you have given them.

Mr. BUTLER. Was that not taking away something we intended to give them?

Mr. PRINCE. No, sir.
Mr. BUTLER. Did not we intend to give them the money if they would reenlist, and did we not take away from them that which we had agreed ourselves we would give them?

Mr. PRINCE. Wh Mr. McKELLAR. Why, no.
R. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRINCE. I yield. Mr. McKELLAR. Is not the whole question one of whether we shall encourage reenlistments or whether we shall discourage reenlistments? In other words, if we are going to encourage reenlistments, ought not this clothing allowance to be had in order to do so?

Mr. PRINCE. That question will come up later on in the a bonus at the end of three years' enlistment, of extra pay, and you give him an extra clothing allowance, is he not more likely to reenlist at the end of three years than at the end of five years, and then give him the extra pay and bonus for extra clothing? That is a question that comes up later. That is a question as to the merits. Here is a proposition that is clearly in violation of the rules of the House-professedly so. I have a right to make a point of order against it, and I have made the point of order. I have stated, in addition to that, that it is legislation by one coordinate branch of the Government to displace the administrative rules of another coordinate branch of the Government, and a good many of us listened with pleasure to the gentleman from Texas when he told how Presidents heretofore have viewed their functions as Chief Executive and their constitutional prerogatives. I insist upon the point of

Mr. MANN. Will my colleague yield? Mr. HAY. Will the gentleman from Illinois permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes.

Mr. HAY. Is there a possible parallel between this case, where Congress has conferred upon the President certain power, and a case where the power is conferred upon the President by the Constitution? Is there any parallel at all?

Mr. PRINCE. Are you not seeking to effect an administrative act made by full authority of the Chief Executive?

Mr. HAY. Not at all. I am simply seeking to have Congress do what Congress at one time did, but which in its wisdom it chose to confer on the President. Now, I am simply asking that Congress take back its full authority.

Mr. PRINCE. You have given by legislation full authority to the President to do a certain thing?

Mr. HAY. Yes.

Mr. PRINCE. He has acted on that authority, and now you propose to have a legislative act curative of his executive act? Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. PRINCE. I object.

Mr. MANN. Can my colleague or anyone else tell me how much the clothing allowance is?

Mr. HAY. The first year, exclusive of blankets, it is $69. blankets and some other articles were excluded it was $83.

Mr. MANN. That was under the old plan? Mr. HAY. Yes; that was under the old plan.

Mr. MANN. Is that for the reenlistment or for the first

Mr. HAY. For the first enlistment. It was also for the second enlistment. Since this order was issued they gave the blankets free. Has the gentleman from California the order

Mr. KAHN. I have not the order; but in addition to what the gentleman has stated, the enlisted man is allowed a semiannual allowance of $12.17%.

Mr. HAY. But that is not the initial allowance given to him on enlistment?

Mr. KAHN. No. The initial allowance is $69.89.

Mr. HAY. Yes; and it used to be $83. Now it is reduced to $33 on the second enlistment.

Mr. KAHN. But he gets, in addition to that, as I stated, for clothing, $12.17\frac{1}{2} semiannually.

I understand that; but we are talking about the Mr. HAY. initial allowance on enlistment.

Mr. KAHN. That is true; but the gentleman from Illinois, as I understood it, wanted to know what the clothing allowance was per annum.

Mr. HAY. I thought he meant what was allowed under this order.

Mr. KAHN. No; what was allowed per annum. Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago we had under discussion here the amount of retired pay which an enlisted man receives, and the question was raised at that time whether the enlisted man received any allowance for subsistence, clothing, or otherwise, in addition to his pay.

Mr. HAY. That was the enlisted man on the retired list.

Mr. MANN. Yes; and my distinguished friend from Virginia [Mr. Hay], to whom I pay a great tribute as a military expert, on this particular occasion fell down, and that old and established expert in the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SLAYDEN], also fell down. [Laughter.] Having no expert knowledge whatever in regard to the military service of the Government, I stated that it was my belief that a retired enlisted man received pay and allowances, and my distinguished friends on the other side of the aisle assured me that I did discussion. If a man enlists for three years, and you give him not know anything about it, and I acquiesced in that opinion until I obtained from my colleague [Mr. KAHN] a copy of the statutes upon the subject and the regulations. I now quote from the Military Laws of the United States, page 515:

When an enlisted man has served as such 30 years in the United States Army or Marine Corps, either as private or noncommissioned officer or both, he shall, by application to the President, be placed on the retired list hereby created with the rank held by him at the date of retirement; and he shall receive thereafter 75 per cent of the pay and allowances of the rank upon which he was retired.

Mr. HAY. I will acknowledge the corn. That is all right.

Mr. BUTLER. That ends the dispute, then. Mr. HAY. I would say to my friend from Illinois that I do not pretend to have all the knowledge that exists on this sub-ct. [Laughter.] Mr. MANN. But I understand that the gentleman from Virginia has as much knowledge on that subject as any other Member of the House, if not more; and I would include in that my colleague from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE] and the gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn] and some others of the experts of the Committee on Military Affairs. But once in a while even Homer nods.

The CHAIRMAN. In the opinion of the Chair the provision makes no retrenchment, but, on the contrary, makes an increase in the compensation of enlisted men under certain conditions. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE] makes the point of order against it and the point of order on that ground is sustained.

Mr. HAY. I move to amend the bill, on page 16, line 24, by striking out "eight" and inserting "six."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, line 24, page 16, by striking out the word "eight" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "six."

The amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

For extra pay to enlisted men of the line of the Army and to enlisted men of the Signal Corps employed in the Territory of Alaska on the Alaskan cable and telegraph system, for periods of not less than 10 days, at the rate of 35 cents per day, $32,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I should like to ask the gentleman whether this provision for extra pay in Alaska would be affected if the provision of the bill repealing the extra pay outside of the United States becomes effective.

Mr. HAY. No; it would not. This is for extra-duty pay, and has nothing to do with the pay for foreign service.

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman quite correct about that?

Mr. HAY. Yes. Section 3 of the bill, to which the gentleman refers, has reference to pay for foreign service.

Mr. MANN. That applies to Alaska? Mr. HAY. Yes; but this is for extra pay to enlisted men in the line of the Army who are employed in the Territory of Alaska on the cable and telegraph system there for periods of not less than 10 days, and has nothing to do with foreign-

Mr. MANN. I notice in the gentleman's very able report the statement in reference to the extra pay for service outside of continental United States. The statement, as I recall it, was that section 3 applied practically only to the Philippines.

Mr. HAY. It does practically; but it also applies to troops serving in Alaska, in Panama, and to all military attachés. Therefore I should have included that statement in the report. It applies to troops serving in Alaska, Panama-

Mr. MANN. Cuba?
Mr. HAY. No; not Cuba.
Mr. MANN. To Cuba, and to the military attachés.
Mr. HAY. It would apply to Cuba if we had any troops there, but we have no troops there.

Mr. MANN. We have four officers there. Mr. HAY. They are there as instructors under a provision in some one of the Army appropriation bills.

Mr. MANN. My recollection is that we have some officers

Mr. HAY. I think those officers are in the employ of the Cuban Government, and I think the act providing for sending them there also provided that we should not pay them anything while there

Mr. KAHN. I believe they are there as instructors.
Mr. HAY. This applies to Panama, where we have troops; to the Philippines, to Alaska, and to the military attaches at the various embassies.

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman able to give us information about the Alaska cable, as to how profitable it is? I ask that in connection with this item, and in connection with the message just received from the President, asking for the establishment of a like wireless system in the Philippines.

Mr. HAY. I can give the gentleman some information about Gen. Allen, the Chief of the Signal Corps, has charge of that branch. Mr. Chairman, this is a cut from last year; from $75,000.

Mr. MANN. No; last year this item was $36,000. Mr. HAY. This item—but I am talking about the military cable.

Mr. MANN. That is, the extension of the military cable.
Mr. HAY. Yes. I supposed the gentleman was talking about the receipts from the use of the military cable.

Mr. MANN. Yes. Mr. HAY. We cut the appropriation for that from $125,000 down to $50,000.

Mr. MANN. Not the expenses, but the extension of the cable. Mr. HAY. No; not the expenses. Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. KAHN. As I remember it, the evidence before the committee was that the service made a profit of about $200,000 per annum, which was turned into the General Treasury.

Mr. HAY. No; the evidence is that the receipts were about $200,000 a year; but that did not pay the expenses of the line. They charged 35 cents a word, and say that the receipts do not pay the expenses.

Mr. MANN. The commercial receipts.
Mr. HAY. Yes; they get no receipts from the Government.
Mr. MANN. I understand that; but the Government may receive the benefit. How much use does the Government make of this line?

Mr. HAY. Well, the Government uses it a good deal because there are several military posts up there-three, I think-and they use it in connection with those garrisons and other governmental activities in that part of the country. It never has paid anything above expenses.

Mr. MANN. Does not the gentleman include in the expense the extension of the cable and not merely the operation? My impression is that the cable does more than pay actual running expenses. Last year, of course, we appropriated $125,000 for extension, but that is not a part of the cost of operation.

Mr. HAY. No; but I asked him what revenue they got, re-ferring to this military cable, and he said that the receipts run about $200,000 a year; but that that did not pay the expenses of

Mr. MANN. I think when he referred to expenses he included the extension. My impression is that the cost of operation is more than made up by the receipts.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. I will.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman will, perhaps, remember that representations were made to us that the cable rates were too high. What is the gentleman's opinion about that?

Mr. HAY. I do not think they are too high.

Mr. ANTHONY. Does the gentleman think that it is within our province to regulate the commercial rates to be charged on that line?

Mr. HAY. I do not think it is. Now, Mr. Chairman, I will call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to the statement on page 537 of the hearings, giving the cost of the maintenance and operation of this cable. It is as follows:

Average per annum, fiscal years 1907-1911. MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION.

MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION.

Salaries of civilians on cableship Burnside and at different points on the system from appropriation Signal Service of the Army.

Cost of enlisted men employed on the system, including all additional pay, cost of clothing and rations, but not for transportation or medical attendance.

Pay of 6 officers.

Supplies and material from appropriation Signal Service of the Army. $21, 403. 30 201, 133. 45 19, 828. 00 Total _

The Clerk read as follows:

For six months' additional pay to the beneficiaries of officers and enlisted men who die while in active service from wounds or disease not the result of their own misconduct, $60,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to ask the chairman of the Military Committee what is the reason for the reduction of the item from $100,000 to $60,000. It is an item which no one can tell in advance what amount will be expended. It is an appropriation in the nature of insurance for the beneficiaries of soldiers dying abroad, that they shall receive some allowance. The fact that the money may not have been expended last year, or in any one year, is not a very good criterion.

Mr. HAY. My impression is that we gave the department all that was estimated for.

Mr. MANN. If so, I can make no complaint, although I think the department made a mistake. I want to say that while I sincerely hope that there will be no immediate occasion for the use of the Army abroad, I am very fearful that such an occasion may arise; and if it does, all appropriations of this sort ought to be amply sufficient to meet contingencies.

Mr. HAY. I agree with the gentleman from Illinois about that, and in such an event I would join with him in asking for an additional appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For amount required to make monthly payment to Mabel H. Lazear, widow of Jesse W. Lazear, late acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, as per act of Congress approved May 23, 1908, $1,500.

For amount required to make monthly payments of $100 to John R. Kissinger, late of Company D, One hundred and fifty-seventh Indiana Infantry Volunteers, also late of the Hospital Corps, United States

Infantry Volt Army, $1,200.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word that I may ask the chairman of the committee a question. Why reduce the allowance made? Who are these people?

Mr. HAY. They are the beneficiaries of people who gave their lives in the experiments with respect to yellow fever.

Mr. BUTLER. Were not those experiments made a long time

Yes. Mr. HAY.

Mr. BUTLER. Why is there any delay in making such payment?

Mr. HAY. Two of these cases have been in the bill for some years. The last case was provided for in an act passed last year.

Mr. BUTLER. Has the gentleman any objection to telling who would move to take such a provision out of the bill?

Mr. HAY. Nobody has done it that I know of. Mr. BUTLER. Why were they not paid earlier? Why

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania himself moves to strike out the word "dollars," and there would not be anything left of the item if that word went out.

Mr. BUTLER. I shall certainly withdraw that. That amendment of mine is only a joke. To me this is strange; I do not see why there should be any delay in the payment.

Mr. MANN. This is not delay. This is to carry out acts of Congress

Mr. BUTLER. These experiments were made years ago.

Mr. MANN. Yes; and these acts of Congress were passed years ago.

Mr. BUTLER. Then these are yearly payments?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I make haste to withdraw my amendment to strike out the last word.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT.

Purchase of subsistence supplies: For issue, as rations to troops, civil employees when entitled thereto, hospital matrons, nurses, applicants for enlistment while held under observation, general prisoners of war (including Indians held by the Army as prisoners, but for whose subsistence appropriation is not otherwise made). Indians employed with the Army, without pay, as guides and scouts, and military convicts at posts; for the subsistence of the masters, officers, crews, and employees of the vessels of the Army transport service; hot coffee for troops traveling when supplied with cooked or travel rations; meals for recruiting parties, and applicants for enlistment while held under observation; authorized issues of soap, candles, matches, toilet paper, salt, vinegar, flour, and towels; authorized issues of toilet articles, barbers', laundry, and taliors' materials, for use of military convicts confined at military posts without pay or allowances, and applicants for enlistment while held under observation; for issues of toilet kits to recruits upon their first enlistment; ice for issue to organizations of enlisted men at such places as the Secretary of War may determine; for sales to officers and enlisted men of the Army; coffee roasters and cooking apparatus in the field, and when traveling (except on transports), bake ovens and apparatus pertaining thereto; scales, weights, measures, utensils, tools, stationery, blank books and forms, office furniture, commissary chests and outfits, and field desks of commissaries: Provided, That the sum of $12,000 is authorized to be expended for supplying meals or furnishing commutation of rations to enlisted men of the Reguiar Army and the Organized Millita who may be competitors in the national rifle match: And provided further, That no competitor shall be entitled to commutation of rations to the cadets at the United States Military Academy in lieu of the regulation allowances of commutation in lieu of rations to the rations in lieu of the regular established ration for members of the Nurse Corps (female) while on duty in hospital, at 40 cents per ration, and for enlisted men, applicants for enlistment while held under observation, and military convicts sick therein, at the rate of 30 cents per ration (except that at the general hospital at Fort Bayard, N. Mex., 50 cents per ration, and at other general hospitals 40 cents per ration are authorized for enlisted patients therein), to be paid to the surgeon in charge; of compensation of civilians employed in the Subsistence Department; of extra pay to enlisted men employed on extra duty in the Subsistence Department for periods of not less than 10 days, at rates fixed by law; of extra-duty pay at rates to be fixed by the Secretary of War for mess stewards and cooks at recruit depots, who are to be graduates of the schools for bakers and cooks, and instructor cooks at the schools for bakers and cooks; for printing, advertising, commercial newspapers, and use of telephones; for temporary buildings, cellars, and other means of protecting subsistence supplies (when not provided by the Quartermaster's Department); for providing prizes to be established by the Secretary of War for enlisted men of the Army who graduate from the Army schools for bakers and cooks, the total amount of such prizes at the various schools not to exceed $900 per annum; for other necessary expenses incident to the purchase, testing, care, preservation, issue, sale, and accounting for subsistence supplies for the Army; in all, $8,869,273, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, and accounted for as "Subsistence of the Army," and for that purpose to constitute one fund.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendments,

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendments, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 24, line 5, strike out the word "eight" where it occurs the second time in the line and insert in lieu thereof the word "six."

Page 24, lines 5 and 6, strike out the word "sixty-nine" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five."

Mr. HAY. So that it will read $8,605,273. I make that amendment, Mr. Chairman, because it is computed by the Commissary General that it will take that much money to subsist five regiments of Cavalry. I make the amendment in order to conform to the amendment adopted by the House on yesterday.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman whether the bill carries the amount of the estimate for this branch of the service?

Mr. HAY. I think it does very nearly, if not altogether. estimates were $8,988,807, and the amount carried in the bill is $8,869,273. The cut was made by reason of the legislation heretofore carried in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

The Clerk read as follows:

QUARTERMASTEE'S DEPARTMENT.

Regular supplies, Quartermaster's Department: Regular supplies of the Quartermaster's Department, including their care and protection, consisting of stoves and heating apparatus required for heating offices, lospitals, barracks and quarters, and recruiting stations, and United States military prison; also ranges and stoves, and appliances for cooking and serving food at posts, and repair and maintenance of such heating and cooking appliances; for furnishing heat and light for the authorized allowance of quarters for officers and enlisted men, for contract surgeons and contract dental surgeons when stationed at and occupying public quarters at military posts, for officers of the National Guard attending service and garrison schools, and for recruits, guards, hospitals, storehouses, offices, the buildings erected at private cost in the operation of the act approved May 31, 1902; for sale to officers, and including also fuel and engine supplies required in the operation of modern batteries at established posts; for post bakeries; for ice machines and their maintenance where required for the health and comfort of the troops and for cold storage; for the construction, operation, and maintenance of laundries at military posts in the United States and its island possessions; for extra-duty pay of enlisted men and hire of employees; for the onessary furniture, textbooks, paper, and equipment for the post schools and libraries; for the tableware and mess furniture for kitchens and mess halls, each and all for the enlisted men, including recruits; of forage in kind for the horses, mules, and osen of the Quartermaster's Department at the several posts and stations and with the armies in the field, and for the horses, mules, and osen of Infantry and Scouts as may be mounted; for remounts and for the authorized number of officers horses, including bedding for the animals; for seeds and implements required for the traising of forage at remount depots, and for labor and and operation have been defrayed, shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the appropriation from which the cost of operation of such plant is paid, $7,731,773.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to know to what particular part the point of order is reserved.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman will be able to explain, possibly.

Mr. HAY. There is some new language in the bill. There are new authorizations in this item which, I think, probably may be subject to a point of order.

Mr. HAY. I do not think they are, but I shall be very glad to explain any of the new items

Mr. MANN. I am quite willing to discuss that question with He is trying to make an authorization for the gentleman. something that the comptroller says is not warranted by law, and I doubt whether he will be able to get the Chairman to hold that it is warranted by law.

Mr. HAY. The first new language is where provision is made for the extra-duty pay of enlisted men and the hire of employees. As I understand, the comptroller has decided that no extra-duty pay can be paid to enlisted men from any appropriation unless the item carrying that appropriation specifically provides for the payment of the extra-duty pay.

Mr. MANN, That item is satisfactory to me.

Mr. HAY. Hence the Quartermaster General has been paying this out of other ing this out of other appropriations-incidental expenses, for example-and he thinks that when the extra duty is done with reference to items carried under this appropriation the extraduty pay ought to come out of it. It does not increase the appropriation at all.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. What about the remounts'

Mr. HAY. The explanation of that is that under the comptroller's decision the Quartermaster's Department could not forage the animals which they buy, and all the forage that has been purchased for these young animals; that is, for these animals to be placed at the remount stations, and all expenditures of that kind, have been charged against the disbursing officers by whom the expenditures were made. I asked the Quartermaster General:

As a matter of fact, the purchase of these young animals is a saving?

He replied:

Yes, sir; we have decreased the appropriation for horses from $514,678 down to $300,000 under this system of remounts.

Mr. MANN. This "remounts," line 17, page 25, is for the purchase of animals, not forage?

Mr. HAY. For the purchase of forage and remounts, and the reason for that is the comptroller has decided that no purchases could be made of horses unless they were up to the standard fixed by the War Department for Cavalry horses.

Mr. MANN. That is under existing law.
Mr. HAY. That is under existing law.
Mr. HAY. Now, this includes a departure from the past theory of the War Department up to within a year or two ago, or a short time ago.

Mr. HAY. About three years ago remount stations were established for the purpose of permitting the department to buy young horses and train them for the Army Mr. MANN. Has this station in Virginia been established yet? Mr. HAY. It has, and also one in Montana and one in Oklahoma. Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman able to tell us from knowledge in reference to the remount station in Virginia? Mr. HAY. You mean how many horses are there?

Mr. MANN. Whether it has proved successful or not. Mr. HAY. I understand from the Quartermaster General it has proved successful and will be successful.

Mr. MANN. Is it to be the policy of the War Department, then, to endeavor to purchase entirely young horses and train them instead of purchasing mature animals?

Mr. HAY. It is the policy to buy 2½ and 3 year old animals and train them for the Army. Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman himself believe that Army officials could train these animals at less expense and more efficiently than the people who raise them?

Mr. HAY. That is what the Quartermaster General says, and if the gentleman will look at my report he will find-

I have looked at the gentleman's report.

Mr. MANN. I have looked at the gentleman Mr. HAY. The average price was $136.65. Mr. MANN. I could see very little difference Mr. MANN. I could see very little difference in the cost, according to the figures in the report. I notice that the gentleman said they were much higher, but when you examined into the actual figures there was very little difference. There is quite a little difference in the policy of the Government. We and on the other public domain of the United States?

have in this bill now authorizations to run laundries, ice machines, and everything else almost that you can think of in connection with the Army. I am afraid it would greatly shock my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. Murray], who has been called out of the Chamber, to know that the Army in its work goes way outside the employment of a stenographer. It seemed to shock him to think they could employ a stenographer in courts-martial, and now they are really engaged in all kinds of commercial enterprises which may or may not be profitable.

Mr. HAY. There are posts where they will either have to do it themselves or not have it at all, and I will say in regard to the remount stations which are established that that question is gone into very fully in the report of the Quartermaster General, and it is contended that where we buy the young horse and train him he will last six years longer in the Army than the matured horse, and that is one place the economy

Mr. MANN. And we have only been doing that for three

Mr. HAY. Oh, well, but they have been doing it in other armies of the world for many years.

Mr. MANN. Now, is the gentleman from Virginia so innocent and bland and childlike that he believes that a horse trained by the Government 2½ or 3½ years of age will last six years longer than a horse he has trained during that same period of age?

Mr. HAY. For use in the Army; yes.

Mr. MANN. That is the reason I suspect the whole thing when officers put forward statements that are unbelievable.

I must give these officers credit of knowing what Mr. HAY. they are talking about, and they make a special business of knowing about these matters. Now, I do not know personally whether it is the fact or not, but I think they are expert enough and have had experience enough to know what they are talking about.

Mr. MANN. I believe that the officers themselves believe what they are talking about, but it is contrary to the experience of mankind, and we all have had experience enough to know something about it, and to believe that because an Army officer trains a horse from the age of 2½ to 3½ years of age that that horse is going to last six years longer in the service than if some other competent person trains him is absurd on the face

But you must understand the matured horse is not trained for the Army by the person who raises it.

He is not trained for the Army at all. He is bought as a matured horse, 5 years old.

Mr. MANN. I understand perfectly well that the average horse is not trained at all.

Mr. HAY. Exactly.

Mr. MANN. Either in or out of the Army, while it is a colt. Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] is mistaken.

Mr. MANN. I have raised horses ever since I was that high

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. You never raised them right, then. Mr. MANN. They were sold at expensive prices, and that is the test. Having gone into the business with everything else, we now propose to raise our hay and other forage.

Mr. HAY. That is for the reason that at these remount stations there is a large amount of land upon which they can raise a certain amount of forage, and it was thought wise to give them the privilege of utilizing this land.

Mr. MANN. We bought this land in Virginia? Mr. HAY. Not only in Virginia.

Mr. HAY. Not only in Virginia.

Mr. MANN. We bought land in Virginia?

Mr. HAY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Did we buy enough on which to raise timothy hay, that we have no use for otherwise?

Mr. HAY. No; we did not do that. We have not land enough in Virginia or elsewhere on which to raise all the hay we want, nor do we propose to go into that business. But on the land it has the Government simply asks the privilege, or at least the department asks the privilege, of utilizing it to the extent that it will go. It is a matter of economy, I will say to the gentleman, if we should do it, to raise this little amount of hay. It will not amount to a great deal. Still it will be economy.

Mr. MANN. I do not know how much it will amount to. We have great areas of pasture land belonging to the Government of the United States. We lease those lands for the grazing of cattle, sheep, horses, and so forth.

Mr. HAY. We do not lease the land.
Mr. MANN. Now it is proposed to go into the business of tising hay. Why should we not do it on the forest reserves raising hay.

Mr. HAY. But that is not the question. The gentleman is going off on something else.

Mr. MANN. I think it is a very pertinent question. Mr. HAY, There is a service detachment provided by law Mr. HAY. There is a service detachment provided by law which is stationed at each one of these remount stations, and they can very easily do this work in connection with their duties with respect to the horses. It is thought it would be economical and wise to do it. We are not engaging in agriculture in the sense of competing with the agricultural people of the country in any way. It is just simply utilizing what we have. That is all.

Mr. MANN. Well, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Virginia persuades me, as I think he has been persuaded by the department, and we both bow with deference—

Mr. PRINCE. To their superior knowledge.

Mr. MANN. Not their superior knowledge. They may have it, but I doubt it. I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, on page 27, line 4, by striking out the word "seven" and inserting the word "four" and striking out the word "thirty-one" and inserting the word "thirty-six," so that it will read "$7,456,773." I offer that amendment in order to reduce the supplies by reason of the amendment adopted yesterday as to the five regiments of Cavalry.

Mr. MANN. What is the estimate on this item? Mr. HAY. The estimate on this item was $7,900,000. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 4, strike out the word "seven," and insert in lieu thereof the word "four." Strike out the word "thirty-one" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty-six," in the same line.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 3, after the word "paid," insert: "Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the installation of an electric-lighting plant at Fort Niagara."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer that amendment in accordance with the letter of the Secretary of War, stating that Fort Niagara should be abandoned.

I notice in the hearings, in the evidence submitted by the Quartermaster General, that he had set aside $20,000 of this appropriation, to be expended for the purpose of installing an electric-lighting plant at Fort Niagara. If that post is to be abandoned, that sum will not be needed. There is no reason why If that post is to be we should spend that amount of money at a post that we are not going to use. That is my reason for offering the amend-

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would ask the gentleman if this amendment would properly come in at the end of line 5?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman offered it aright. Mr. HAY. How have I got it, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. In line 3, after the word "paid," between that and the appropriation.

Mr. HAY. I think that is all right. I did not cut the appro-

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 27, line 3, after the word "paid," insert: "Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the installation of an electric-lighting plant at Fort Niagara."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

Mr. Chairman, this particular appropriation is one that I think the attention of the committee should be directed to. Here is a lump sum of $7,000,000, in round figures. Included in this appropriation of $7,000,000 for "Regular supplies" are 32 different items. If any member of the committee feels concerned enough and will turn to page 36 of the hearings had before the Committee on Military Affairs—
Mr. KAHN. Which volume?
Mr. HELM. Volume 1, I presume—the large one.
Mr. KAHN. There are three volumes of the hearings.

Mr. HELM. Volume 1, page 36, of the hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs. There you will observe how this lump sum of $7,000,000 is divided or apportioned among these several items that are included under the appropriation for "Regular supplies." I will read the items and amounts:

What I have read shows how this sum of $7,000,000 is handled by the Quartermaster General.

Now, if I am not correct in the statement that I am going to make I would like to be corrected. Under existing law, when the bill that we are now considering becomes a law, the apportionment which the Quartermaster General is required to make for each separate item above mentioned can, with the consent of the Secretary of War, transfer any one of these sums that have been apportioned—any one of these 32 different sums for each item—from any one item to the other. I would like to have some one say whether or not I am correct in that statement.

Mr. KAHN. I did not catch the gentleman's question. The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. HELM. I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to continue for 10 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky submits a request for unanimous consent to continue for 10 minutes further. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELM. If the gentleman from California will give me his attention, I will say that the Quartermaster General takes this sum of $7,000,000, in round figures, and divides it up, and did so, as indicated on page 36 and in the estimate, into 32 separate accounts. I stated that he can transfer any sum of money from any one of these impersonal accounts to another with the consent of the Secretary of War. Is that correct?

Mr. KAHN. That is true.

Mr. HELM. The criticism that I have to make of this method of appropriating is this, that Congress does not know what sum of money or what portion of the $7,000,000 may be used by the Quartermaster General for any particular item. will take, for instance, this question of seed.

For seed and implements required for the raising of forage at remount stations, and for labor and expenses incident thereto.

I take it that as soon as this appropriation bill passes, the Quartermaster General will apportion a certain part of this $7,000,000 to that impersonal account. It is an unthinkable thing, I admit, but under this method of appropriation in this lump sum, I ask the gentleman from California could not the Quartermaster General apportion $1,000,000 or $5,000,000 of this $7,000,000 for that purpose, if he could get the consent of the Secretary of War?

Mr. KAHN. I think he could, if it became necessary to do so.

Mr. HELM. If it became necessary

Yes. Now, I should like to explain that. Mr. KAHN.

Mr. HELM. We will take the second item-stoves. So, out of this lump sum of $7,000,000 the Quartermaster General, with the consent of the Secretary of War, can take $1,000,000 and buy stoves with it. He can take any amount out of the $7,000,000 for any of the items mentioned. Not that he will do it, but that he can do it; that he is permitted to do it.

Mr. KAHN. He is permitted to do it.

Mr. HELM. He is permitted to do it. Take, for example, the item of stationery in 1912. There is an expenditure of $110,000 for stationery, which I understand to mean pens, paper,

Mr. KAHN. I was going to ask the gentleman if he thought anybody would want to swim in a million dollars' worth of ink?

HELM. think a man could swim very easily in $110,000 worth of ink, the amount estimated, and take a bath very easily in it. He could go in over his head, even though he was over 6 feet tall. The thought I have, which I want to bring to the attention of the Committee of the Whole, is that the Committee on Military Affairs, instead of appropriating $7,000,000 and leaving it to the Quartermaster General, with the consent of the Secretary of War, to divide up into these impersonal accounts and shift and transfer from one item to the other, in view of the statement of the Quartermaster General before the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department that they have finally reached a point where they can say with some degree of accuracy and certainty what these expenses amount to annually, why would it not be more satisfactory to Congress, instead of appropriating $7,000,000, to say that for care and protection they shall have $125,000, for stoves $6,600, and so on down the line? I understand that the Quartermaster General is opposed to my plan, for the reason that it will require just that many more appropriations and an additional force of clerks to handle these appropriations; but I do not believe his position is tenable. In a recent message of the President of the United States he stated that there were 400,000 men employed in the executive branches of this Government, Surely that is a sufficient army of employees to manage any additional work that the change would necessitate. This is not a sufficient reason why there should be a lump appropriation. can see how convenient it is for the War Department to handle 1 appropriation instead of 32 or 33, but if I am not badly mistaken it can be done as easily as a banker can handle 33 accounts of 33 different depositors. Unless I am altogether afield on this proposition, a banker can handle 33 accounts as cheaply as he can bandle 1.

Mr. KAHN. Does the gentleman want an answer to that?
Mr. HELM. If a banker only wants one depositor, I would say my argument is bad; but if a banker wants to do business with many depositors, and is willing to handle their separate accounts, then there is no reason why these appropriations can not be handled separately.

The reason why these accounts are included in Mr. KAHN. this lump sum is this: The Quartermaster General divides the lump-sum appropriation into these smaller items; and it sometimes happens that an unusual condition occurs wherein he needs $3,000 or $4,000 more for a particular item than he himself had provided for.

Mr. HELM. If the gentleman will allow me right there. To obviate that difficulty, it seems to me that it would be an easy matter to have something in the nature of a reserve fund, a limited fund on which he could draw. My idea is that if you limit the specific appropriations, hold them down, it would obvious these chieftons. For instance, obviate these objections. For instance, there are Members serving on the floor who know something about the cost of cookstoves; there are Members who ought to know something about the cost of heating ranges, the cost of forage, and the cost of typewriters, the cost of stationery-every single item appropriated for in this lump sum. It not unfrequently happens that in discussions on this floor features are brought out that there is some man engaged in a particular line of business who can shed a flood of light on

I am very much of the opinion, which almost amounts to a conviction, that while it would lengthen the appropriation bill to some extent, in a very short time, by specific appropriations, it would be possible to cut this appropriation down. As I stated a day or so ago on the floor, it is the difference between a state-ment rendered for a sum total and an itemized account. Congress ought to know where these sums of money are going.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HELM. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. I agree with what the gentleman says about the great evils of lump-sum appropriations covering many items. I do not know why these appropriations could not be made much more specific and much more in detail than they are. lump-sum appropriation, in my judgment, often affords the greatest opportunity for lax administration and for extravagance. The time of the gentleman from Ken-The CHAIRMAN.

tucky has expired.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky have five minutes more.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia, the chairman of the committee, how much longer he intends to run this evening?

Mr. HAY. I had intended to stop as soon as the gentleman from Kentucky closed after reading one more paragraph, which is only four lines.

Very well; I do not object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky have five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, sanctioning and fully agreeing with the statement of the gentleman from Wisconsin, I want to instance what I consider one of the most glaring examples of the evils of this lump-sum appropriation; that is, in regard to barracks and quarters. While the appropriation in this bill is much smaller than it has been heretofore, it has frequently amounted to between ten and twenty million dollars for barracks and quarters at mobile army and Coast Artillery posts. Under a lump-sum appropriation for barracks and quarters the Quartermaster General can take any portion of that lump sum and spend it wherever he sees proper, with the consent of the Secretary of War.

Of course, when the bill is made up they come before the Committee on Military Affairs and certain specific propositions are outlined, but from my investigation I have seen these sums that have been asked for for specific projects not used as was outlined to the committee when the bill was made up, but used for an entirely different purpose and at a different place. As an illustration, I have in my mind a fort that has been converted from a log fort into a $5,000,000 proposition.

Now, the responsibility rests here. It is up to this House to decide. When you ask an officer of the department why this thing is done he comes back at you and says, "Congress authorized it; you conferred the authority; you stood for it, and we have used the money.'

Now, that has resulted in building up these unnecessary posts that have been specified in response to the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Bulkley]. I want to say that there is being carried in this very bill you are going to pass $5,500,000 that the Secretary of War says need not be spent, except for the mobile army posts that the Chief of Staff states are an absolute injury to the Army. That is under these lump-sum appropriations for these posts that are slated to be

If they are cut out I want to see the proposition passed up fairly and squarely to Congress, and see if this Congress has the courage to act. While the authority of the Secretary of War is sufficient to do it on his own initiative, it is here, and I say it stands this House in hand to courageously meet that proposition. As I say, here is $5,500,000 that the Secretary of War says is in here needlessly.

Mr. ANTHONY. What appropriation is the gentleman speaking of?

Mr. HELM. I am now referring to barracks and quarters.

I have linked these two lump-sum appropriations together in order to make as good an object lesson as I possibly can to show what I believe to be one of the errors, to put it mildly, in the methods of handling lump-sum appropriations.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HELM. Certainly.

Mr. COOPER. I think the gentleman stated the evil of this lump-sum appropriation quite concisely when he told of itemestimates coming in for this project so much, another project so much, another project so much, and still others, each so much, and all together aggregating a large amount—the lump-sum appropriation is for the aggregate amount-

Mr. HELM. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. But when the money comes to be expended it frequently happens that little attention is paid to some of these itemized estimates and that the money is used for some-thing else, in the discretion of a Government official.

Mr. KAHN. Oh, I think the gentleman is mistaken.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has again expired.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of appropriating in a lump sum is to enable the chief of the bureau to so segregate the amount as to enable him to use a certain amount for each one of the commodities that he is to purchase under the lumpsum appropriation.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KAHN. One moment, please. If you were to appropriate for each amount separately and the amount should fall forty or fifty dollars short during the year, you would have to come to Congress every time with a deficiency appropriation bill. In addition to that, it is cheaper, in my judgment, to appropriate the entire amount in a lump sum. So far as the information of Members is concerned, you can invariably get information from the hearings before the committee. The information from the hearings before the committee. gentleman from Kentucky himself read to the House a few moments ago from the hearings before the committee on the present bill, and he shows that for stoves there is an estimate of $6,000. If there is anybody in the House who is interested in the matter, who wants to know how much is being expended for stoves, all he need to do is to go to the committee and get a copy of the hearings and then he can find out.

Mr. HELM. Go to the committee?

Mr. KAHN. Yes

Mr. HELM. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. KAHN. Yes.

Mr. HELM. How many Members outside of the Committee on Military Affairs does the gentleman suppose know of that estimate?

The gentleman has referred to Members of the Mr. KAHN. House who might be interested in the matter. If any Member of the House is sufficiently interested, I want to point out to my friend that it is an easy matter for him to get the informa-

Mr. HELM. If these items were in this bill and they were brought to the attention of the House as the bill is read section by section, would it not bring out this proposition more fully and in a way to be better understood by the Members? Here is a lump appropriation for stoves. There is not a man in the House, outside of the members of the Committee on Military There is not a man in the Affairs, who knows how much of these $7,000,000 is used for the purchase of stoves.

Mr. KAHN. The gentleman from Kentucky knows, because he was sufficiently interested to take the trouble to get a copy of the hearings to find out. The great danger of specific appropriations to which the gentleman has referred is this: Take an item, for instance, like forage, which is a very important item, and for which $3,473,113 is estimated out of the lump sum. That estimate is based upon the cost of forage during the past year or two.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. KAHN. Just one moment. If in the meantime forage should go up in price and it should cost a great deal more to buy hay or oats or any of those food articles for animals, the appropriation that the House might make would be entirely inadequate.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, in a moment. If the price of forage were to go up beyond the expectations of the officials of the department, and we had made a specific appropriation for forage, they would come in here asking for a deficiency appropriation. That would be absolutely certain, and in order to avoid that kind of thing it is deemed advisable to lump the appropriation in one sum and allow the department itself to apportion the money among the various items that the chief of the department has to purchase.

Mr. HELM. Will the gentleman permit?

Mr. KAHN. Yes; I will yield to the gentleman.
Mr. HELM. Is there any absolute necessity of including heat, light, and fuel under the appropriation of regular supplies? There is no reason why these particular items which require larger latitude than the other items under regular supplies should be included under regular supplies. There is nothing kindred; there is no unity in them that can not be divorced from the other items carried under the head of regular sup-

Mr. KAHN. The gentleman is entirely mistaken. It is the duty of the Quartermaster General to furnish to officers and men a certain quantity of fuel, a certain quantity of light,

Mr. HELM. Does not the Quartermaster General control the appropriation for transportation also?

Mr. KAHN. True; but this specific item is for the regular supplies. Now, transportation is not a regular supply.

Mr. HELM. About as regular as any other.

Mr. KAHN. And there are other things that are of an entirely different class from these regular supplies.

Mr. HELM. Simply made so by custom or sanction of the committee.

Mr. KAHN. It has been the custom for many years, and the experience of many years of administration, that it is cheaper and much more satisfactory to the Government to estimate in that way and to appropriate in that way. It is a saving to the Government.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a suggestion?

Mr. KAHN. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. The distinguished gentleman from Kentucky is the chairman of a legislative committee having jurisdiction over the subject

Mr. HELM. Oh, no; we have no legislative power at all;

I wish we had.

Mr. MANN. Oh, he has legislative power.

Mr. HELM. The only thing we can do is to report and recommend.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is mistaken in his power. I am glad to get that information.

Mr. HELM.

Mr. MANN. He is studying the subject now. Let him prepare the proper bill on the subject, have it referred to his committee, report it back to the House, and take it up for consideration. That is the logical way of doing it.

Mr. HELM. I am satisfied as soon as such a bill is introduced the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs will make a point as to the reference of the bill.

Mr. MANN. Well, if the gentleman draws the bill correctly the point will not be any good.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again ex-

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to cut off anybody, but it is pretty late, and I would like to move to rise now. move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 18956) making appropriations for the Army, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn. The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, February 12, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in regard to his being credited with the value of beer stamps charged to him stolen June 7, 1899, and recommending the enactment of a law for his relief (H. Doc. No. 531); to the Committee on Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting estimate of deficiencies in appropriations to complete the service of the War Department for the fiscal year 1912 (H. Doc. No. 529); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting supplemental estimate of an appropriation for salaries, office of Judge Advocate General, United States Army, for fiscal year ending June 30, 1912 (H. Doc. No. 530); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Postmaster General submitting estimate of appropriation for the postal service for the fiscal rear ending June 30, 1913, for labor-saving devices in the Chicago (Ill.) post office (H. Doc. No. 532); to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads and ordered to be printed.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19750) granting an increase of pension to William H. Merritt, and the same was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LEVER: A bill (H. R. 19857) for the improvement of grazing on the public lands of the United States, and to regulate the same, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands

Also, a bill (H. R. 19858) to regulate and develop the use of water power on the public lands, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. HOLLAND: A bill (H. R. 19859) to promote the efficiency of the Life-Saving Service; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WARBURTON: A bill (H. R. 19860) to establish a fish-cultural station on Quiniault River or Lake in the State of Washington; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: A bill (H. R. 19862) to define the boundaries of Government lots abutting on Mud Lake and Thief Lake, Marshall County, Minn.; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. FERRIS: A bill (H. R. 19863) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to subdivide and extend the deferred payments of settlers in the Kiowa-Comanche and Apache ceded lands in Oklahoma; to the Committee on Indian Affairs. By Mr. CARLIN: A bill (H. R. 19864) for the relief of the police and firemen's pension funds, District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SMITH of New York: A bill (H. R. 19865) to establish a life-saving station at Niagara Falls, N. Y.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GARNER: A bill (H. R. 19866) to amend section 108 of the Judicial Code of the United States, approved March 3, 1911, by creating the Corpus Christi division in the southern district of Texas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. NEELEY: A bill (H. R. 19867) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the immigration of aliens into the United States," approved February 20, 1907, and the amendment to said act approved March 26, 1910; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: A bill (H. R. 19868) providing for the acquisition of a site and the erection of an immigration exposition building at the city of St. Louis, Mo.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky (by request of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia): A bill (H. R. 19869) to authorize the condemnation of land for highway and park purposes along the Anacostia River in the District of Columbia in connection with the reclamation and development of the Anacostia River and Flats from the Anacostia Bridge to the District line; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDERSON of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 19870) granting a pension to Angeline W. Kelley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19871) granting a pension to Serepta Crumrine; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19872) granting a pension to Ellen J. Workman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19873) granting a pension to Ella Fitzsimmons; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19874) granting a pension to Emma Holland; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19875) granting a pension to Elizabeth Boetticher; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19876) granting an increase of pension to John L. Nebergall; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions,

Also, a bill (H. R. 19877) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Clark; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19878) granting an increase of pension to Anthony Wink; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19879) granting an increase of pension to Barton O'Neal; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19880) granting an increase of pension to Volney H. Doe; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19881) granting an increase of pension to Joseph N. Rodgers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19882) granting an increase of pension to David L. Stouffer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 19883) granting an increase of pension to William S. Straley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: A bill (H. R. 19884) granting a pension to Ann Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

Monday, February 12, 1912.

The Senate met at 2 o'clock p. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our heavenly Father, who hast called us for freedom, as we come before Thee help us to lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us that so Thy word of truth may have free course in us. Bound though we be with the chain of our sins, yet speak but the word, O Lord, and we shall be set free and be admitted to the glorious liberty of the sons of God. So may we and this people joyfully submit ourselves to Thee, whom to know is life and whom to serve is perfect freedom. In the name which is above every name hear our prayer. Amen.

JACOB H. GALLINGER, a Senator from the State of New Hampshire, took the chair as President pro tempore under the previous order of the Senate.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday last was read and approved.

By Mr. GRONNA:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 75) to provide for the appointment of a commission to investigate the operations of cooperative land-mortgage banks and cooperative rural credit unions in other countries; to the Committee on Finance.

THE PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE.

Mr. REED. I introduce a joint resolution. I ask that it may lie on the table for the present,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Missouri desire to have the joint resolution read?

Mr. REED. I desire to have it read and printed in the RECORD.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 76) to amend paragraph 5 of Article II of the Constitution was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein). That the following be proposed as an amendment to the fifth paragraph of Article II of the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States, viz:

Add, at the end of paragraph 5, Article II, the following words: "Neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall have been President two terms, or one term and a part of another, or a part of two terms," so that said paragraph as amended shall read:

"No person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President, neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of 35 years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall have been President two terms, or one term and a part of another, or a part of two terms."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be printed and lie on the table.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. NELSON submitted an amendment, proposing to amend section 4875 of the Revised Statutes relative to the compensation of superintendents of national cemeteries, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia submitted an amendment, proposing to increase the number of mechanics at $1,200 each from three to four; and also for four mechanics at $1,200, in the office of the Secretary, Department of Agriculture, intended to be proposed by him to the agricultural appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Mr. POMERENE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 214), which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved. That the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce be, and they are hereby, authorized to have printed for their use 5,000 coples, or as many thereof as they may deem necessary, of the hearings, under Senate resolution No. 98, entitled "Control of corporations, persons, and firms engaged in interstate commerce."

EULOGIES ON THE LATE SENATOR ELKINS.

Mr. CHILTON. I submit a resolution, and ask that it be

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 216), as follows: Resolved. That the remarks of Dr. Radcliffe on the life of the late Senator Elkins be printed as a part of his eulogies.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, I desire to explain the necessity for the passage of the resolution. I learned to-day that, in order to have these remarks printed as a part of the eulogies, it will be necessary to have a resolution adopted by the Senate. The remarks are very short, and I hope there will be no objection to the present consideration of the resolution authorizing the printing.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

H. R. 18954. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said

H. R. 18955. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war; and

H. R. 19721. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War and to widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors.

'MUNICIPAL BRIDGE AT ST. LOUIS, MO.

Mr. REED. I ask unanimous consent, if now in order, that the Senate take up House bill 16693. It is simply a bill extending the time for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill named by him, which the Secretary will read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the bill (H. R. 16693) to extend the time for the completion of the municipal bridge at St. Louis, Mo.; and, there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to extend for three years the time for the completion of the bridge authorized by an act entitled "An act to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River," approved June 25, 1906.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ST. FRANCIS RIVER BRIDGE AT HODGES FERRY, MO.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask the Senate to grant unanimous consent to consider at this time House bill 16677. It is a bill to authorize Butler and Stoddard Counties to construct a bridge across a small stream in those counties. The stream is not navigable in fact, but is so in law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, which will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the bill (H. R. 16677) to authorize Butler and Stoddard Counties, in Missouri, to construct a bridge across the St. Francis River at Hodges Ferry, Mo., and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WHITE RIVER BRIDGE AT BRANSON, MO.

Mr. KENYON obtained the floor.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. KENYON. I do. Mr. SMOOT. I was simply going to suggest that the Senate proceed with the calendar under Rule VIII, if the Senator has nothing special to request.

Mr. REED. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not observe that the Senator from Missouri had addressed the Chair.

Mr. REED. If Senators will indulge me for a moment until can get these little bills out of the way I shall be gratified. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 17232) to authorize Taney County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the White River at Branson, Mo. It is purely a local bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I shall not object to the consideration of this bill, but I give notice that at its conclusion I shall ask that the calendar, under Rule VIII, be taken up.

The bill was reported to Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAM AND TUNNEL ON BIG BEND OF JAMES RIVER, MISSOURI.

Mr. REED. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14484) to amend an act approved February 24, 1911, authorizing J. W. Vance and others to construct and maintain a dam and tunnel on the Big Bend of the James River, in Stone County, Mo., to create electric power.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill named by him, which will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ROOT. I think I should like to examine this bill a little more closely before it is passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the bill goes over.

CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW COAL AND ASPHALT LANDS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14055) to provide for the sale of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, and for other purposes

The Secretary proceeded to read the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, is this a Senate bill that went to the House or an original House bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is an amendment of the House of Representatives to an amendment of the Senate to a House bill.

Mr. HEYBURN. Then I ask that it go to the calendar. Mr. GAMBLE. Mr. President, if there is objection, I presume it will necessarily go to conference or to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. HEYBURN. It comes here as an amendment in the nature of a substitute. Some of us who took an active part in this matter have not had time to see it, and we want to read it. I just caught a phrase as the amendment was being read that I do not think has been brought to the attention of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. GAMBLE. I will say to the Senator from Idaho that a bill substantially in the same form passed the House and was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate. was very carefully considered by that committee, and a substitute with certain modifications recommended by the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate was passed by the Senate and went over to the House. I think there were a couple of amendments made to the Senate substitute by the House of Repre-

Mr. HEYBURN. I ask the Senator if the provision in the House amendment in regard to grazing lands is the same as the provision of the Senate bill? It did not strike me as being the same.

Mr. OWEN. It is the same.

Mr. GAMBLE. The senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen] is entirely familiar with it.

Mr. OWEN. There is no change in that respect. Six hundred and forty acres is the maximum of grazing land allowed to be sold. That was the provision of the Senate bill.

Mr. HEYBURN. It was not the quantity; it was the manner of selection within a very short time—the classification. I have no personal interest in this matter, only I propose to be always on the alert against building up a grazing-land trust in this country. That is all.

Mr. OWEN. As I have said, 640 acres is the maximum of grazing land to be sold under this bill. It is the same as the bill heretofore passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest to the Senator from Idaho that the amendment could not well go to the calendar, but should either be agreed to, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, or disagreed to and a conference committee appointed.

Mr. HEYBURN. Let it go over for a day.
Mr. BACON. I suggest further that it might lie on the table.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes; it might lie on the table.

Mr. GAMBLE. I suggest also, as has already been suggested by the Senator from Georgia, that it might lie on the table.

Mr. HEYBURN. I will agree to anything that will give us an opportunity to examine it.

Mr. OWEN. I have no objection to the amendment lying on the table.

Mr. WARREN. I want to ask if the entire amendment will be printed in the RECORD?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes.
Mr. WARREN. I thought the Secretary had not finished reading, and the entire amendment ought to go in the Record.

Mr. OWEN. The matter is already set forth in the report of the House, No. 317. It was printed last Saturday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the entire amendment will be printed in the RECORD, and will, for the present, lie on the table.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was to strike out all of the amendment of the Senate after the word "That," on page 1, line 1, and in lieu thereof to insert:

Sec. 5. That the sales herein provided for shall be at public auction under rules and regulations and upon terms to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, except that no payment shall be deferred longer than two years after the sale is made. All agricultural lands shall be sold in tracts not to exceed 160 acres, and deeds shall not be issued to any one person for more than 160 acres of agricultural land, grazing lands in tracts not to exceed 640 acres, and lands especially valuable by reason of proximity to towns or cities may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be sold in lots or tracts containing not less than 1 acre each. All deferred payments shall bear interest at 5 per cent per annum, and if default be made in any payment when due all rights of the purchaser thereunder shall, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, cease and the lands shall be taken possession of by him for the benefit of the two nations, and the money paid as the purchase price of such lands shall be forfeited to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Wribes of Indians.

Sec 6. That if the mining trustees of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations and the three appraisers herein provided for, or a majority of the said trustees and appraisers, shall find that such tract or tracts can not be profitably mined for coal or asphalt and can be more advantageously disposed of by selling the surface and the coal and asphalt together, such tract or tracts may be sold in that manner, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, and patents issued for said lands as provided by existing laws: Provided, That this section shall not apply to land now leased for the purpose of mining coal or asphalt within the segregated and reserved area herein described.

Sec. 7. That when full purchase price for any property sold herein is paid, the chief executives of the two tribes shall execute and deliver, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to each purchaser an appropriate patent or instrument of conveyance conveying to the purchaser the property so sold, and all conveyances made under this net shall convey the fee in the land with reservation to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes of Indians of the coal and asphalt in such land, and shall have the right at any time before final payment is due to pay the full purchase price on the surface of said coal or asphalt land, while accurate the reservations, restrictions, covenants, and conditions thereif contained shall have the right at any time before final

Mr. OWEN subsequently said: I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14055) to provide for the sale of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, and for other purposes.

Mr. HEYBURN. I desire to withdraw my objection to concurrence in the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma moves that the Senate concur in the amendment made by the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

SENATOR FROM WISCONSIN.

Mr. HEYBURN. From the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to which was referred Senate resolution No. 136, providing for the investigation of charges relative to the election of ISAAC STEPHENSON as Senator from Wisconsin, I submit a report (No. 349). I will say that it is a majority report. There will be one name to add to the majority members. resolution is reported with the testimony.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Idaho presents a privileged report. What is the request of the Senator in connection with it?

Mr. HEYBURN. That it go to the calendar, I suppose, Mr. CULLOM. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator desire to have it printed?

Mr. HEYBURN. Yes; and I desire to have the report read.

We could not be better employed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read. The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

CHARGES RELATIVE TO THE ELECTION OF ISAAC STEPHENSON.

The Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom was referred certain charges preferred by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin against Isaac Stephenson, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, with instructions to report to the Senate whether in the election of said Isaac Stephenson as a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin there were used or employed corrupt methods or practices, have had the same under consideration and submit the following report:

On August 15, 1911, the Senate adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections or any subcommittee thereof be authorized and directed to investigate certain charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin against Isaac Stephenson, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, and report to the Senate whether in the election of said Isaac Stephenson as a Senator of the United States from the said State of Wisconsin there were used or employed corrupt methods or practices; that said committee or subcommittee be authorized to sit during the recess of the Senate, to hold its session at such place or places as it shall deem most convenient for the purposes of the investigation, to employ stenographers, to send for persons and papers, and to administer oaths; and that the expenses of the inquiry shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the committee or chairman of the subcommittee."

Pursuant to the authority given by said resolution the Committee on Privileges and Elections appointed a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Herburn (chairman), Mr. Sutherland, Mr. Bradley, Mr. Paynter, and Mr. Pombrene, with full powers to investigate said charges.

On January 20, 1912, the subcommittee reported to the full committee as follows:

IN THE MATTER OF THE INVESTIGATION OF THE CHARGES AGAINST ISAAC STEPHENSON, A SENATOR OF THE UNITED STATES FROM THE STATE OF

WISCONSIN. honorable the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the United States Senate:

United States Senate:
Your subcommittee proceeded pursuant to the terms of its appointment to investigate the above-mentioned charges, and in pursuance of said duty met in the city of Washington and, having organized, proceeded to adopt a plan for holding such investigation.

It was agreed by your subcommittee that the investigation should commence on October 2, 1911, at the city of Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin

It was agreed by your subcommittee that the investigation should commence on October 2, 1911, at the city of Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin.

Accordingly your subcommittee met at the city of Milwaukee on the above-mentioned date, all parties in interest being present. Hon. Charles E. Littlefield, W. E. Black, and H. A. J. Upham, Esqs., appeared as counsel for Senator STEPHENSON.

The governor and the attorney general of the State of Wisconsin were notified by the chairman of your subcommittee of the time and place of the hearing and were invited to indicate to the committee whether or not they desired to be present and participate in any manner in such investigation. The governor of Wisconsin, speaking for the State, informed your subcommittee that no one on behalf of the State would appear at such investigation.

Your subcommittee then proceeded to the examination of witnesses and documents, which examination occupied 25 days, during which time 124 witnesses were sworn, 35 affidavits received, and 2,100 pages of printed testimony taken, which testimony, affidavits, and exhibits are herewith submitted as a part of the report of your subcommittee.

Your subcommittee has given the fullest consideration to all the testimony introduced and has considered its weight and effect under the rules pertaining to the investigation and is of the opinion that the charges preferred against Senator Isaac Stephenson as a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin was not procured by corrupt methods or practices in said election of Isaac Stephenson.

Mr. Heyburn, chairman of the subcommittee, submitted a statement of his views in support of the conclusions reached, and on the request of members of the committee further consideration of the matter was postponed to February 3, 1912, on which date a further postponement was had to February 10, 1912, with the understanding that any member of the committee might file a statement of his views to accompany the final report of the committee, and that a vote might be taken on that date

On February 10, 1912, the Committee on Privileges and Elections met in regular session and received a statement of the views of Mr. Pomerrex and Mr. Sutthernand in support of the report of the subcommittee, and proceeded to the consideration of the report of the subcommittee, together with the views expressed by the members thereof upon a full record of the testimony and proceedings in the case. On motion it was ordered that the report of the subcommittee be adopted and that said subcommittee be discharged.

Whereupon it was ordered that Mr. Heyburn be instructed to report the action of the committee to the Senate, together with a transcript of testimony and of all the proceedings of the subcommittee, including the address of Hon. Charles E. Littlefield before the whole committee, and also the individual views presented by members of the committee, and also the individual views presented by members of the committee, and also the individual views presented by members of the committee, wherefore your committee, having given full consideration to the law and to the testimony and to all of the facts and circumstances brought to its notice, does find that the charges preferred against ISAAC STEPHENSON, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, are not sustained, and your committee further finds that the election of said ISAAC STEPHENSON as a Senator of the United States was not procured by corrupt methods or practices.

VIEWS OF MR. HEYBURN IN SUPPORT OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE,

The subcommittee having reported to the whole committee in favor of ISAAC STEPHENSON, I desire to submit herewith the reasons which actuated me in arriving at that conclusion:

JURISDICTION.

On August 15, 1911, the United States Senate adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections or any subcommittee thereof be authorized and directed to investigate certain charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin against Isaac Stephenson, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, and report to the Scnate whether in the election of said Isaac Stephenson as a Senator of the United States from the said State of Wisconsin there were used or employed corrupt methods or practices; that said committee or subcommittee be authorized to sit during the recess of the Senate, to hold its session at such place or places as it shall deem most convenient for the purposes of the investigation, to employ stenographers, to send for persons and papers, and to administer oaths; and that the expenses of the inquiry shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the committee or chairman of the subcommittee."

Pursuant to the authority given by said resolution the Committee on Privileges and Elections appointed a subcommittee consisting of Senators Heeburn, Suttierland, Bradley, Paynter, and Pomerrene, with full powers "to investigate said charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin relating to the election of Isaac Stephenson, a Senator from the State of Wisconsin."

MEETING OF SUBCOMMITTEE.

In performance of said duty the subcommittee met at Milwaukee, Wis., on October 2, 1911, in the Federal Building, a quorum of said subcommittee being present.

The chairman announced that the subcommittee would recognize a duly authorized representative of the State of Wisconsin, in view of the fact that the State had submitted through its governor to the Senate of the United States the charges to be investigated. No one appearing, the chairman then instructed the secretary of the subcommittee to communicate with the governor and attorney general of the State and advise them that the committee was in session in Milwaukee for the purpose of investigating the charges aforesaid, and to inquire whether or not the State desired to be represented at the hearing, and, pursuant to such instruction, the secretary sent the following communication to the governor:

MILWAUKEE, WIS., October 2, 1911.

Hon. Francis E. McGovern,

Governor of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.:

A subcommittee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the United States Senate, duly appointed, with instructions to investigate the election of Isaac Stephenson as a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, as recommended by the Legislature of Wisconsin as provided in joint resolution 58 of said legislature, has entered upon the investigation in the Federal Building, in the city of Milwaukee. As the State appears to be unrepresented by counsel, you are requested to advise the committee whether or not it is the desire of the State to be represented by counsel before this committee; and, if so, designate in writing such person to represent the State.

W. B. Heyburn, Chairman.

To which communication the governor replied as follows:

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Madison, Wis., October 3, 1911.

To which communication the governor replied as follows:

EXECUTIVE CHAINBER,

Madison, Wis., October 3, 1911.

Hon. W. B. Heybern,

Chairman Subcommittee of the United States Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, Milwankee, Wis.

My Dear Sir: In reply to your telegram of yesterday, in which you request me to advise your committee "whether or not it is the desire of the State to be represented by counsel" before your subcommittee, permit me to say that I find there is very serious doubt that I have any power to act in the matter. Joint resolution 58, to which you refer, confers no such authority. It simply requests the United States Senate "to investigate the manner, means, and methods by and through which ISAAC Steptenson secured his election to the United States Senate," recommends to the district attorney of Dane County that prosecutions be commenced against all persons shown to have committed perjury in the senatorial inquiry in this city, and suggests that prosecutions be commenced against all persons shown to have committed perjury in the senatorial inquiry in this city, and suggests that prosecutions be commenced against all persons shown to have committed perjury in the senatorial inquiry in the state for such violations of the corrupt practices or bribery statutes as the evidence may justify.

In the absence of any specific authority conferred by this joint resolution, the only other possible source is chapter 268 of the laws of Wisconsin for the year 1911. Careful consideration of this statute leaves me in doubt as to whether it confers power upon me to employ at the expense of the State counsel to attend the Investigation your subcommittee is now conducting. Nor can I see that much good is likely to come from such employment. Your invitation comes so Jate as practically to preclude the possibility of anyone whom I might select rendering any real service to your committee or materially assisting in the investigation now in progress. That investigation has already begun. The transactions to be

The chairman inquired whether or not counsel were present to represent Mr. Stephenson. Whereupon Hon. Charles E. Littlefield, Mr. W. E. Black, and Mr. H. A. J. Upham appeared on his behalf and were recognized by the committee.

The joint resolution and specific charges certified to the United States Senate by the governor of Wisconsin were then read. (Transcript, pp. 4 and 5.)

Before entering upon the examination of witnesses by the committee Hon. Charles E. Littlefield, of counsel for Mr. STEPHENSON, requested leave to make a statement, which leave was granted. (Transcript, pp. 6-23.)

leave to make a statement, which leave was granted. (Transcript, pp. 6-23.)

The subcommittee then proceeded to the examination of witnesses and documents, which examination occupied 25 days, during which time 116 witnesses were sworn and examined, 36 affidavits received, and upward of 2,100 pages of printed testimony taken, which testimony, affidavits, and exhibits are herewith offered as a part of the report of the subcommittee.

The subcommittee was directed to investigate certain charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin against Mr. Stephenson. These charges were set forth in the communication of the governor of Wisconsin, and the papers accompanying the same, certified to the United States Senate, among which was the joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Wisconsin on June 26, 1911, which is found on page 2 of the transcript.

The charges referred to in the resolution under which the subcommittee acted are as follows:

SPECIFIC CHARGES.

1. That ISAAC STEPHENSON, of Marinette, Wis., now United States Senator and a candidate for reflection, did, as such candidate for reflection, gift on the control of the c edge and consent and under the direction of said Isaac Stephenson, his agents, and employees, contrary to chapter 492, Laws of 1905.

14. That in further pursuance of the purposes and design above set forth said Isaac Stephenson, by and through his agents, did, in addition to paying certain sums as above set forth, offer and agree to pay to electors of this State, prior to said primary, a premium or bonus to those who in his employ carried their respective precincts in such primary for said Isaac Stephenson as such candidate.

15. That said Isaac Stephenson, if claiming an election by virtue of receiving a plurality of votes at such primary, then said Isaac Stephenson has violated chapter 502 of the Laws of 1905 by failing and neglecting to file his expense account as provided by said chapter.

16. Charging generally the primary nomination or election of said Isaac Stephenson was obtained by the use of large sums of money corruptly and illegally, by the violation of sections 4542b, 4543b, and 4478b of the statutes relating to illegal voting, bribery, and corruption, and other laws above set forth relating to elections and primary elections.

and other laws above set forth relating to elections and primary elections.

John J. Blaine, a State senator, who made the said 16 specific charges, which constituted the basis of the legislative investigation, was examined in detail as to each of such charges and falled to sustain any of them, either by his own testimony or by reference to the testimony of others. The charges were made on information and belief according to his own testimony. He seemed upon examination to have no information upon which any belief as to their trith could be based.

An inspection of his testimony (Transcript, p. 592, etc.) will fully justify the conclusion of the subcommittee that such charges were not sustained.

These charges were investigated by two legislative committees; first. by a joint committee which submitted a report which was not finally acted upon; second, by a committee of three members of the State senate, only one member of which was a member of the legislature when the report of that committee was made.

The time within which the joint legislative committee might take testimony and report was limited by the legislature to expire on the 13th day of April, 1909, and on that day the said committee met and adopted a resolution that each member make an outline of his proposed report and submit it at a later day for discussion before the committee.

Said committee then adjourned subject to the call of the chairman of the senate or assembly committee.

Said committee then adjourned subject to the call of the chairman of the senate or assembly committee.

This ended the work of the joint investigating committee.

The State senate, acting independently of the assembly and in view of the expiration of the time within which the joint committee might finish its work, adopted a resolution on March 25, 1900, authorizing the president of the senate to appoint a committee consisting of three members to complete the investigation that had been carried on by the joint committee and to "further fully, fairly, and thoroughly investigate the campaign and election of ISAAC STEPHENSON as a United States Senator, and the campaign and election of members of the legislature so far as their election in any way pertains to or affects the election of ISAAC STEPHENSON as a United States Senator.

SPECIFIC QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR CONSIDERATION.

In the order of their importance the duties of the subcommittee may be classified as follows:

First. To investigate the proceedings by the legislature, including the action of Senator Stephenson and those representing him, during the session of the legislature.

Second. To investigate the campaign and election of members of the legislature so far as their election in any way pertains to or affects the election of Isaac Stephenson as a United States Senator.

ELECTION OF A SENATOR BY THE LEGISLATURE.

The law providing for the election of Senators by the legislature is as follows, being chapter 1, title 2, of the Revised Statutes of the United States:

"SEC. 14. The legislature of each State which is chosen next preceding the expiration of the time for which any Senator was elected to represent such State in Congress shall, on the second Tuesday after the meeting and organizing thereof, proceed to elect a Senator in Congress.

"SEC. 15. Such election shall be conducted in the following manner: Each house shall openly, by a viva voce vote of each member present, name one person for Senator in Congress from such State, and the name of the person so voted for who receives a majority of the whole number of votes cast in each house shall be entered on the journal of that house by the clerk or secretary thereof; or if either house fails to give such majority to any person on that day, the fact shall be entered on the journal. At 12 o'clock m. of the day following that on which proceedings are required to take place as aforesaid the members of the two houses shall convene in joint assembly, and the journal of each house shall then be read, and if the same person has received a majority of all the votes in each house he shall be declared duly elected Senator. But if the same person has not received a majority of the votes in each house, or if either house has falled to take proceedings as required by this section, the joint assembly shall then proceed to choose, by a viva voce vote of each member present, a person for Senator, and the person who receives a majority of all the votes of the joint assembly, a majority of all the members elected to both houses being present and voting, shall be declared duly elected. If no person receives such majority on the first day, the joint assembly shall meet at 12 o'clock m. of each succeeding day during the session of the legislature and shall take at least one vote until a Senator is elec

The senate organized on January 13, 1909, and on January 14 Senator Husting introduced joint resolution 3, providing for the investigation of the primary election, which was laid over until the next session, and the senate adjourned until Tuesday, January 19, at 10 o'clock a. m.

On Tuesday, January 26, the senate considered joint resolution 3, and a substitute was introduced by Senator Blaine. (Senate Journal, pp. 72-77.) This substitute contains the specific charges.

On January 26, 1909, a vote was taken on the election of United States Senator, each house voting separately.

In the senate the total number of votes cast was 17. Mr. Stephenson received 12 votes, Brown 4, Rummel 1. (Senate Journal, pp. 78-79.)

On the same day, January 26, upon the call of the roll in the assembly, the total number of votes cast for Senator was 84. Mr. Stephenson received 60, Neal Brown 16, Jacob Rummel 3, S. A. Cook 2, H. A. Cooper 1, J. H. Stout 1, and John J. Esch 1, which result was announced by the speaker. (Assembly Journal, pp. 74-75.)

On Wednesday, January 27, resolutions were introduced in the senate, among others joint resolution 8, being an arraignment of the United States Senate and a demand for its abolition, introduced by Senator Gaylord. (Senate Journal, p. 86.) It was referred to the committee on Federal relations. This is mentioned in passing only to show the temper of the legislature on the day of the first joint ballot for United States Senator.

At 12 c/clock noon of January 27, 1909, the two houses met in joint States Senator.

At 12 o'clock noon of January 27, 1909, the two houses met in joint convention. The lieutenant governor, presiding, stated:

"Gentlemen of the joint convention, you are assembled here for the purpose of expressing your choice for United States Senator. In order to comply with the Federal law the clerk of the senate and the clerk of the assembly will read from the journal of each house, respectively, the proceedings of the preceding day with reference to the election of united States Senator."

The senate journal (p. 94) and the assemble in the senate in

The senate journal (p. 94) and the assembly journal (p. 80) records as follows:

"The chief clerk of the senate read the journal of the senate of January 26, 1909, and the chief clerk of the assembly read the journal of the assembly of January 26, 1909.

"The president then said: 'The clerk will call the roll. As your names are called you will arise from your seats and announce the candidate of your choice.'"

Senator Hudnall said:

Senator Hudnall said:

"I rise to protest against any other proceedings being taken in the joint assembly at this time except the announcement of the presiding officer that Hon. Isaac Stephensons is elected to the United States Senate for the term commencing March 4, 1909. I do that for the reason that it appears from the journal of the senate that the total number of votes cast for persons were 17, of which Isaac Stephenson received 12, Neal Brown 4, Jacob Rummel 1, and the journal of the assembly shows that of the members who voted for persons there were 60 for Stephenson, 10 for Brown, and 3 for Jacob Rummel; and it further appears from both journals of senate and assembly that Isaac Stephenson received a majority of all the votes cast in each house.

"It devolves then upon the president of this joint assembly to declare Isaac Stephenson duly elected to the United States Senate, and then the duty devolves upon the president of the senate and speaker of the assembly to certify his election to the United States Senate. Any other proceeding is out of order and nugatory."

Senator Hudnall stated that he made this statement as a protest and as a point of order. The president held the point of order not well taken and held that Senator Hudnall was out of order in his protest.

The presiding officer then directed the nomination of conditates.

and as a point of order. The president held the point of order not well taken and held that Senator Hudnall was out of order in his protest.

The presiding officer then directed the nomination of candidates, and the joint assembly proceeded to vote for a United States Senator. There were 131 votes cast, of which Isaac Stephenson received 65, and the presiding officer announced that "it appears from the records of the convention that no person has received a majority of the votes cast for United States Senator." Whereupon the joint convention dissolved.

On no other day until the 4th of March, 1909, did anyone receive a majority of the votes cast in joint assembly. On that day (the 4th of March) upon the twenty-fourth ballot of the joint assembly there were 123 votes cast, of which Isaac Stephenson received 63. Whereupon the chairman of the joint assembly announced the election of Isaac Stephenson, and the joint assembly announced the election of Isaac Stephenson, and the joint assembly announced the protest against such proceedings upon the grounds that, Mr. Stephenson having received a majority of the votes cast in each house voting separately, no other or further duty remained for the joint assembly than that of reading the journals of the two houses of the proceedings in each relative to the election of a United States Senator on the day previous. These journals were read and the fact disclosed that in each house Mr. Stephenson had received a majority of all the votes cast. It remained only that "he shall be declared duly elected Senator." The statute does not prescribe who shall declare the person receiving a majority of the votes in each house elected Senator, nor in what form such declaration shall be made.

From the reading of the law it would seem that when the two houses voting separately each gave Mr. Stephenson a clear majority and haying met in joint session on the day following the vote in the separate houses, the journal of the proceedings of the two houses voting separately being read in joint co separate votes.

The failure to make a specific deciaration of his election was not vital. The action of the governor and secretary of state in deferring the certificate of his election or in misstating the time of his election could not affect that election.

could not affect that election.

If we are correct in assuming that the election of ISAAC STEPHENSON was accomplished when the record of the two houses was read and announced in the joint assembly, then the failure or delay of the executive officers to perform their duty could in no way defeat his election as of the date of the meeting of the first joint assembly.

ACTS OF BRIBERY CHARGED.

Charges of bribery in the interest of Mr. Stephenson's election had been freely made both before the subcommittee and before the legislative investigating committee. Not one of these charges have been sustained by the testimony.

The word "bribery" has been applied to many acts that do not constitute bribery.

The procurement of advertising space or editorial comment in the newspapers upon the payment of money by or on behalf of a candidate for office can not under any construction of law be held to be bribery.

The procurement of the services of men to speak either publicly or personally on behalf of any candidate, or to canvass the electorate on his behalf, is not bribery under any reasonable construction of the law. If the testimony were true that money was ofered to Assemblyman Leuch to go upon the floor and vote for the purpose of effecting a quorum, it would not constitute bribery. It was the duty of such member to go upon the floor and vote.

The charge of an attempt to bribe H. R. Pestalozzi utterly failed of proof before your committee.

The charge of unlawful dealings with the Milwaukee Free Press utterly failed of proof. It was conceded that Mr. Stephenson owned a controlling interest in that paper, and he was certainly entitled to have its support and to sustain his interest in it.

The charge of an attempt to bribe H. R. Pestaloxi utterly failed of proof before your committee allians with the Milwauke Free Press Technique of unlawful callings with the Milwauke Free Press Technique of unlawful and accontrolling interest in that paper, and he was certainly entitled to have its support and to sustain his interest in the control of the control o

CHARGES OF CORRUPTION IN THE LEGISLATURE.

On page 2271 of the report of the State senate investigating committee an attempt is made to summarize the corruption alleged to exist in connection with the election by the legislature, and the first objection is that Mr. Stephenson was elected by the legislature by a majority of 3 votes while the charges of corruption against him were being investigated by the legislature. This charge seems hardly worthy of serious consideration. It was admitted that he was elected by the legislature, and there is no law or rule that would invalidate the election because of the pendency of these charges. That was a matter for the members of the legislature to consider in determining whether or not they would vote for him.

ABSENT MEMBERS ON MARCH 4.

the members of the legislature to consider in determining whether or not they would vote for him.

ABSENT MEMBERS ON MARCH 4.

The next charge is that the election of Mr. Stephenson was made possible by three members, who, it is claimed, at the instigation of Mr. Stephenson's managers and agents, absented themselves from the joint assembly when it became known that their presence would prevent the election of Mr. Stephenson, and it was charged that the absence of these three members had been procured by frandulent or wrongful means by or on behalf of Mr. Stephenson. It was the only charge of corruption in connection with the election of Mr. Stephenson by the legislature worthy of consideration.

The result of the vote on March 4 consequent upon the absence of these three members is made plain in the testimony of Richard J. White (p. 1324) and by an examination of the journal of Farrell or Towne?

There has been much sensational testimony introduced before the subcommittee, which was heard largely because such testimony had been received by the legislative investigating committee for the purpose of showing bribery or corrupt methods in connection with the absence of Ramsey, Farrell, and Towne. It was not shown that any money had been traced to either of these men from any source in connection with the matter; but it was claimed that a fund had been raised to be used for corrupt purposes, and that, on the assumption that such fund had been raised, it must at least in part have been used to bring about the absence of these three members of the legislature.

It was claimed that Senator Stephenson had entered into an arrangement with Edward Hines and R. J. Shields for using money for corrupt purposes, to be furnished by Mr. Stephenson, and much hearsay testimony was introduced for the purpose of establishing such fact. There can be no question but what the effort to establish any such charge utterly failed. There was no evidence upon which any reasonable conclusion that such corruption fund had been either raised or used could be based.

The charge as to a meeting between the three absentees or some of them and Mr. Regan and Mr. Puelicher at the Plankington House in Milwaukee centered about the testimony taken before the legislative investigating committee of a witness, Frank T. Wagner, who was utterly discredited both at the legislative investigation and by testimony introduced before the subcommittee. It was shown that he is now under sentence in the penitentiary for perjury for having testified to seeing these men in the Plankington Hotel and hearing a conversation upon which the charge that they had entered into a corrupt bargain at that time rested. All the testimony in regard to such a transaction fell to the ground, and was so manifestly without foundation as to call for no consideration except its dismissal.

CHARGE OF BRIBERY OF OTHER MEMBERS.

CHARGE OF BRIBERY OF OTHER MEMBERS.

There seems to have been some remark on the part of Mr. Damochowski and Mr. Lyons as to the tender of money being made them in connection with this election, but on the witness stand they both stated that whatever statements they made in that regard were made in jest and that there was no foundation in truth for them.

Some sensational testimony was introduced in regard to statements made by Mr. R. J. Shields as to having received money or handled money in the interest of Mr. Stephenson in a corrupt manner in dealing with members of the legislature, and members of the senate legislative investigating committee had gone to the office of a certain attorney in Chicago and there met Mr. Wirt Cook, of Duluth, Minn., who recited to them some hearsay statements as to conversations and acts, which were fully investigated by the subcommittee and found to be entirely without foundation.

We may therefore safely dismiss the charges of corruption in connection with the action of the legislature in electing Mr. Stephenson, whether such election is held to have been on January 26 or on March 4, 1909.

GENERAL CAMPAIGN AND ELECTION.

GENERAL CAMPAIGN AND ELECTION.

It appears that Mr. Stephenson contributed $2,000 to the Republican State central committee. Against this contribution no legitimate objection can be urged. It was not in violation of any law nor for other than general election purposes.

It was also shown by testimony that Mr. Stephenson before the primary gave money to C. C. Wellensgard, Levi H. Bancroft, and Thomas Reynolds, who were candidates for the legislature. These men testified that they used the money in the interest of Mr. Stephenson at the direct primaries. If we eliminate Mr. Stephenson from the direct primaries, the contributions which he made to these candidates for nomination and election to the legislature would be in violation of no law. It appears from the testimony that they were at the time voluntary and ardent supporters of Mr. Stephenson regardless of any money which they may have received or which may have been placed in their hands by him for any purpose.

There is not sufficient evidence upon which to base a charge of bribery or any other charge that would affect the validity of the election of Mr. Stephenson in either of these cases.

DIRECT PRIMARY.

DIRECT PRIMARY.

bribery or any other charge that would affect the validity of the election of Mr. Stephenson in either of these cases.

DIRECT PRIMARY.

The subcommittee, in determining the scope of the investigation, was confronted with the question as to how far, if at all, the charges affecting the candidacy of ISAAC Stephenson before the direct primary should be considered.

The State legislative committee had directed its attention principally to the direct primary and the conduct of the candidates therein.

It was doubtless competent for the legislature to provide for direct primaries for the nomination of candidates for the legislature and to piace legal restrictions about them to secure the integrity of their elections, but, as herein elsewhere more fully stated, it is not competent for the legislature to provide for the nomination of candidates for the United States Senate at direct primaries.

The status of Mr. Stephenson at such primaries is not comparable to that of candidates for the legislature or for any State office.

The language of the resolution under which the subcommittee acted directs it to report whether "in the election of ISAAC STEPHENSON there were used or employed corrupt methods or practices," and the language of the last paragraph of section 1 of the resolution, bringing the matter to the attention of the United States Senate, strictly construed, refers only to the election.

When we speak of the election of a United States Senator under existing constitutional and legislative provisions we contemplate only the election by the legislature of the State. There is as yet no recognition to be given extra-legislative proceedings in the nature of what is termed "direct primaries," no such method of selection being recognized by any law of the United States.

The subcommittee has, however, brought to the attention of the Senate in the record of its proceedings all the facts obtainable relating to the conduct of the primary. Should it be the judgment of the Senate that such facts are irrelevant, then the c law, in the absence of power to so legislate, could not affect the validity of an election by the legislature made pursuant to national law; this must be obvious from the fact that the legislature was not in duty bound to elect anyone or consider anyone a candidate for election because of the action of the direct primary. It might have ignored such action altogether, and its having done so would not in any way affect the validity of its action.

There is no law of the United States recognizing such a thing as "candidacy" for the United States Senate, and no legal status is given to the frame of mind constituting an intention on the part of a man or his friends that he become a candidate before the legislature.

The question also arises as to the period when a man can be charged with responsibility for his acts so as to affect the validity of his subsequent election by the legislature.

It frequently occurs that none of the men who are avowed candidates are chosen. The matter rests solely with the legislature, and under existing laws one legislature can not dictate the rule governing a subsequent legislature in the manner of its procedure relative to matters resting entirely within its discretion.

It would be entirely within the power of a legislature, charged with the responsibility of electing a United States Senator, before proceeding to elect a Senator, to repeal any legislation enacted by a previous legislature which placed a limit upon or directed its action.

It seems from this consideration of the question we must conclude that the direct-primary proceedings can not be held to affect the validity of an election by the legislature.

FAILURE TO FILE PROPER EXPENSE ACCOUNT.

The fifteenth specific charge is based upon the failure or neglect of ISAAC STEPHENSON to make and file an expense account under the laws of Wisconsin. This requirement is under section 270 of the election laws, which provides that every person who shall be a candidate before any convention or at any primary or election to fill an office for which a nomination paper or certificate of nomination may be filed, shall, within 30 days after the election held to fill such office, make out and file with the officer empowered by law to issue the certificate of election to such office or place a statement in writing, etc., and that any person failing to comply with this section shall be punished by fine of not less than $25 or more than $500. This being a penal statute, the validity of an election could not be affected by the failure to comply with it, unusual and mysterious circumstances. These letters are not out of the ordinary political correspondence of campaign managers and citizens whose votes, influence, or services are solicited in behalf of a candidate. The letters transmitting and acknowledging the receipt of money have been considered separately from those giving information in regard to political conditions and instructions in regard to how political work shall be done. There is nothing in the letters transmitting or acknowledging the receipt of money that would seem to add anything to the information given by witnesses in explaining these expenditures so far as they could explain them. The subcommittee has not thought it necessary to print this correspondence, which is in evidence and might be held to constitute a part of the record of the investigation. In our judgment, it would add nothing in the way of assistance to the committee in ascertaining the facts necessary and proper to be considered in connection with the investigation.

Were a candidate for a State office in Wisconsin to conduct a campaign in the manner in which the campaign of Mr. Stephenson, and of other men who sought election to the United States Senate, were conducted, it would be very difficult to justify such conduct under the laws of the State.

The joint senatorial primary investigating committee in its report (submitted Mar. 18, 1910, but never acted upon), after reviewing the testimony, says:

"Your committee believes that the Republican senatorial candidates and their managers did not deliberately plan to violate the law, but in their desire to win these candidates, particularly Stephenson, Cook, and Hatton, conducted their campaigns with the idea of getting results, and men were hired and money spent, and State officials and employees and members of the legislature were used without much regard to propriety. All of the Republican candidates probably spent all they could afford and the amount spent by the different candidates was probably limited more by their ability t

The testimony clearly shows that the candidates felt compelled to spend more money than they wanted to spend. The pressure upon them from those who were undertaking to manage their campaigns seems to have been very great and persistent, but I can find nothing in the testimony nor in the circumstances or conditions surrounding the senatorial contest which resulted in the election of Mr. Stephenson that in my judgment would justify the committee in recommending that the seat be vacated, or that he be declared not legally elected to the United States Senate; and therefore I recommend that the Senate find that the charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin against ISAAC STEPHENSON, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, are not true, and that ISAAC STEPHENSON be acquitted of such charges.

VIEWS OF MR. POMERENE AND MR. SUTHERLAND.

VIEWS OF MR. POMERENE AND MR. SUTHERLAND.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections authorized and directed its subcommittee "to investigate certain charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin against ISAAC STEPHENSON, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, and to report whether 'there was used or employed corrupt methods or practices' in his election."

Without intending to specifically enumerate the charges made or to review in extenso the evidence in support or in refutation thereof, it will be sufficient for our purpose to classify the charges and evidence pertaining thereto, as follows:

First, those connected with the proceedings of the legislature affecting the election; and,

Second, those growing out of the primary election.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

First, those connected with the proceedings of the legislature affecting the election; and,

Second, those growing out of the primary election.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATUE.

Each house, pursuant to the Federal statute, convened for the election of the United States Senator on January 26, 1909. The senate consisted of 33 members and the assembly of 100 members. Thirty-three members of the senate were present, and, before balloting, passed a resolution providing that "any senator who does not wish to vote for a candidate may vote by answering 'present.'" The roll was called, and 17 senators voted for candidates, 12 of whom voted for ISAAC STEPHENSON. The 16 other senators simply voted "present." In other words, a quorum, in the language of the statute, voted for "one person for Senator in Congress." and of this quorum ISAAC STEPHENSON received a majority. While the vote "present" of the 16 senators was in accordance with the resolution passed, we do not believe it could either add to or detract from the requirements of the statute. All members, no doubt, should have voted for "some person," but 16 voted "present." which was equivalent to a blank vote.

In the language of the majority of the committee in Ransom v. Abbott, "Senate Election Cases." page 400. "The vote must be for a person, not a blank—in fact, not for a myth, but for a person."

Without intending to review the authorities it is clearly established that "votes knowingly cast for a candidate who can not possibly exercise the function of the office if elected are thrown away." (State ex rel. Bancroft v. Frear, 144 Wis., 87.) And, if this be true, it must follow that a mere vote of "present" is nothing more than a vote for "no person," or, in other words, a "blank," and should not, therefore, be counted in determining whether Senator Stephenson received a majority of the quorum of those who voted for "one person for Senator," and thereby complied with the letter and spirit of the statute.

For other authorities bearing upon this proposition see Sawye the duty of the presiding officer to declare Senator Stephenson duly elected. This was purely a ministerial duty, and the mere fact that he failed to perform that duty could not, under any legal principle, undo that which was legally done in the separate and joint sessions, and, except for this failure of the presiding officer, was completely done. Instead of declaring the result, over the protest of Senator Hudnall, a ballot was ordered and taken on that day and on each succeeding day until and including the 4th day of March, 1909. Prior to March 4 no one in any of the sessions received a majority of the votes cast. On March 4 there were 123 votes cast, of which ISAAC STEPHENSON received 63, and he was then declared duly elected.

CHARGES OF CORRUPTION IN ACTION OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Charges of corruption were made to the effect that—

(a) Assemblyman Leuch was offered money to go upon the floor and vote for the purpose of effecting a quorum;

(b) That Assemblyman Joseph Damochowski had been offered $1,500 for his vote; and

(c) That Assemblymen Farrel, Ramsey, and Towne absented themselves from the joint session of the joint assembly on March 4 through corrupt influences corrupt influence

CHARGE AS TO ASSEMBLYMAN LEUCH.

He testified that David H. Davies, on March 1, 1909, said: "I have authority to tell you that you can have anything you want if you will stay in the joint convention to-day and vote." Mr. Davies denied having any such conversation and swore that he neither authorized nor was in a position to pay or promise Mr. Leuch anything whatsoever. Whether this conversation occurred or not, there is no evidence connecting it directly with Senator Stephenson, or even indirectly through any authorized agent.

CHARGE AS TO ASSEMBLYMAN DAMOCHOWSKI.

There was testimony to the effect that Joseph A. Damochowski had said to several parties that he had been offered $1,500 for his vote in the assembly. He admitted that he had so stated upon several occasions, but in explanation thereof said that any statements he made to that effect were in jest, and that no such offer was in fact made. Outside of these admitted statements, there was no evidence either that any bribe had been offered to or received by him, and no evidence tending to connect Senator Stephenson or his managers with this alleged attempt to bribe.

MEMBERS ABSENTING THEMSELVES ON MARCH A

On March 4, 123 members of the joint assembly were present and voting. Sixty-three members, being a majority of those voting, cast their ballots for Mr. Strephenson, and, having for the first time received a majority of those voting in the joint session, he was duly declared elected.

We think it is fair to say that the record shows that an effort was made by some of the friends of Mr. Stephenson either to pair some of those who were opposed to Stephenson's election with those who were absent and favorable to his election, or to secure the absence of those who were opposed to his election, for the purpose of reducing the number who might be in the joint session and voting, and thereby enable those who were favorable to his election to have a majority of the votes cast.

those who were favorable to his election to have a majority of the votes cast.

Richard J. White, a friend of Mr. Stephenson, succeeded in pairing Ramsey, a Democrat who was opposed to Stephenson's election, with Mr. Fenelon, who was a supporter of Mr. Stephenson and because of sickness was not able to attend the session.

Towne, a Democrat, left the chamber just before the voting began and was taken into a cloakroom by C. C. Wayland, one of Mr. Stephenson's lieutenants, and there held in conversation while the balloting was going on, and we have no doubt that Wayland purposely detained him, and Towne, to say the least, was indifferent about the situation.

Farrell left the assembly room before the roll was called and went to a café for luncheon, and did not return until some time after the result of the election had been declared. The absence of Towne and Farrell while the joint assembly was in session is not consistent with their duties as assemblymen, nor is their explanation satisfactory. But whatever the facts may be, there is no evidence in the record, nor any obtainable, so far as the committee knows, which would justify the conclusion that the absence of any of these three men was secured by corrupt means. It was necessary for Ramsey, Farrell, and Towne all to have been present and voting in order to prevent Stephenson from having a majority vote in the session. The other seven absentees were satisfactorily accounted for, and no suspicion, so far as we know, attaches to them.

We therefore conclude:

First, that the election in fact occurred on January 26, 1909; and Second, that there is no evidence justifying the conclusion that corrupt "methods or practices" were employed in securing the vote on March 4.

PRIMARY ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

Senstor Stephenson's account filed with the secretary of state

PRIMARY ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

on March 4.

PRIMARY ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

Senator Stephenson's account filed with the secretary of state shows that there was expended by him and through his committee in connection with the primary election $107,793.05. He received 56,909 votes, which cost him $1.89 for every vote cast.

These expenditures, for the purpose of this report, may be divided into the following classes:

First, moneys paid out to persons employed by him or in his behalf to circulate nomination papers in order to get the number of signatures required by the Wisconsin statutes before his name could be placed upon the ticket.

Second, money, paid out as follows:

(a) To newspapers for political advertising;

(b) For editorial support;

(c) For lithographs, campaign material, postage, telephone, telegraph, and express charges; and

(d) Office expenses, including rent, clerk hire, and assistants.

Third, payment for services of speakers, hall rent, music, and for men devoting their time and efforts in cultivating Stephenson sentiment throughout the State;

Fourth, moneys expended for workers at the polls, and for conveyances and services in getting out the voters;

Fifth, for drinks and cigars;

Sixth, money given to C. C. Wellensgard, L. L. Bancroft, and Thomas Reynolds, who were candidates for the legislature, to be used by them in the interest of Senator Stephenson;

Seventh, money paid to the game warden, John W. Stone, for use in the Senator's campaign;

Eighth, $2,000 contributed by Senator Stephenson to the State campaign committee for general election purposes; and

Ninth, expenses incurred during the session of the general assembly in opening and maintaining headquarters at Madison from the beginning of the session until after March 4, 1909, and for hotel bills and traveling of the session until after march 4, 1909, and for hotel care expenses.

No part of the contribution to the general campaign committee or the expenses incident to the headquarters during the session of the general assembly were ever reported to the secretary of state.

The above we believe to fairly represent the different classes of expenditure, which were disclosed by the evidence.

There was no evidence before the committee from which it could be fairly concluded that any of this money was expended for "corrupt methods or practices," unless those recited are to be construed as corrupt under the provisions of the Wisconsin statutes.

MANAGEMENT OF THE CAMPAIGN.

MANAGEMENT OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The testimony showed that Senator Strephenson had on deposit in the Marshall & Hisley Bank $50,000, which was used in the campaign with other added as required. His campaign was in charge of E. A. Edmonds, J. H. Puelicher, and Rodney Sackett.

There are 71 counties in the State and 2.200 election precincts. The method of the managers was to employ a lieutenant or campaign manager in each of the counties. In several instances one man had charge of a number of counties. Arrangements were made with these managers by which sums of money would be placed in their hands varying from $100 or several hundred dollars to several thousand dollars. In some instances the manager was not given, and would not accept, compensation for his services. In others definite arrangements were made for the amount of compensation the manager was to receive, and in many cases the manager would determine and retain for himself such sum or sums as he deemed proper. It is quite clear that a very substantial part of the money expended in the organization of the several counties never went beyond the pockets of those who received it. The money expended by these managers, so far as the testimony discloses, was for one or more or all of the purposes above described.

WISCONSIN ELECTION STATUTES.

WISCONSIN ELECTION STATUTES.

The Wisconsin statutes defining election offenses are fully set forth on pages 10, 11, and 12 of the views submitted by Senator Heyburn, chairman of the subcommittee, and it will not be necessary, therefore, to insert them here.

APPLICATION OF THE LAW TO THE FACTS--NOMINATION PAPERS

APPLICATION OF THE LAW TO THE FACTS—NOMINATION PAPERS.

Before a candidate for office is entitled to have his name placed upon the ticket at a primary, the Wisconsin statute requires that petitions or nomination papers shall be filed, signed by at least 1 per cent of the voters of his party in at least each of six counties in the State, and in the aggregate not less than 1 per cent nor more than 10 per cent of the total vote of his party in the State.

The testimony shows that Senator Stephenson hired and paid men to circulate his nomination papers in order to get the required number of signatures, but there was no evidence showing that any money was paid, in the language of the statute, to induce anyone to sign his nomination papers, and we do not think it was seriously claimed by those who were interested in the instigation of these proceedings that any money was unlawfully expended for this purpose.

EXPENDITURE OF MONEY DURING THE PRIMARY CAMPAIGN.

EXPENDITURE OF MONEY DURING THE PRIMARY CAMPAIGN.

Was it a violation of the statute to pay out money for political advertising in the newspapers, or for editorial support, or for lithographs, campaign material, or for telegraph, telephone, or express charges, or for office expenses, including rent and hire of assistants, or for the hiring of speakers, halls, rent, music, and for men devoting their time and efforts in cultivating Stephenson sentiment throughout the State, or to pay workers at the polls, or for conveyances and services in getting out the voters, or for money for drinks and cigars given in a social way during the campaign?

A careful examination of the bribery statutes of Wisconsin will indicate clearly that the expenditures of money of the character recited only comes within the inhibition thereof when they are made corruptly, unless section 298 forbids it. This section reads:

"Every person who, by bribery or corrupt or unlawful means, prevents or attempts to prevent any voter from attending or voting at any valuable thing or bribe to any officer, inspector, or delegate whose office is created by this act, or who shall give or offer to give any valuable thing or bribe to any elector as a consideration for some act to be done in relation to such caucus or convention * * shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," etc.

None of these expenditures can come within any of the provisions of this section, unless it be a violation of this language: "or who shall give or offer to give any valuable thing or bribe to any valuable thing or bribe to any elector as a consideration for some act to be done in relation to such caucus or convention."

It should be stated that by sections 39 and 40 of the election laws of Wisconsin the criminal penalties applying to a caucus and elections are made applicable to primary elections.

If the words "to give any valuable thing" are to be given a comprehensive and literal interpretation, and to prohibit the giving or offering of "any valuable thing" "as a consideration for some act" to be done, it would not have been necessary to write into the statute the words "or bribe," because the former expression would include the latter. The purpose of the statute is evidently to prohibit corrupt giving.

latter. The purpose of the statute is evidently to prohibit corrupt giving.

"Words of a general import in the statute are limited by words of restricted import immediately following and relating to the same subject." (36 Cyc., 1119, Nance v. Southern R. R. Co., 149 N. C., 368.)

"In interpreting a statute, where the language is of doubtful meaning, the court will reject an interpretation which would make the statute harsh, oppressive, inequitable, or unduly restrictive of primary private rights." (Nance v. Southern R. R. Co., 149 N. C., 366.) To the same effect, State ex rel. v. Jackson, 168 Indiana, 389.

Again, section 4543-C requires the filing of accounts of expenditures of a candidate. This must contemplate that there are expenditures which can not in any wise be regarded as a violation of the Wisconsin laws. If a literal interpretation is to be given to the words "any valuable thing * * * as a consideration for some act to be done," and some expenditures be prohibited, whether morally corrupt or incorrupt, would the legislature require the candidate to convict himself by filing an account? This is a criminal statute, and it must be strictly construed against the State and in favor of the defendant when charged with its violation.

Applying these rules, therefore, it would seem that the statute prohibited the giving of any valuable thing corruptly or in the nature of a bribe.

We have no sympathy whatever with the expenditure of money in a bribe.

We have no sympathy whatever with the expenditure of money in excessive amounts, whether in a senatorial or any other political campaign. That an expenditure of $107,793.05 is an excessive amount to be spent in the candidacy for the office of United States Senator, which pays a salary for six years' service amounting to $45,000, goes without question; that it is demoralizing and should be prevented can not be denied; that some of this money might have been spent corruptly may, for the sake of the argument, be conceded, but it is not sufficient that possible or even probable corruption or bribery exists. The evidence must show it, and this case, like all other cases, must be determined from the facts as they are disclosed in the trial and under the law as it then existed. The committee, proceeding upon the assumption that the expenditure of so large a sum of money required the fullest investigation and explanation, probed every rumor and followed every clue which was brought to its attention, with the result that no evidence was discovered which would justify the conclusion that any of this sum of money was corruptly or illegally spent.

At the time of this primary there was no statute, either State or National, limiting the amount of expenditures. There is no judicial or legislative decision, so far as we are advised, limiting the amount which may be legally expended. Can we, in the face of the fact that the Congress of the United States and the General Assembly of the State of Wisconsin prior to this election falled to limit election expenditures, now arbitrarily determine that because this sum was spent it was illegally and fraudulently expended, and therefore vacate the Senator's seat? Can it be said that the expenditure of such a sum is in contravention of a public policy which must be given the force and effect of a statute? If so, where does public policy draw the line between what shall be a legal and an illegal amount? The situation is unfortunate, but the Congress and the State legislature are to blame for not having limited the expenses by statute. Laws can not be enforced retroactively, and surely this case must be decided in ac what the law ought to be. Since that election the State of Wisconsin has limited the amount of expenditure in a senatorial campaign to $7,500 and the Federal Government has limited it to $10,000.

EFFECT OF THE PRIMARY LAW.

It is strenuously argued on behalf of Senator STEPHENSON that even if the primary law of Wisconsin was violated its provisions are unconstitutional, because section 3 of Article I of the Federal Constitution provides that Senators shall be chosen by the legislature and because section 4 gives Congress the right to prescribe the time and manner of holding elections for Senators and that this power has been exercised by the Congress in the manner prescribed by sections 14 and 15 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The Wisconsin primary law, in substance, provides (chap. 451, Laws of 1903) as follows:

"Party candidates for the office of United States Senator shall be nominated as other State officers. (Subdivision 3 of sec. 2.) Nomination papers for candidates for the office of United States Senator shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state. (Subdivision 1 of sec. 6.) The person receiving the greatest number of votes at the primary as the candidate of the party for the office voted for shall be the candidates of that party for such office (subdivision 1, sec. 18), and the secretary of state is required to publish in the official State paper a statement of the result of the canvass of the primary as soon as the same is certified to him."

These are all of the requirements found in the Wisconsin law pertaining to the nomination of party candidates for the office of United States Senators.

May the people of a sovereign State not provide for a method of expressing their sentiment in the selection of a Senator who shall represent that State in the United States Senator had fit is their desire to so petition, may they not prescribe the method of petitioning so as to make the result of this petition, whether it be in the form of a letter to the members of the general assembl ing its application to matters other than the election of United States Senators."

It will be conceded that while the result of a primary election, under the present constitutional provisions, could not control the State senators and representatives in their choice of a United States Senator, would not an expression of the will of the people at a primary election have great weight with their representatives in casting their votes? And, if this be so, ought not the primary election held to declare this choice be carefully guarded by suitable penalties? We have no hesitancy in saying that if the evidence disclosed the use of corrupt methods at the primarles, it would affect the result of the election by the general assembly, and the Senate would be justified in taking cognizance of that fact and unseating any Senator who was thus delinquent.

MONEYS GIVEN TO CANDIDATES FOR THE LEGISLATURE.

MONEYS GIVEN TO CANDIDATES FOR THE LEGISLATURE.

The testimony disclosed that Senator Stephenson, before the primary, gave money to C. C. Wellensgard, L. H. Bancroft, and Thomas Reynolds, who were then candidates for the legislature. They did not live in the same district or county with Mr. Stephenson. They were his personal friends. The money was given them to be used in behalf of Senator Stephenson for the nomination as the Republicae candidate for Senator.

It may be said that this money was probably used by these men to further their own interests, as well as to further the interests of Mr.

STEPHENSON. But, whether it was so used or not, there is no evidence that it was so used, or that it was given to them for that purpose.

On the contrary, the affirmative and uncontradicted testimony is all to the effect that this money was used strictly in the interest of Mr. Stephenson and none of it to further the interest of any of the legislative candidates.

MONEY PAID TO GAME WARDEN JOHN W. STONE.

MONEY PAID TO GAME WARDEN JOHN W. STONE.

Mr. Stephenson's campaign managers gave to John W. Stone, the game warden of the State, $2,849.50 for campaign purposes. This was distributed among a number of the deputy game wardens; he retained some portion of it himself, and in testifying before the legislative committee. falsely stated the amount he had paid out.

Section 990-28 (sec. 28, ch. 363, 1905) provides:

"No officer, agent, clerk, or employee under the government of the State shall directly or indirectly solicit or receive or be in any manner concerned in soliciting or receiving any assessment, subscription, or contribution, or political service, whether voluntary or involuntary for any political purpose whatever from any officer, agent, clerk, or employee of the State."

This statute makes it an offense for any officer, agent, clerk, or employee under the government of the State to solicit or receive any assessment, subscription, or contribution or political service from any officer, agent, clerk, or employee of the State. It is clear that this statute was not violated by Senator Stephenson, since he was not an officer, agent, clerk, or employee of the State. Moreover, the statute makes it an offense on the part of the recipient of the fund only. No offense is committed by the donor. It is true, the money should not have been paid to the game warden, and the giving of it does not show that fine discrimination which ought to be characteristic of men who are engaged in a campaign of this character. No law was violated by the donor, and this election can not be declared illegal because this expenditure was made.

Section 4343—C of the Revised Statut of the wave violated by the donor, and this election can not be declared illegal because this making out and filling with Revised Statut of the sate as tatement in writing, an secribed and swom to by the candidate 'setting forth in detail each item in excess of $5$ in money or property contributed, disbursed, expended, or promised by him, and to the best of his knowledge, and belief by any other persons or persons for him, or in his behalf, wholly or in part in endeavoring to secure or in any way in connection with his nomination or election to such office or place, or in the owner of the persons to whom, and the purpose for which all said sums were paid, expended, or promised by such candidate in any sum or sums whatever."

No account whatever was filed of the amount contributed by Mr. Stranger, and the persons to whom the purpose for which expended the amount expended during the session of the general assembly. The account which was demanded to the general assembly. The account which was demanded to the session of the general assembly. The account which was demanded to the session of the general assembly. expenditures. They destroyed all original records of accounts, though they kept what purported to be copies. They grouped these items and amounts in such a way that they gave no knowledge whatever to the public except the totals of each class of expenditures. The account was not filed until the last moment permitted by the statute.

Mr. Puelicher, a banker, acted as treasurer. He did not open an account as depositors usually do. He received remittances, kept private memoranda, paid out cash, and made disbursements of these funds, but kept no record thereof upon the bank's books. No other customer's funds, either before or since, were received or disbursed in a similar way. There was an air of mystery about the entire affair.

After the investigation by the committee of the general assembly was started Mr. Stephenson's local counsel had such records and correspondence as had not already been destroyed moved out of the State for the purpose of keeping them beyond the jurisdiction of the general assembly.

for the purpose of keeping them beyond the jurisdiction of the general assembly.

It may be said in passing, however, that the accounts were kept on card indexes, and Mr. Sacket gives as a reason for destroying them that they were made with lead pencil in many cases, and the writing was practically obliterated, so that he made copies and then destroyed the originals (Record, p. 161) because they were cumbersome and inconvenient (p. 523). And it may be further said that there seems to have been no substantial reason for moving the correspondence out of the State. It was all before the committee, and an examination failed to disclose anything of an inculpatory or improper character which would render any concealment necessary.

Can there be any wonder that the public became suspicious and the members of the general assembly, out of a decent sense of self-respect, should demand a thorough investigation?

If Mr. STEPHENSON has been put to great expense and trouble it is due, first, to the reckless expenditure of this large sum of money, and, second, to the studied and mysterious efforts of his managers and local attorneys to conceal the facts up to and during the investigation before the joint committee of the general assembly and the separate committee of the State senate.

But out of all this scandal and trouble much good has come. Public sentiment was aroused. The unlimited use of money has been condemned, and stringent corrupt-practices laws have been adopted, both by the General Assembly of the State of Wisconsin and by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I offer the following resolution and ask for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 215), and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That 1,000 additional copies of the report and accompanying papers presented by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, who were directed to investigate whether corrupt methods and practices were used or employed in the election of ISAAC STRPHENSON as a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, be printed for the use of the Senate, and that 450 additional copies of the report, together with the hearings held before the committee, be printed for the use of the Senate.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I desire to say that the minority report from the committee is not yet signed, owing to the absence from the city of some of the Senators. But it will be signed and presented later in the week.

Mr. REED. When signed, will the minority report be printed under the resolution just reported?

Mr. HEYBURN. Certainly; the minority report will be views of the minority as part 2 of a report.

Mr. HEYBURN. I desire to say that at an early day after the incoming of the minority report I shall ask the Senate to take up this matter for consideration and final disposition. Of course, it is a matter of the highest privilege and takes precedence over any other business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The matter will go to the calendar.

LIGHTHOUSE DEPOT AT SAN JUAN, P. R.

Mr. REED. On the Sth instant I reported favorably from the Committee on Commerce the bill (S. 4364) to provide for the use as a lighthouse depot of such part of the naval reservation at San Juan, P. R., as may be useful for such purpose, being Order of Business 287. On behalf of the committee, I ask that the bill be taken from the calendar and recommitted to the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROPOSED PENSION LEGISLATION.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I desire to occupy a few moments of the time of the Senate in some observations upon a subject which, it seems to me, should receive the serious consideration of this body.

On this day when the thought and heart of the Nation is turned toward a humble grave at Springfield, Ill., I deem it not inappropriate to submit some suggestions as to the manner of treatment by the Nation of the men Lincoln called in the days of '61 to '65.

Last December the House of Representatives, in a spirit not of politics but of patriotism, passed what is known as the Sherwood pension bill. That measure came to the Senate and has been in committee ever since. Other general pension bills are before that committee, one of which I introduced on the second day of the session. All of these bills provide in more liberal way for the Union soldier of the Civil War. It had been hoped that before this time the Senate, in the same spirit of patriotism that actuated the House of Representatives, might have passed the Sherwood bill-not as a present to these men, not as a charity, but as a mere act of justice. I am well aware that any man who stands on this floor and advocates more liberal pensions for the survivors of the Civil War is accused of "playing politics," but I do not propose to be deterred by any such charge.

After the passage of the Sherwood bill some of the great metropolitan journals published articles from editors who, sitting in easy leather chairs, surrounded by all the comforts of modern life, wrote, without much thought, that this bill was a "pension graft"; that it was enacted for the purpose of "playing politics"; and I fully realize that anyone who champions that measure must subject himself to the criticism of these great metropolitan paper's. It is very easy in the comfortable surroundings of one of these editorial sanctums to denounce this measure. It is easy to talk about "pension grabs." These men who so talk have never known what it was to stand and face an oncoming bayonet charge, to pace on lonely picket duty, or to engage in any conflict of battle. Their battles have been of the pen, not of the sword. Five minutes of war would effectually change their minds as to the method of treatment the Government should accord the Union soldier. Some of the opposition now manifested to this bill comes from those who remained at home and fattened on the prosperity won by national arms. John McCutcheon, the great cartoonist, a short time ago pictured a Memorial Day parade—broken veterans in blue marching along, feeble and bent and gray; and near the line of march gentlemen in high hats and long-tailed coats, fat, slick, prosperous, pompous, and contented, well fed, well groomed, well satisfied with themselves and with the world. The argument there portrayed is as powerful as it is pathetic. On the one side those who went to war; the other, those who remained at home. In my boyhood days and every year since then I have watched on Memorial Day the old veteran in the somewhat faded uniform as under the flag he marched down the street to the music of fife and drum. There was a flash in the eye, a pride in the step, that made the heart of the watcher beat a little faster. have observed, year by year, that these ranks were growing less, and the old veteran as he marches now steps with a stride ever less alert and with shoulders stooping more and more under the weight of advancing years. As I have observed that little bronze button of the Grand Army of the Republic it has often flashed through my mind that I would rather be able to wear it and know that the right to wear it had been won in honorable sacrifice for my country than to wear the most royal diadem of any earthly power.

Are we, as a Congress, to do anything for these men? The hour has now struck for action. Either we should pass a liberal pension law or say to these men that we will not do so. To further delay is to deny them justice. Let us do something or else stop talking about it. They are passing away at the rate of a hundred a day, and since this bill was enacted by the House 5,000 of them have gone to their reward. We spend plenty of time over child-labor laws; a whole session over Canadian reciprocity; but we do not seem to be able to find time to deliberate upon and carry through to a successful conclusion a righteous pension enactment, and all the while time is flitting by. Physical forms fade quickly as the fleeting clouds.

These men with broken constitutions are standing in the twight hour waiting the last summons. When 10 years shall light hour waiting the last summons. have passed away no more will the old soldier be seen upon our streets, and, except in rare instances, he will be a memory. It is commendable to raise monuments to them when they are gone and to place flowers upon their graves; but food upon their tables in life is far preferable to flowers upon their graves in death. It is far better to give them the necessities of life, to make easy their few remaining years, than later to erect great monuments to their memory. May the time never be that upon those monument should be inscribed, "They were neglected by the Republic they saved."

The Commissioner of Pensions, I understand, estimates the cost of the Sherwood bill at $75,000,000 a year above the present payments. This estimate has been analyzed by that gallant old soldier, Gen. Sherwood. This analysis appears in one of his speeches in the House, in which he shows the cost to be about $43,000,000 more than expenditures under existing laws. I prefer to accept his estimate. The cost of this bill, then, would be about $43,000,000 in addition to present pension expenditures. Suppose it does cost as much as is estimated by the Commissioner of Pensions. Even then we should not hesi-tate. While there may be men who will receive pensions which, possibly, they do not need, it is far better that some receive pensions to which they may not be entitled than that deserving soldiers fail to receive that to which they are entitled. The pension roll is not one of charity but one of honor. Pensions are given in part payment of that debt of endless gratitude-still paying, still to owe. No liberality of the Nation could ever pay that obligation.

In my humble judgment the Sherwood bill does not go far enough, in that it makes no provision for the widows of sol-They had the harder life. How tender and gentle they were. With smiling face that hid a breaking heart she urged him on, and when he was gone-after he had proudly marched down the street to the music of fife and drum, with the old flag floating over him, supported by the benediction of her smileback to the little home she ran, broke down, and wept the tears of bitter anguish. Then came the struggle with poverty. She could only work and hope and pray. Breathless she awaits the news of every battle, sending up her supplication for her soldier's safety; and yet she hopes he was at the front. Spartan-like she widows herself for her country's salvation. "It is the type of an eternal truth that the soul's armor is never well set unless a woman's hand has braced it, and it is only when she braces it loosely that the honor of our manhood fails." How full of struggle, hardship, sacrifice, and sorrow the fateful years of the war were for her only her own heart knows.

The wife who girds her husband's sword,
'Mid little ones who weep and wonder,
And bravely speaks the parting word,
Although her heart be rent asunder;
Doomed, nightly, in her dreams to hear
The bolts of war around him rattle,
Has shed as sacred blood as e'er
Was poured upon the plain of battle.

Every advance toward human liberty, every great movement which has marked an epoch in the history of the world has been made possible by the courage and sympathy of woman. That courage and sympathy put inspiration and iron into the men at the front and was not the least of all the factors contributing to the success of the Union arms.

Why do we not pass the Sherwood bill? But one answer. "We must practice economy." We have increased in material wealth in this country until our national resources stagger mankind-an industrial prosperity the like of which the world has never known. If we must practice economy let us practice it in some other direction. Let us not raise the cry of "economy" only when the soldier is involved. It must be remembered that the purchasing power of the soldier's pension under the Sherwood bill would probably not be greater than the purchasing power of the present pension at the time when the various laws were enacted. Expense of living has grown as much for the soldier as it has for anyone else. Congress has raised the salary of its Members. It has raised the salary of the President. It has entered into an expense running into the hundreds of millions for constructing the Panama Canal. It has even retired Admiral Peary on rear admiral's pay for discovering something known as the North Pole, which no one cares anything about.

We might economize in the House and Senate in the matter of mileage. There could be a saving in this item of $125,000 a year and yet leave 10 cents per mile for traveling expenses. We could economize by getting rid of some of the commissions that surround us on every hand with enormous expense. Possibly a few expeditions like that to Lake Champlain, recently exposed in the House, might be dispensed with in the interest of economy. We have river and harbor bills running into the millions for the purpose of creating harbors where the Almighty forbade them and rivers where nature prohibited them. Perhaps these might be dispensed with on the same ground. Public buildings might wait a few years, even though it might injure the chances of a few men to go back to Congress because they could not secure a public building at an enormous expense where none is needed. Many more millions go for the maintenance of navy yards so absolutely chaste that their waters have never yet embraced the form of a seagoing battleship; dry docks that are a constant challenge to the word of God, because they are so dry that the only possible chance for them to ever be used for docking ships is confined to the remote prospect that we will see a repetition of the flood described in the Scripture. So glaring is the abuse in this direction that the Secretary of the Navy, in his last annual report, is constrained to remind us that "navy yards exist for the fleet and that the fleet is not for the support of the yards." Then there are the free barber shop and the free bath rooms. They might, possibly, be abolished, although I realize that I am treading on sacred and dangerous ground in making this revolutionary recommendation.

A Republican Senator, a few months ago, said one thing that is absolutely true when he said that this Government can be conducted for $300,000,000 less per year than it is now. When he said this he spoke an absolute truism. Every man here knows it to be correct. One-seventh of this sum would carry the pensions provided by the Sherwood bill,

I have no patience with the assertion that pension legislation is charity legislation. There was an implied contract with this Government when these men marched away, and that contract was that when they needed help from the Government they should have it. They did not go to war for the $13 per month in depreciated currency—worth, in gold, but $9. They did not place blood against gold. They would have gone had there been no compensation. Life was precious to these men. They could look ahead through the open door of opportunity and see a future where possibly they as well as those who stayed at home might surround themselves and their families with the luxuries and splendors of life. But they closed the door of opporunity just at a time when the tenderest and most sacred associations of life were forming. They gave up ambition gladly to serve their country. They were not victims of greed for territory, and in those red years of our national calendar they never They never thought of themselves; they thought of reward. thought only of their country. And now their country ought to be thinking of them. Pension legislation, it seems to me, should be based somewhat upon the advantages which accrued to the Nation and the ability of the Nation to compensate therefor.

Think of what these men did! Their patriotism will inspire the manhood of the Republic to duty and deeds of valor if danger in the future shall ever threaten the Nation. Some were with Grant at Vicksburg and Donelson; some in the hornets' nest of Shiloh; some with "Old" Farragut, damning the torpedoes in the Mississippi; some in the bloody battle of Franklin; some on the field of Nashville. Others were with "Pap" Thomas in the gloomy woods of Chickamauga, others following "Old" Joe Hooker up Lookout Mountain above the clouds until the stars of the flag twinkled side by, side with the stars in the heavens. Some were with Hancock and Sickles at Gettysburg; some stood against that most magnificent charge of all history across Seminary Plain of the valor of Virginia chivalry; some followed Sherman to the sea; others stood at Appomattox with the great commander, who sleeps to-day by the banks of the Hudson and who proclaimed, "Let us have peace."

They met likewise disease and pestilence. They had to combat not only the force of arms but the fever demon springing from the swamps of the South; and they met it all with the same spirit of heroism with which they have met the problems since the war. It should not require any request or urging upon us to take care of them now.

It is to be hoped that in this body there may be help from the South in passing this bill or some liberal pension bill. All the strife and clamor of that period has ceased. We are now one people, preaching the gospel of peace and good will to men from the westward slope of the Pacific on to where the Southern Cross blazes above the southern seas. No more inspiring period will ever come to this country than we experienced during the Spanish-American War. Then we observed Gen. Wheeler, who wore the gray, and Gen. Wilson, who wore the blue; Fitzhugh Lee, than whom no more gallant ever marched under the Stars and Bars, and William McKinley, than whom no braver ever fought under the Stars and Stripes, and the sons of the men who fought with Sherman and the sons of the men who fought with Lee, standing shoulder to shoulder in a common cause—nne flag, one country, one glorious and triumphant destiny.

The great struggle of 1861–1865 is sanctified to both North and South in the blood and valor of a common heritage. The green grass, nature's forgiveness, covers many a ruined fort. The blue and gray are sleeping side by side on every battle field of the Civil War. Throughout the Southland the wheels of machinery are singing the songs of a prosperity and commercial activity little dreamed of in the dark days of the war. The march of trade and commerce has produced a great Southgreat in its industrial achievements, great in its prosperity, and splendid in all that makes for good citizenship.

No better token of the united spirit which characterizes the Nation to-day could be given than for the Southland to reach over and help, by its vote, the passage of this measure. The complete reunion of the sections of this country was beautifully expressed by a soldier at Chickamauga a few years ago at a reunion of the Blue and the Gray, when he wrote:

We met at Chickamauga; I hadn't seen him since; We looked across the trenches and his bullets made me wince; We both shook hands in friendship as hearty as could be, Though he had marched with Sherman and I had marched with Lee.

We walked across the battle field where once the bullets flew, And the green and waving blades of grass felt the fall of crimson dew. We talked the whole thing over where the flag was waving free, How he had marched with Sherman and I had marched with Lee.

The drums have ceased their beating; I see no sabers shine;
The hair falls on his forehead as snowy white as mine,
And voices seem to call us across the far, eternal sea,
Where the boys who marched with Sherman are in camp with those of Lee.

We are living to-day in a busy, rushing, commercial age, in which we seem to have but little time for the sentiments of life, but in all of our prosperity and progress let us not forget the work of these men. Let us not forget their need in these later years. The greatest crime of a republic is to forget its defenders in their hour of need. It has been said—and I think possibly on this floor—that patriotism is its own reward, and some people, who are surrounded by all the luxuries of life, seem to think that that is the only reward necessary. Patriotism does not buy bread and clothes or pay the rent. Its inspiration is, of course, in itself a great reward, and around the firesides of the future the story of that struggle will incite to deeds of valor our children and our children's children.

Dickens, in his Tale of Two Cities, portrays Sidney Carton meditating in the prison cell on the night before the morn when he is to give up his life for his friend, and there he pictures the reward of such sacrifice; that his friend some day will lead to his grave a little child who bears his name, and he will tell this little child the story of the love and devotion of the man who lies sleeping there. That is, indeed, a great reward for valor and virtue. But we are in position to see patriotism rewarded and not merely to assume that the memories of that contest, the deeds of valor and heroism, are sufficient. We will have these as the heritage of tife years to come, because it is true—

"they never die who fall in a great cause. The block may soak their gore, their heads may sodden in the sun, their limbs be strung to city walls and castle gates, and yet their spirit walks abroad."

The veterans of both armies are rapidly passing to the shoreless sea. Immortal honors will soon be theirs. Their heads are crowned with the snows that never melt. Their steps are faltering with increasing age. No more for them the bugle call; no more the tattoo shall beat; no more the flame, and death, and hell of battle. They shall all soon pitch their tents on the plains of peace and be welcomed in the home of the Prince of Peace. The future, indeed, of our dead is safe. Let us make safe the present and future of our living.

present and future of our living.

In that splendid novel of Justin McCarthy, "If I Were King," Old Villon is made to exclaim, "Where are the snows of yesterday; the winds have blown them all away." No winds of commercial activity should be permitted to blow these memories away. They are as pure as the spotless snow. No emergency of the hour, no false pretense of economy, should deny them justice. The spirit that sent them forth, mere boys, willing to give up their lives, let us not forget. Amid the prosperity, the achievement, and the grandeur of the morning hours of this splendid century, let their glory not be dimmed or the cause for which they fought be minimized. Let us not forget.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I think it appropriate on this day and at this particular time to call attention to a fact in addition to those facts referred to by the distinguished Senaknown that in July, 1864, when Early's army was within the limits of the District of Columbia, overlooking the Capitol—and perhaps all Senators have gone to view that spot—at that hour when the Government had tried to raise, first, $60,000,000 of the money lenders, and had been refused, on a 7 per cent basis, and then had tried to raise $50,000,000 of the money lenders and had been again refused because of the darkness of that hour, the soldiers in the field loaned the Government of the United States $20,000,000 out of their pay at the paymaster's wagon. That money came into the Treasury of the United States and tided the Government over that dark hour. These men are those referred to by the Senator from Iowa. They did that at the expense of the comfort of their families and homes. The great mass of the American people to-day have forgotten, if they ever knew it, that the fighting soldier on the battle field at the paymaster's wagon contributed out of his pittance $20,000,000 that came into the Treasury of the United States as a rebuke to those who stayed at home and hoarded their wealth and refused to buy Government bonds or to loan the Government money upon even better terms. Let that not be forgotten, regardless of what pension bill is under considera-tion. Remember that those men were ready not only to sacrifice their lives that this country might live, but that they were more ready to contribute to the expense of maintaining the Government than were these mock heroes at home, many of whom were preaching doctrines against the principles for which those men contended.

I only felt impelled in this hour and upon this patriotic day

I only felt impelled in this hour and upon this patriotic day to record here in the RECORD of this body the recollection of real patriotism, this monument to soldiers who are forgotten to-day because they are out of sight, suffering perhaps in the hospitals and with the ills of old age. I merely recall this as an additional tribute to those men. Of course we should see to it that their lives are made as comfortable as they can be and that the pledge which the greatest of all commanders made at Gettysburg shall be kept.

Abraham Lincoln, the anniversary of whose birth we celebrate to-day, was a soldier. All the great deeds of his life were those during war and pertaining to war. He knew no great civil career separated from the conduct of the war. Washington, the prototype, made the great name that has lived after him in war. Freedom, liberty, were never born in any other cradle than that of war. Nobody ever obtained freedom, unless it be a slave by manumission, except at the end of a struggle; no nation ever liberated itself from the bonds that cramped it and its people except at the end of a war. This is the anniversary of the birth of a man whose greatness was wholly that of war and of the things pertaining to it.

I have only added this word because of the sacred anniversary of his birth, and I have only referred to these heroic acts of the soldiers whose commander he was and to whom he made the appeal in order that they may not be forgotten and that they may not be counted among the worthless of mankind.

To pay the owners of the British steamship Harpallon for damages to their steamer suffered while discharging coal at the navy yard, Puget Sound, Wash., in September, 1911, $23.70.

To pay the owners of the British steamship Hampton for damages suffered by their steamer while discharging coal at the naval coal depot, Tiburon, Cal., in May, 1911, $750.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVIGATION AIDS, ST. MARYS RIVER, MICH.

The bill (S. 4459) to provide for repairs and improvements to aids to navigation in the St. Marys River, Mich., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to make repairs and improvements to aids to navigation in the St. Marys River, Mich., at a cost not to exceed $60,000.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ZION'S COOPERATIVE MERCANTILE INSTITUTION.

The bill (S. 412) to provide for the refunding of certain moneys illegally assessed and collected in the district of Utah was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to appropriate to the corporations hereinafter named the amounts respectively placed opposite their names, the amounts having been illegally assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and collected by the collector of internal revenue for the district 1 of Utah in 1879 as a tax on notes used for circulation and paid out, such tax having been held illegal by the Supreme Court of the United States: Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, of Bountiful, Utah, $123.30; Logan Branch of Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, of Logan, Utah, $4,852.42.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator when the decision that is spoken of in the bill was rendered?

Mr. SMOOT. The Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. Franklin MacVeagh, writes to the chairman of the Finance Committee, in a letter dated December 16, 1911, as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, Washington, December 16, 1911.

The Chairman Committee on Finance, United States Senate.

The Chairman Committee on Finance,

United States Senate.

Sir: In reply to your letter of the 12th instant, inclosing copy of a bill (S. 412) to provide for the refunding of certain moneys lilegally assessed and collected in the district of Utah, by appropriating to Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution $123.30 and to the Logan Branch of Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution $4.852.42 as amounts collected in 1879 as tax on notes used for circulation by said companies, the tax subsequently having been held illegal by the Supreme Court of the United States, and asking that your committee be supplied with an opinion regarding the merits of the bill, I have the honor to advise you that a similar bill (S. 9970) was introduced in the last Congress, referred to this department, and a full report made thereon. It appears from the records in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that in March, 1879, an assessment was made against Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, of Bountiful, Utah, on account of notes used for circulation for the three months ended August 31, 1877, amounting to $123.30. On the same list also appears an assessment against the Logan Branch of Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, based upon the same subject matter, for the sum of $4.852.42, both of which assessments were paid on August 20, 1879.

By virtue of an act approved February 28, 1901, there were refunded to other corporations or associations in the State of Utah certain taxes collected upon notes circulated under apparently the same conditions. It appears from an examination of the records in the commissioner's office that the amounts sought to be recovered by the pending bil were not included in the terms of said act and have not been otherwise refunded, and therefore that claims for said sums are equally meritorious with those included in said refunding act.

Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary.

FRANKLIN MACVEAGH, Secretary.

will say to the Senator that I do not remember the date of the decision of the Supreme Court, but I do know that the Supreme Court decided that the tax was illegal.

Mr. BACON. I suppose it is admitted that there was this Issue; but what are the facts which it is claimed relieve the institutions from liability?

Mr. SMOOT. The amount was illegally collected. I can explain the mater to the Senator in this way: These stores were issuing circulating notes. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue held that there should be a 10 per cent assessment on the circulation of the notes issued by these particular stores. The matter was taken up through the inferior courts to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that the assessment was preme Court. The supreme Court held that the assessment was illegal and that it was illegally collected. Congress, in years past, has refunded over $80,000 of such assessments, but the two items covered by this bill were not included in the refund that has been made. The claimants, therefore, are simply asking that there be a refund to them the same as in the case of the other institutions which paid the tax that was illegally collected.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I observe that the letter from the department does not say that these bills or claims have any merit at all. The letter says that, on their face, they are equally meritorious with the others. The Secretary evidently has, with some intention and deliberation, failed to answer "yes" as to the merits of this bill.

I apprehend the Secretary is unable to answer one way or the other, because, I suppose, the facts were not before him as to whether this tax was on the same credit as that which was held to be illegal in the Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution case, reported in One hundred and eleventh United States.

I should like to ask the Senator himself if he or the committee has any information on the nature and character of the tax now said to be illegal. If the tax was on currency notes, at 10 per cent, it was legal. If it was on circulating orders between merchants for merchandise, the court said it would be illegal.

What I want to ascertain is, What are the facts on which the committee bases its report that this tax was identical with those that were refunded by the act of 1901?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator asked me if I knew personally whether or not the claims are the same. I will state to him that I do know positively that they are the same. I will call the attention of the Senator from Georgia to the report. It refers to "the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of O. J. Hollister, collector, v. Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, One hundred and eleventh United States, page 62." I am positive that they are exactly. Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I will concede that; but I want to know, being the same, what they are. There is no doubt about the fact that the law imposes a tax of 10 per cent upon all bills issued to be circulated as money by institutions other than the national banks. In this particular case I presume there is no dispute as to the fact that these bills were issued. But what were the facts which relieved them from liability under the act? The statement that they were the same as in another case does not give us any information unless we knew what that other case was.

Mr. SMOOT. These are the facts, Mr. President: The stores, in exchange for produce, issued what was called scrip. If a man brought to a store a bushel of wheat that was worth $1, they would issue a dollar's worth of scrip. O. J. Hollister, then collector of internal revenue, decided that that was a circulating note, and came under the law requiring a 10 per cent But when the matter was brought to the Supreme Court it held that that scrip was not taxable, and that the amount of money which had been collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue was illegally collected. This bill simply provides for refunding to the stores that paid this tax, without any interest whatever, the amount that was illegally collected from them. That is all there is in it.

Mr. BACON. Has the Senator examined the case in 111 United States, to see whether the Supreme Court has decided that?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say I know that they did, because I was manager of the Provo Woolen Mills at the time, and a similar claim was made on the part of the Provo Woolen Mills, and a refund was made by the Government to the Provo Woolen Mills in the same way. But these two items were not included in the original claim made against the Government. It was an oversight.

Mr. BACON. I remember the fact that there have been decisions on the subject, but they were rendered so long ago that I can not recall what the precise ruling was. Of course if this bill falls within the ruling, and the facts justify the refund, I have nothing more to say. But I think the report ought to have set out a little more in detail, and with greater minuteness, the facts upon which this proposed action is to be based.

Mr. OVERMAN. When was the claim made? Mr. SMOOT. The tax was illegally collected in 1879.

Mr. OVERMAN. But when was the claim presented to Congress?

Mr. SMOOT. The claim was not presented until three or four years ago, I think.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not believe in waiving the statute of limitations. Is not the claim barred by that statute?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not think there is any question about that, Mr. President; but it could not have been paid without a special act of Congress, even if it had not been barred.

Mr. OVERMAN. I understand; but the statute provides that all claims not presented within a certain time shall be barred.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not think it applies to this class of claims, Mr. President. This is a claim against the Government.

Mr. OVERMAN. I simply wanted to know whether a precedent is going to be made, and whether the statute of limitations is going to be waived. If it is going to be waived in this case, it ought to be waived in others.

Mr. SMOOT. The Secretary of the Treasury says this claim should be paid if the others were paid; and they were paid.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, before this matter passes from the Senate I simply want to say that I have not endeavored to obstruct the bill, but I do think that where a claim has been allowed to slumber as long as this one has very definite information should be given in regard to it. As the matter has to have consideration elsewhere, I presume the attention which has been called to it will be sufficient.

REDEMPTION OF GOVERNMENT OBLIGATIONS.

The bill (S. 2151) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to use, at his discretion, surplus moneys in the Treasury in the purchase or redemption of the outstanding interest-bearing obligations of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. HEYBURN. I ask that the bill may go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

CHARLES A. DAVIDSON AND CHARLES M. CAMPBELL.

The bill (S. 2199) to carry into effect findings of the Court of Claims in the cases of Charles A. Davidson and Charles M. Campbell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay $750 each to Charles A. Davidson and Charles

M. Campbell, late clerks of United States courts in Indian Territory, in pursuance of the findings of fact reported to the United States Senate by the Court of Claims.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTATE OF JOHANNA S. STOECKLE.

The bill (S. 4189) for the relief of the estate of Johanna S. Stoeckle was considered as in Committee on the Whole. It proposes to pay the estate of Johanna S. Stoeckle, late of Wilmington, Del., $1,753.99, taxes erroneously collected from said estate under the war-revenue act of June 13, 1898, on legacies passing by the last will and testament of Joseph Stoeckle, he having deceased prior to the passage of said act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS.

The bill (S. 3579) to amend section 1 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to oaths, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. There seems to be an adverse report. I ask that the bill go over.

Mr. BURTON. Let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

SALE OF PUBLIC OR INDIAN LANDS IN TOWN SITES.

The bill (S. 256) affecting the sale and disposal of public or Indian lands in town sites, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HEYBURN. I ask that the bill may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW LANDS.

The bill (S. 3686) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to permit the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Coal Co. and the Eastern Coal & Mining Co. to exchange certain lands embraced within their existing coal leases in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations for other lands within said nation, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time. and passed.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the unfinished business will be temporarily laid aside, the hour of 4 o'clock having arrived.

Mr. BACON. What is the unfinished business?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is Senate bill 3812 to regulate public utilities in the District of Columbia.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACOPCEIA.

The bill (S. 4856) to amend sections 6 and 7 of the purefood act of June 30, 1906, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BURTON. I should like to hear some explanation of the scope of the bill.

Mr. HEYBURN. It merely adds the homeopathic formulary to those enumerated in the present pure food and drugs act, and puts it on the same footing, recognizing the homeopathic publication of standards. We have the pharmacopæia and the standards of the different schools, and the homeopathic school was not recognized. This puts homeopaths in with the others. That is all it does.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HURON PLACE CEMETERY, KANSAS CITY, KANS.

The bill (S. 3952) for the purpose of repealing so much of an act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indians located in Kansas City, Kans., providing for the sale of a tract of land located in Kansas City, Kans., reserved for a public burial ground under a treaty made and concluded with the Wyandotte Tribe of Indians on the 31st day of January, 1855, said section of said act relating to the sale of said land be, and the same is hereby, repealed, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I should like to understand something of the purpose of the bill from the Senator in charge of it.

Mr. CURTIS. I would ask that the report, which is a very short one, be read. It fully explains the bill, and I think after it is read the Senator from Washington will have no objection to its passage

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read. The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. Curtis on the 8th instant, as follows:

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 3952) in regard to the Huron Place Cemetery, in Kansas City, Kans., after having given the same careful consideration submit the following after having given the same careful consideration submit the following report:

By the terms of the treaty made and concluded with the Wyandotte Tribe of Indians on the 31st day of January, 1855, the Wyandotte Nation ceded certain lands situated in the forks of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers, but by the terms of the treaty the portion then inclosed and used as a public burying ground should be permanently reserved and appropriated for that purpose. The tract referred to contains 2 acres of land.

In the cest of June 21, 1006 Concrete authorized the Scaretage of the and appropriated for that purpose. The tract referred to contains 2 acres of land.

In the act of June 21, 1906, Congress authorized the Secretary of the Interior to sell the above tract of land under such rules and regulations as he might prescribe, and authority was given said Secretary to provide for the removal of the remains of the persons interred in said burial grounds and their reinterment in the Wyandotte Cemetery at Quindaro, Kans., and to purchase and put in place appropriate monuments, and the bill further provided that after paying certain claims the residue of the money derived from said sale should be paid per capita to the members of the Wyandotte Tribe of Indians. It is estimated that the lands have a value of $75,000.

At the time of the provision providing for the sale of the above tract of land it was understood that the members of the tribe favored such action, but it has since been ascertained that a number of members of the tribe who had relatives buried in said cemetery objected to the removal of the remains, and under the circumstances your committee believe a mistake was made and a great injustice was done by the act of June 21, 1906, and your committee believe that the feelings of the relatives should be respected, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill (S. 3952) without amendment.

It is believed that it would be better to retain the cemetery as a national monument to the Wyandotte Tribe of Indians than to sell it.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIAN LANDS IN OKLAHOMA.

The bill (S. 4754) to dispose of certain lands for town-site purposes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to set aside for townsite purposes the northwest quarter of section 30, township 2 north, range 11 west, Indian meridian, Comanche County, adjoining the city of Lawton, Okla., and to survey, lay out, and plat the said land into town lots, streets, alleys, and parks; and said lots shall be surveyed, appraised, and disposed of as provided in section 2381, United States Revised Statutes. The proceeds derived from the sale of the lots shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Tribes of Indians, and may thereafter be used for the benefit of the said tribes of Indians for such purposes and in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior may direct. The expenses incident to the survey, appraisal, and sale, and any other expenses in connection therewith, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Interior out of any moneys in the United States Treasury belonging to said Indians.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 194) granting the temporary use of certain lands in the Presidio of San Francisco and Fort Mason (Cal.) Military Reservations to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Co. was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and

The preamble was agreed to.

AMERICAN NATIONAL RED CROSS.

The bill (S. 4238) to provide for the use of the American National Red Cross in aid of the land and naval forces in time of actual or threatened war was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time,

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to the preamble, to insert after "1864" the words "now replaced and superseded by the Geneva Convention of July 6, 1906," so as to make the preamble read:

Whereas the American National Red Cross was incorporated by act of Congress, approved January 5, 1905, "to furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armies in time of war, in accordance with the spirit and conditions of " the treaty of Geneva of August 22, 1864," now replaced and superseded by the Geneva convention of July 6, 1906: Therefore

The amendment was agreed to.

The preamble as amended was agreed to.

LANDS IN IMPERIAL COUNTY, CAL.

The bill (S. 4786) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the sale of isolated tracts of public lands in Imperial County, Cal.," approved March 3, 1909, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Lands with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 7, after the word "those," to insert "vacant and unappropriated," and on page 2, line 4, after the word "lands," to strike out "shall" and insert "may," so as to read:

That an act to provide for the sale of isolated public lands in Imperial County, Cal., approved March 3, 1909, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"That all of those vacant and unappropriated portions of townships 13, 14, 15, and 16, south of ranges 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, and of fractional township 17, south of ranges 15 and 16, all east of San Bernardino meridian, which are 10 chains or less in width and lie between entered or patented lands, may be sold at private sale for cash at such price and under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe, but not at less than $2.50 per acre."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 15, after the word months," to insert the following additional proviso:

And provided further, That any entryman or owner of such entered or patented lands shall have the preference right for such period of six months to purchase, under the terms of this act, any portions of the above townships which would be subject to sale under the provisions of this act but for the occupation or claim of such entryman or owner, and thereafter such portions shall be subject to sale under the provisions of this act as if vacant and unappropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF DECEASED INDIANS.

The bill (S. 3570) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for determining the heirs of deceased Indians, for the disposition and sale of allotments of deceased Indians, for the leasing of allotments, and for other purposes," approved June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. L., p. 855), was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIGHTHOUSE DEPOT AT SAN JUAN, P. R.

The bill (S. 4364) to provide for the use as a lighthouse depot of such part of the naval reservation at San Juan, P. R., as may be useful for such purpose was next in order on the calendar.

Mr. SHIVELY. I think the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Reed] some time ago made a motion to have Senate bill 4364 recommitted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been recommitted to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. NELSON subsequently said: I move to have Senate bill 4364 referred back to the Committee on Commerce. It is a bill reported by that committee, but since the report was made a letter has been sent in stating that the ground for the light-house depot will be acquired through the Navy Department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will suggest that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Reed] at an early hour to-day made a motion that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on

Mr. NELSON. The bill has been recommitted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been recommitted.

Mr. NELSON. Very well.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, February 12, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, our Father, how great are Thy mysteries, how inscrutable are Thy ways, yet Thy holy influence touches the hearts of men and inspires to deeds of heroism and glory. The day of miracles will never end. Abraham Lincoln, born as lowly as the Savior of men, with little or no opportunity for an education and few books to guide him, increased in wisdom and knowledge and became the exponent of all that is purest and best. Surely he was the man of God, chosen to guide our ship of state through the terrible storm which broke upon it to a safe harbor, "with malice toward none and charity for all." He has builded for himself a monument more grand and imposing than the mind of man has yet conceived, which reaches from the earth beneath to the heavens above. Grant as the years come and go it may grow more stately, shine more brightly, a beacon light to guide us and future generations till the genius of our Republic shall be fulfilled in a union of brain and brawn and heart, to the glory and honor of Thy holy name.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, February 10, 1912, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed bill and resolutions of the following titles:

On February 9, 1912: H. J. Res. 184. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to loan certain tents and cots for the use of the Confederate Veterans' Reunion, to be held at Macon, Ga., in May, 1912

On February 10, 1912:

H. J. Res. 238. Joint resolution making an appropriation to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for support of the workhouse of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1912; and

H. R. 1618. An act amending paragraph 6 of the act relating to the Metropolitan police force.

REGULATION OF LOANS, ETC.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up as the unfinished business, this being District day, the bill H. R. 8768.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8768) to regulate the business of loaning money on security of any kind by persons, firms, or corporations other than national banks, licensed bankers, trust companies, savings banks, building and loan associations, pawnbrokers, and real estate brokers in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amend-

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote upon the amendment changing the rate of interest from 2 per cent to per cent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri demands a separate vote on the amendment indicated.

Mr. DYER. It is found on page 6, line 10.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The question was taken, and the other amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment indicated by the gentleman from Missouri.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 10, page 6, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one."

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, this provision to disagree to the amendment offered and adopted in the Committee of the Whole is to put the matter back as it was when the bill was reported to the House by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The Committee on the District of Columbia believes that 2 per cent is the proper rate to go into this proposed law.

Mr. CAMPBELL. What is the rate now?

Mr. DYER. Not only is the Committee on the District of Columbia of that opinion, but it is the opinion of different organizations of citizens and ladies in patriotic organizations, also the Central Trades and Labor Union, that the rate shall be 2 per cent, and there are—

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer] yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Campbell]? Mr. DYER. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL. You say that there is a general agreement among people in the District interested in this legislation that the rate of interest shall be 2 per cent? Is that 2 per cent per annum?

Mr. DYER. Two per cent per month. Mr. CAMPBELL. Twenty-four per cent per annum.

Mr. DYER. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I think the House should understand what you mean by 2 per cent. Does it not occur to the gentleman that 24 per cent per annum is a pretty stiff rate of interest?

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman understands, of course, the business that it is desired to regulate. It desires to regulate the loan companies that loan money for a month, or two months, or three months at a time. They do not loan money for a year, and if you borrow it is borrowed in small amounts, say $25 or $50, and if you do not permit them to charge at the rate of 2 per cent per month for the one month, or two months, or three months, it would be impossible to regulate this business at all, because no person or no concern could handle the business and carry it along for less.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Is it not a fact that the legal rate of interest is 6 per cent in the District of Columbia?

Mr. DYER. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. And that law is being violated?

Mr. DYER. It is being violated by every one of these com-

Mr. CAMPBELL. Then what is to prevent the law from being violated which provides for 24 per cent?

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, this bill provides, and if the gentleman has read the bill-

Mr. CAMPBELL. I have read it very carefully. Mr. DYER (continuing). He will know it provides, in the first place, that these companies shall be licensed, and that they shall keep their books open for inspection and make reports to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, of persons to whom they have loaned, the amounts, and securities.

Mr. CAMPBELL. What evidence has the committee, which it can submit to the House, that the law fixing the rate at 6 per cent has been violated, and what rates have been charged in violation of the law?

Mr. DYER. The information which we have, Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman, is that about $2,000,000 are loaned out regularly by these different companies here in the District of Columbia, and that none of the money is loaned at a less rate than 2 per cent per month; that the bigger portion—I will say two-thirds of it—is loaned at 2 per cent, and more than 2 per cent, and as high as 10 per cent, and we want to get this fixed at a reasonable basis so that we can regulate these concerns and protect the people who have to borrow money from them.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Let me ask if this is not a fact, that an average of about 2 per cent has been charged, or 24 per cent per annum, so far, but that a certain line of gentlemanly bankers have refrained from making loans of that kind, and that the object of this law is to make a legal rate of 24 per cent per annum, that will permit gentlemen now engaged in banking to loan money at 24 per cent who do not care to take chances on loaning in violation of law?

Mr. DYER. The gentleman, I am sure, does not seriously believe that. In the first place—

Mr. CAMPBELL. I would like to have information upon the subject.

Mr. DYER. I say, in the first place, the maximum amount that can be loaned under the provisions of this proposed law is $300, and no one could loan anything under the provisions of this law unless they first take out a license, for which they pay $500 a year, and submit to all the regulations which are in detail enumerated in the bill, where the person has to put in the various items.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield to the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. DYER. Yes; I will yield.

Mr. JACKSON. Referring to the point made by my colleague [Mr. CAMPBELL], would not the effect of section 1 be not only to make a legal rate of 24 per cent, but also to establish a monopoly in the hands of the persons who take out this license, which costs them $500? In other words, will not the bill prevent a clerk in a department loaning money to another clerk, say, at 7 or 8 per cent? In order to comply with the provisions of this law he would first have to take out a license of $500.

Mr. DYER. That is the provision in the bill, that they must take out a license and give a bond.

And the license will cost them $500? Mr. JACKSON.

Mr. DYER. Yes. There are, perhaps, approximately 100 concerns or companies engaged in this business in Washington, and I think it would be a blessing to the people here if that number could be reduced to a much smaller number.

Mr. JACKSON. Does the gentleman think it would be a benefit to limit the privilege of loaning money solely to the people who take out a license of $500 and permit those people to charge 24 per cent?

Mr. DYER. Oh, the gentleman speaks of 24 per cent. He means 24 per cent a year.

Mr. JACKSON. Certainly.

Mr. DYER. But the gentleman knows, if he knows anything about the lending of money by these concerns in large cities, that they never loan it for a year, but only for two or three months at a time.

Mr. JACKSON. And a bank does not loan always for a year, either. But would you gentlemen advocate the fixing of interest at 2 per cent by banks here in the District of Columbia?

Mr. DYER. Oh, no. The security offered in these cases, Mr. Speaker, is generally of questionable value. Sometimes the security is not really worth anything. These people in loaning money take great risks, and they have to have some kind of remuneration therefor.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Chair if it is not true that the previous question was ordered on this bill the last time it was before the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands not.

Mr. NORRIS. Then I want to inquire of the gentleman from Missouri, if we are going to debate this question to-day, whether we can not make some arrangement about the division of time?

Mr. DYER. Does the gentleman desire some time? Mr. NORRIS. I would like to have some; oh, yes. Does the gentleman intend to move the previous question? Mr. DYER. I do; but I do not want to deprive the gentleman of time if he wants it.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the time ought to be divided between those who are for the bill and those who are opposed to it.

Mr. DYER. We can not do that as a committee. The members of the Committee on the District of Columbia are in favor

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that; but there are some Members in the House who are in favor of the amendment that has been adopted, which reduces this interest charge from 24 per cent to 12 per cent.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the debate upon this bill be limited to 40 minutes-20 minutes to be consumed by those in favor of the amendment and 20 minutes by those who are opposed to it—and that at the end of that time the previous question be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] asks unanimous consent that the debate on this amendment be limited to 40 minutes, one-half to be used by those in favor of the amendment and the other half by those opposed to it.

Mr. MANN. I suggest that one-half be controlled by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] and one-half by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS].

The SPEAKER. One half to be controlled by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] and the other half by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], and that at the end of the 40 minutes the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and the amendments thereto to its final passage.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman if he does not think he had better ask for a little more time? I do not know whether other gentlemen have asked for time, but I myself would like five minutes.

Mr. DYER. Does the gentleman desire to speak in favor of the amendment?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I desire to speak in opposition to the amendment.

Then, I would state to the gentleman that I will Mr. DYER.

see to it that he gets some time.

Mr. LONGWORTH. All right, then.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask the gentleman from Missouri if he will not include in his request that other amendments, in case this amendment is voted down, may be made? It is just possible that this amendment might be voted down, and unless a modification of the request is made it would be impossible to make any other amendments. It would have to be either 12 per cent per annum or 24 per cent. There are those who favor 14 per cent. would be precluded from making an amendment to that effect.

Mr. DYER. I will not agree to that, Mr. Speaker, because we have had that matter up and discussed it fully in the Committee of the Whole when this bill was under consideration before, and it is desirable to decide the question now as to whether the rate shall be 12 per cent or 24 per cent per annum.

Mr. NORRIS. Under those conditions I will not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Peters].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Speaker, the interest of the poorest class of borrowers demands the immediate pessage of this bill. Designed for their protection, the bill seeks to limit the amount which can be secured by unscrupulous money lenders from those unfortunates who are forced, through poverty or sickness, to borrow money from them.

The amendment before us seeks to provide that the rate of not more than 1 per cent shall be charged. The bill itself eliminates the old fee system and seeks to allow but a limited charge at a rate which the borrower will know and understand at the time the loan is made. This bill has the unanimous support of the people of Washington, the approval of its philanthropic institutions, and of a large number of individuals who have studied the question and on whose judgment it is safe to

The result of passing an amendment to forbid an interest rate in excess of 1 per cent must be to render the act absolutely without effect, and, though plausible in sound, the real effect of those supporting this amendment is to prevent rather than aid the protection of the small borrowers. So greatly impressed were the committee of the House that it was necessary to allow the lenders 2 per cent that all its members of both parties agreed on 2 per cent as that rate which would prove most effective in checking evil practices

The bill, in brief, makes it illegal to engage in the business of loaning money at a rate of interest greater than 6 per cent per annum without procuring a license, and it further provides that no loan shall be made at a rate greater than 2 per cent per month on the actual amount of the loan, "and this charge shall cover all fees, expenses, demands, and services of every character." It is further provided that an inspection should be made of these associations, and that they should be held strictly to the letter of the law.

The opposition to the bill seek now to destroy it, not by being opposed to the bill itself, but by claiming that the rate of 2 per cent per month is too great. At present there is a limit of 3 per cent per month in the District, but the great abuse comes from indiscriminate charges for attorneys' fees, for making out papers, for notarial and other fees, which bring up the poor victim's cost until he pays, in many instances, several hundred per cent on the original loan.

It has been shown by a letter from Bartholomew's Loan Association of New York, which was read by my colleague from Rhode Island [Mr. O'SHAUNESSY] to the House on January 8, that it was their opinion that it was impossible to do a loan business at 1 per cent per month. Those who do not hold this view are anxious to see 1 per cent passed by this House, believing that in that way the purpose of this bill will be thwarted; that associations will give up attempting to do business at 1 per cent per month, and that perhaps eventually the business will be turned over to the loan sharks operating outside of the District or that the law itself with such a provision will fail to pass the other branch of Congress.

Many of the Members who are supporting the rate of 1 per cent per month seem to believe that all Congress has to do is to enact a strict law forbidding a higher rate of interest than, say, 6 per cent, and so end the loan-shark business. not been the experience in any of our cities. In New York City, where until recently a higher rate than 6 per cent per annum has been prohibited, investigation revealed that more than 300 loan sharks are charging from 120 to 500 per cent per annum; and in Pennsylvania, where the 6 per cent law is also on the books, the conditions are most unfortunate. In one instance it was found that more than 700 per cent was being collected by one loan-shark man on his loans. These Members who so stoutly oppose this proper provision seem to forget that in the last year in 22 State legislatures similar bills were introduced, all allowing higher rates on small loans than the regular banking rate. In my own State of Massachusetts such a bill was introduced and became a law. This bill provides for a maximum not to exceed 3 per cent per month, and its enactment, providing for a supervisor of loan agencies, has been received with universal approbation by our people, and is one of the acts to which our Democratic governor, in his contest for reelection, pointed to with pride.

Banking rates of interest can not be imposed by statute on loans made on a security not acceptable to banks and where the return on each loan is but a small amount. The American workingman with a small annual wage, whenever he is met by misfortune, sickness, or ill luck in his family, must in some way tide over the necessity. Too proud to receive assistance, the only things he can borrow on are his small personal effects or his salary. Taking full advantage of the urgency of the situ-ation, the loan-shark man gets his poor victim in his clytches and then wrings from him the last dollar. Far greater evils have been reached in the United States by the small-loan system than in any other country. This is not because of the American's lack of thrift, but because our country has been conspicuously lacking in enacting social legislation, and particularly in recognizing the duty of the community toward its laboring portion. In England and the continental countries the evils of this system are fully recognized, and in France, England, and in Germany municipal or semipublic loan associations are in existence which advance money on household effects, jewelry, clothing, or other property at reasonable rates of interest to their

The fact that this loan evil has grown so rapidly shows the need that exists for this assistance. This need can not be successfully met by prohibiting loans. It exists as a real need and can only be properly met by provisions that allow the money to be obtained on small loans at reasonable rates of interest and the owner protected from the iniquities of the unregulated small-loan system. Those thoroughly interested in the movement to remedy the loan evil all agree that the unanimous report of the committee placing the rate at 2 per cent should be supported. To render this bill effective and to give to the people of the District of Columbia the best protection against loan sharks your committee urges this bill.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, in order that we may first get an understanding of the parliamentary situation now confronting the House, I want to state that on the last District day, when this bill was up, the amendment upon which we are now to have a separate vote was adopted in the Committee of the This amendment amended the bill as it came from the committee by changing the rate of interest that these loan people can charge from 24 per cent per annum to 12 per cent per annum. The amendment we are now about to vote upon provides for 12 per cent as the maximum amount of interest that can be charged. The Committee on the District of Columbia are trying to defeat that amendment, so that the bill will remain as it was introduced, and provide for 24 per cent per annum.

So much for the parliamentary situation. Now, I want to call the attention of gentlemen to the fact that when this bill was up before the House the last time this amendment was discussed at great length. We devoted a good share of the afternoon to this identical question, and after a full and fair debate and full consideration of the question, the Committee of the Whole House adopted the amendment fixing the rate at 12 per cent per annum.

Now, this morning the committee ask for a separate vote on this amendment in order to defeat it. I do not care at this time to recapitulate the argument that has been made.

We have been over it, we have considered it and discussed it from all points of view, and after that consideration and disposition by a large majority this particular amendment was put in the bill. Twelve per cent per annum is as much as anybody ought to be allowed to charge, and it is all that any man can afford to pay in any legitimate business or occupation. [Ap-

It is to my mind. Mr. Speaker, no argument to say that there are men who can not get accommodations, who can not get loans unless the rate is fixed at 24 per cent per annum. There is not a man in this city to-day but that would be better off if he was refused a loan at the rate of 24 per cent than he would if he succeeded in getting it.

Mr. CULLOP. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. NORRIS. I will.
Mr. CULLOP. If this 24 per cent rate should be adopted, would not it furnish a splendid opportunity for banks to decline to loan their funds under the legal rate of interest and put their capital into the hands of the loan shark, where he could exact 24 per cent?

Mr. NORRIS. I have no doubt that that might often occur. But, without regard to that. on the simple proposition of 12 per cent per annum as a rate of interest, every man who has had any experience in business knows that it is an extremely high rate, and that no man can afford to pay even that in any legitimate business and keep it up for any length of time. I believe that the House ought to stand by the action which it took two or three weeks ago and vote for the amendment, and unless some sufficient argument is offered by those who are in favor of 24 per cent per annum, I am in favor of retaining the amendment as adopted the other day. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentlemen from Ohio [Mr. Longworth].

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I was one of those who voted in favor of this amendment the last time the bill was up for consideration. I agree with the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Norms] on the general proposition that 12 per cent is a high rate of interest. I would still vote for this amendment had I not been convinced that, as a matter of fact, the rate under this provision will not be 24 per cent a year for the reason that the contract under which these loans are made requires the extinguishment of the principal every month. So that if $100 were borrowed for a year, under this provision as reported by the committee, the final amount to be paid would not be $24, but would be $13 or 13 per cent.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the gentlman yield for a question? Mr. LONGWORTH. Certainly.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to ask my friend from Ohio if, as a matter of fact, in practice it does not result in the payment of a greater sum than $24, for he pays that money at the end of the month and that interest will commence to draw interest again for the next month.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I think not, and for the purpose of showing that I will read some figures that I think will make clear to the House the general proposition as it has been made

I referred the other day, but I did not speak from accurate knowledge, to a concern in my native city which limits the interest charged to only 8 per cent a year, and yet that concern pays 5 per cent to its stockholders. Now, that is true, but I neglected to say, and I did not remember at that time, that under the law of Ohio 10 per cent of the amount loaned is added to the interest.

It is interesting to observe a comparison of these loans under this bill if it should become a law, with the interest limited to 2 per cent, and those loans under the Ohio law. For instance, the cost of borrowing $10 for three months, the smallest amount loaned by this company, is $1.20. That is 10 per cent of the loan plus the interest at 8 per cent. Under this bill, should it pass, the cost of borrowing $10 for three months would only be 42 cents, whereas the present loan-shark rate now is something over $3.

Now, coming down to the average sum, $40, borrowed for 9 months, under the Ohio system would cost $4.65, and under this bill it would be about the same. When you get to $100, in Ohio it would cost for 12 months $11.50, and under this bill it will be $13. Two hundred dollars under the Ohio system would be $23 and under this bill only $22.

So that under this bill, in which no allowance is made for fees or any cost for filing the papers, with a limit of 2 per cent per month, the actual cost of borrowing small sums would be a good deal less than in Ohio, and when you get to the large sums it would be about the same.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NORRIS. I will yield the gentleman one minute more, and would like to have him answer a question.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Very well.

Mr. NORRIS. When this bill was up before, did not t gentleman from Ohio offer an amendment to reduce the rates? When this bill was up before, did not the

Mr. LONGWORTH. I did, and have so stated; but since then it has been made clear to me from figures that have been brought to my attention by people interested in this bill from humanitarian standpoint only, and who have been working for years trying to relieve conditions under which the loan sharks have charged such outrageous interest, that the bill would not be effective if the amount is cut to less than 2 per cent. Under the circumstances I think the bill had better be passed as originally reported.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has again expired.
Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], if he will yield? The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Nebraska to use some of his time now.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I will yield one minute to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I desire to ask the gentleman a question. Is it not true that the people who have been endeavoring to break up these conditions of excessive interest rates are in favor of Mr. NORRIS. I think some of them are and some of them are not.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I will say to the gentleman from Nebraska that the communications that I have had indicate that the people who are proposing to abolish the loan sharks, so called, are the people who are behind the amendment which will authorize a monthly charge of 2 per cent.

Mr. NORRIS. But the gentleman has not received any communication from the borrower, has he, that is in favor of fixing the rate of 2 per cent?

Mr. SLAYDEN. I have not.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Texas yield?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes. The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman from Nebraska yield for a question?

Mr. NORRIS. I will when I get the floor.
Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Nebraska to use some of his time.
Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Campbell.]. In that connection I will say to the gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn] that when I get the floor again I will be glad to yield to him.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, this is very important legistion. It deals with a very serious subject. Twenty-four per lation. It deals with a very serious subject. Twenty-four per cent is a high rate of interest to legalize. The man is most unfortunate who has to go to a pawnbroker's office to borrow money. He is unfortunate even is he has to pay 12 per cent.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CAMPBELL. He is more unfortunate if he has to pay 18 per cent, but he is hopelessly unfortunate if he has to pay 24 per cent interest. I decline to yield, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. KAHN. But this is not a bill for pawnbrokers.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Oh, no; it is not for pawnbrokers. It is to gentlemanize the pawnbroker. It is to legalize high rates of interest that are now unlawful. The man who charges 24 per cent per annum looks just the same to me whether he has three balls in front of his establishment or a brass plate advertising a company that loans money at 24 per cent per annum.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that any rate of interest above 12 per cent is unreasonable and works a greater hardship upon the borrower than if he were permitted to go to a friend and get money at a reasonable rate that might be agreed upon. This bill makes it absolutely impossible for one friend to go to another and get accommodation. The fact is that this bill creates a monopoly in the lending of money to unfortunate people who are hard pressed for money and legalizes that monopoly in charging 24 per cent per annum for the accommodations given. To-day one clerk may go to another and get a loan at 10 per cent or at 12 per cent. He is not violating any law when he makes that loan. If this bill should pass, he violates the law by making a loan at any rate of interest if he has not taken out a license and paid the sum of $500 therefor.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CAMPBELL. Yes.

Mr. PETERS. Does the gentleman consider that such a clerk may properly be considered as one engaged in the business of loaning money, the only people who are affected by this bill?

Mr. CAMPBELL. He may do that. There are clerks I will say to the gentleman from Massachusetts who are making more than their salaries in lending money out at reasonable rates of interest to their coemployees. I am told they are lending money at reasonable rates, some at as high a rate as 12 per cent and some at 18, but none as high as 24 per cent.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Missouri to use some of his time now.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I used? The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri has 5 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Nebraska has 12 minutes

Mr. DYER. I will ask the gentleman from Nebraska to use the balance of his time.

Mr. NORRIS. Is the gentleman going to use all of his time in one speech?

Mr. DYER. I do not know yet.

Mr. NORRIS. I will use some of mine now. I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler].

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, the proposition of this bill is to create by law a money-lending monopoly, a thing unheard of in America among decent people.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. FOWLER. I yield to nobody but God and my constituency. [Laughter and applause.] I have only four minutes. The proposition to pay into the treasury of the District of Columbia $500 for each man licensed, thereby creating a moneylending monopoly, is something that every man in this House ought to be ashamed to vote for. Such a scheme would necessarily result in a monopoly, for no one but the big loan shark would be able to pay the license fee; all others would be shut out and the people would be dominated by a money-lending monopoly. It is said that there are people who have been bringing to bear certain pressure in order to license this moneylending business at 2 per cent per month. I have received a number of letters from different parties in this city, but I have received none from the money borrower; it is always from the money lenders and in the interest of money lenders that these letters are written.

Mr. Speaker, I would be ashamed to go back to my district and tell the people of the State of Illinois, even a single man, that I voted for a bill to license the lending of money at the rate of 24 per cent per annum [applause], and I do not intend to do it; that is more. [Applause.] Now, Mr. Speaker, there has always been an effort among what is called the better class of people to secure legislation to better their condition, and every time a law is passed for that purpose it works a hardship upon the poor people, the people who are the producers and the creators of the wealth of this country. On all occasions I intend to register my vote during my short stay here in this Hall against such a proposition. I desire to say to the money sharks of this city, in the language of Holy Writ:

Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this question was thrashed out when we had this bill under consideration in the Committee of the Whole House, where due consideration was given it, and it was amended by limiting the rate to 1 per cent per month or 12 per cent per annum, and every decent man on earth knows that 12 per cent is twice as much as any man should get for the lending of money.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SHARP].

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Speaker, in the brief time which is allotted to me I do not expect to give anything like a thorough discussion of this amendment. If I was to write an amendment which seems to me would be more in accordance with the justice of the proposition it would be to allow the larger rate for the lending of small sums—say $50 or under—on account of certain necessary charges which involve as much expense as for amounts 10 times as large.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SHARP. For a brief question.
Mr. KAHN. If the gentleman will investigate the matter he will find that a great number of loans in the District do not aggregate over $50 at the maximum, and the majority are for sums anywhere from $10 up to $35.

Mr. SHARP. I recognize that the chattel mortgage loan institution is just as much a necessity, and, perhaps, more to the people of limited means with small salaries than are banking institutions, because in the larger financial institutions it is almost impossible for the small borrower to get any accommodation whatever; but as between the amendment calling for 1 per cent a month, or 2 per cent a month, I certainly favor the 1 per cent rate. It strikes me that 2 per cent a month, whether the amount is large or small, is altogether excessive. glad that this bill, in addition to fixing the rate, throws about it more rigid restrictions protecting the borrower, because, if there has been any one abuse more than any other-and the same is applicable also to the institutions of like character in other cities-it has been in the loaning on chattel mortgages, so much so that only the other day I had the pleasure of reading a news item stating that one of these unconscionable loan sharks, a millionaire, out in the city of Milwaukee had been set to work upon a stone pile for three months in expiation of the sin of charging excessive interest rates to the poor people who unfortunately fell into his clutches. I do not think, as a general rule, we can enact regulations too severe and too drastic to correct a situation which in many instances has been notoriously bad in this city. One has but to read the advertisements of some of these loan companies appearing any day in our city papers to understand the seductive power which is exerted over the minds of those who are so unfortunate as to need pressing accommodations.

A poor working woman in this city once told me that she had been actually ordered off her sick bed and commanded to yield up her furniture by an agent of one of these loan-shark concerns, who came to collect the loan on which she had been charged an excessive interest; she told me of other cases nearly as bad. I have no doubt there are creditable associations in this which are doing a legitimate business, and I do not feel like putting any restrictions on that class which are unjust or unreasonable, but if I were to conclude in a word it would be to say, as between the rate of 1 per cent per month, meaning 12 per cent per annum, which is 50 per cent higher than the rate in my own State of Ohio, beyond which it is usury, as against 24 per cent, I am in favor of the smaller rate.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I endeavored to point out that, while it is true that in Ohio the interest is 8 per cent per year, they are allowed to charge 10 per cent on the face value of the amount borrowed in addition. So, that while in Ohio, for instance, the cost of berrowing $100 for a year would be $11.50-that is, in the Cincinnati institution I referred to-the rate allowed under this law under this bill would be $13, or 13 per cent.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. There was a mistake made as to the time. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] has 3 minutes and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer] had 10. Five minutes were charged against the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] that should have been charged to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. KAHN],
Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, no man wants to allow an exorbitant rate of interest at any time, and 2 per cent per mouth, 24 per cent per annum, does look like an exorbitant rate of interest. But here in the District of Columbia, with hundreds of Government employees in the clutches of the loan sharks, it is a case of regulating the business so that hereafter a man will not be gouged as he is at the present time. Cases have been brought to the attention of the Committee on the District of Columbia to show that unfortunate men and women are held up here for rates of interest varying from 75 to 325 per cent per annum on small loans. It is the effort of the committee to prohibit that sort of thing. The charitably-inclined ladies and gentlemen who have investigated this matter contend positively that the business can not be continued at a less rate than 2 per cent per month. An effort was made here to conduct the business for a less rate and it failed. It is either a case of regulating this at a 2 per cent rate or allowing hundreds of people to borrow this money from the loan sharks and continue at their

The Central Labor Union here, which represents the working people of this District, many of whom during periods of financial distress have to avail themselves of the opportunity to borrow money from these money lenders, recommend 2 per cent.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentle-man from Rhode Island [Mr. O'SHAUNESSY]. Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Speaker, I have had occasion heretofore to speak in recommendation of the 2 per cent per month feature of this bill, and I trust that the committee will inderse the stand taken by the Committee on the District of Columbia, which has exhaustively investigated this question. As the gentleman from California [Mr. KAHN] says, no one wants to see an exorbitant rate of interest imposed upon the needy borrowers, but when we consider that 22 States in the Union have remedial legislation of this kind and that the rate of interest in those States varies from 1 to 3 per cent per month-and I believe the general run of them is $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 per cent per month—it seems to me we are not going beyond a reasonable limit in defining a rate of interest to those compelled to borrow money under these circumstances.

I have had occasion heretofore to say that an institution in the city of New York, charitable in its nature, free from the expense of rent, light, heat, and telephone service, made an effort to conduct a paying business on 1½ per cent per month, and at the end of a month they had amassed the large sum of $2.50 as profit. In the face of those experiences and those demonstrations, I ask this committee to be reasonable in the considera-tion of this proposition and not to defeat the purpose which the committee has in view and which these charitable organizations have in view, to lessen the imposition and the hardship of Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, as long as one lives in a swamp he has to expect mosquitoes, leeches, and other bloodsuckers, and as long as we live under the capitalist system we must expect loan sharks, pawnshops, and other vampires. Twentyfour per cent interest is a hard thing to legalize, I admit, but we are legalizing an average annual wage of $476, while the value of the average annual product of a wageworker is $1,151. So long as we have an average wage of $476 per annum while the value of the average product is $1,151 per annum, so long the working people will be as poor as they are. They will have no credit in the banks, nor have credit with the landlord, the butcher, the groceryman, or the druggist, and, therefore, they will go to the pawnshop keeper and the loan shark whenever they need money and are in distress. We can not legislate the loan sharks out of the business for that reason.

There is a law limiting the rate of interest to 6 per cent annually in almost every State. We have similar statutes in Wisconsin, New York, and Pennsylvania. And yet the loan sharks in New York get as high as 700 per cent per annum. In Philadelphia they get as high as 500 per cent, and in Milwaukee they used to get 400 and 500 per cent. I remember an instance about 18 years ago where a man paid $350 in interest money and still owed the original amount of $60. loan shark wanted to take his furniture away from him. poor fellow came to me for help. I told him to say to the agent or collector that Victor Berger had advised the victim to take a shotgun and shoot the loan shark if he should try to take away the furniture. [Laughter and applause.] When the money lender was told of such eminent legal advice he called the thing square and returned the note. [Laughter.] However, the poor man had paid $350 interest on a loan of $60.

In 22 cities of our country, Mr. Speaker, they have founded benevolent associations to remedy the loan-shark evil. In Europe they have municipal loan banks for that purpose. I believe the District of Columbia ought to establish an institution to lend money to those who get hard up without any fault of their own, and I can see no good reason why such persons should not get their loan free of charge; that is, without any interest at all. That would help some, but we can not entirely eradicate the evil under the capitalist system. And until you are prepared to establish a Government institution I hope that you are going to vote for this bill. The labor organizations of the District have asked for it, and all the scientific and charitable societies that have studied the question are also in favor of the bill. I am not afraid to go back to Milwaukee after voting for this bill. And my constituency is more radical and more wide-awake on social questions than that of the gentleman from Illinois. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker; I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Redfield].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Redfield] is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. REDFIELD. Mr. Speaker, this evil of the loan shark is so widely recognized by industrial concerns that many of them make a business of specially loaning money without interest to their employees for the purpose of destroying it. I like to see that done, but I believe it is a fact that business experience has demonstrated that this business can not be done on the short-time loans and the small-volume loans at less than 2 per cent per month and survive.

The borrowers do not look at it as paying high interest. look at it merely as paying a fee for a small loan which they greatly need.* When persons berrow $20 for four months and pay $1.60 for the privilege, they think they are mighty well off, for they can get it nowhere else. In my judgment, Mr. Speaker, whoever puts into effect a restriction to 1 per cent per month plays directly into the hands of the loan shark that this bill aims to destroy. [Applause.]

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman to yield back the rest of his time.

Mr. REDFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me a remarkable coincidence that those Members who favor the 24 per cent rate do it ostensibly in opposition to the so-called loan shark. gentleman from California [Mr. KAHN] says these employees of the Government are in the clutches of the loan shark. Well, if they are we are in rather a poor position to take them out by compelling them to pay this exorbitant rate of 24 per cent per annum. If we want to get the people out from the clutches of the loan shark, let us put the rate down where the those who are compelled to go to these people for meney.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman says that if the rate is fixed at 1 per cent per month it will not be effective; that the men who are engaged man from Wisconsin [Mr. Berger], a member of the committee.

ment answers the argument of the other gentleman who wants to put the loan sharks out of business. If they can not afford to loan money at 1 per cent per month, there is no way to compel them to, and God knows nobody wants them to. It would be better to put the loan sharks out of business by imposing such a rate that the people who are compelled to borrow will at the same time get out of their clutches. Unless you make it reasonably low, they will never be able to do this.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. NORRIS. In just a moment. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Berger] says that unless we leave the rate at 2 per cent the people who are loaning the money will go out of the business. He says they can not do the business for less than that.

I want to say to my friend from Wisconsin that if when they loan money at 12 per cent per annum they are unable to make enough to stay in the business, it seems to me the best thing this Congress can do is to make it possible for these men to go out of the business. We can get along without loan sharks and pawn shops. The gentleman makes the argument that it will not be as bad at 2 per cent as it is now, when they get 3 per cent. It would be just as reasonable to say that men who have been stealing should in the future be prohibited from stealing unless they confine their thefts to a certain class of property. [Applause.]

has one minute and a half left.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, there is a law now in force in the Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, there is a law now in force in the District of Columbia, passed by the Congress of the United States, permitting pawnbrokers in the District of Columbia to charge 3 per cent a month, or 36 per cent per annum. This bill, which makes the rate which can be charged by money lenders 2 per cent a month, is less than the rate authorized by Congress for pawnbrokers. If this bill becomes a law, it reduces the amount that pawnbrokers can charge from 3 per cent a month to 2 per cent a month and puts them upon the same class as these money lenders.

In advocating the passage of this bill as originally introduced, providing for 2 per cent a month instead of the 1 per cent proposed in the amendment, I wish to say that the 2 per cent rate has the indorsement in writing and before the committee of the Central Labor Union of the District of Columbia. We have the indorsement of the Woman's Welfare League of the District of Columbia, of the Monday Evening Club, and of the Associated Charities. Every organization is in favor of this rate.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

All time has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. LEVY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the The SPEAKER. The gentleman from finners makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and sixty-four Members—not a quorum present. Under the rule the years and the country of the country of the deeps the deeps the deeps the nays are ordered. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. DYER. I ask unanimous consent that the Speaker state to the House the amendment which is before the House.

The SPEAKER. If you vote for this amendment you vote for 1 per cent a month. If you vote against it you vote for 2 per cent a month.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Clayton). He did not.
Mr. ADAMSON. I voted "yea." I desire to withdraw t vote and answer "present." I desire to withdraw that

The Clerk called the name of Mr. Adamson, and he answered

"Present," as above recorded.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I voted "no" on the roll call. I see that I am paired with the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. Underwood, and I desire to withdraw my vote and be recorded as "present."

The Clerk called the name of Mr. Mann, and he answered

"Present," as above recorded.

The result of the vote was then announced, as above recorded. The SPEAKER pro tempore. A quorum is present; the Doorkeeper will open the doors and further proceedings under the call will be dispensed with. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk the following motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Recommit to the Committee on the District of Columbia, with instructions to report forthwith, the bill H. R. 8768, heretofore ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, with the following instructions, to wit: First, on line 10, page 5, section 6, change the word "one," as heretofore amended, to "one and one half."

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Missouri is not entitled to be recognized for the purpose of making that motion.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. MADDEN. Is it within the rule to offer an amendment to the instructions?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is; at this time.

Mr. MADDEN. Then, I move to amend the instructions to the committee so as to make them read "2 per cent up to $75 and 1 per cent for all loans above that amount."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Nebraska makes the point of order against the motion to recommit. The Chair is of opinion that the motion made by the gentleman from Missouri is in order, and therefore overrules the point of order

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky moves the previous question on the motion offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. MADDEN. There is an amendment pending to that, Mr.

Mr. SHERLEY. And upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it. Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois, my colleague, has offered an amendment to the motion to recommit. Must that not be reported before the previous question can be ordered?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "one and a half" and insert in lieu thereof the words 2 per cent up to $75, and 1 per cent on all loans above that amount."

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I now renew my motion to order the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on ordering the previous question on the motion submitted by the gentleman from Missouri and the amendment thereto offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken, and the previous question was ordered.

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

For the balance of the day:

Mr. Pou with Mr. PICKETT.

Until further notice:

Mr. Ansberry with Mr. Utter.

George Goeke

Mr. Bell of Georgia with Mr. Anthony. Mr. Booher with Mr. Browning.

Mr. Burgess with Mr. Hayes.

Mr. CARTER with Mr. HAWLEY.

Mr. Cox of Ohio with Mr. JACKSON.

Mr. WHITE with Mr. HEALD,

Mr. EDWARDS with Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota.

Mr. ELLERBE with Mr. MATTHEWS.

Mr. ESTOPINAL with Mr. Dodds.

Mr. FITZGERALD with Mr. BARCHFELD.

Mr. Howard with Mr. Cary.

Mr. LINDSAY with Mr. PRINCE.

Mr. McHenry with Mr. Reyburn. Mr. Stanley with Mr. Tilson. Mr. Taggart with Mr. Weeks.

Mr. SHERLEY with Mr. PLUMLEY.

Mr. SHERWOOD with Mr. Young of Michigan.

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama with Mr. VREELAND.

Mr. WEBB with Mr. PORTER.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. Proceedings under the call will be suspended and the doors will be opened. The question is, Shall the amended bill pass?

The question was taken, and the bill was passed.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the title by striking out on the fourth line of the title the word "pawnbrokers."

This is to comply with an amendment heretofore passed.

Mr. MANN. That amendment did not pass; "pawnbrokers" remained in the bill. I would ask the Clerk whether, on page 8, line 23, the committee amendment was agreed to or disagreed to; whether the words "or to the business of pawnbrokers" are in the bill or were stricken out?

The SPEAKER. It was stricken out in the Committee of the Whole, so the Clerk says.

Mr. NORRIS. And the amendment has been approved by the House.

The SPEAKER. Of course. The question the gentleman from Illinois raised was whether that particular amendment which concerns the motion of the gentleman from Missouri had been stricken out in the Committee of the Whole. The gentleman from Missouri moves to amend the title. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the title by striking out the word "pawnbrokers" in next to e last line of the title.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. On motion of Mr. Johnson of Kentucky, his motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. Speaker, I voted upon the roll call just preceding the last one, when I was paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. Michael E. Driscoll. I do not usually pair and I had forgotten it at the time. I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD and Journal may be corrected so as to let me withdraw my vote and answer "present."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Ham-LIN] asks unanimous consent that the roll call preceding this last one shall be corrected so as to show him voting "present" instead of voting-

Mr. HAMLIN. In the affirmative.

The SPEAKER. In the affirmative. Is there objection?

[After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

RESTORING NAME OF OREGON AVENUE.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill S. 4109.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 4109) to restore the name of Oregon Avenue, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Or Columbia, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That the name of Oregon Avenue be restored to the street lying between New Hampshire Avenue and Elighteenth Street NW., in the District of Columbia, and said avenue shall be extended so as to include Cedar Place, and shall hereafter be known and designated as Oregon Avenue: Provided, That the name of the highway leading from North Capitol Street to Rock Creek Park, now known as Oregon Avenue, shall hereafter be known and designated as Concord Avenue.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr.

O'SHAUNESSY

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Speaker, in this bill it is designed to restore the name of Oregon Avenue to the street lying between New Hampshire Avenue and Eighteenth Street NW., the District of Columbia, and extended so as to include Cedar Place, so that it shall hereafter be known as Oregon Avenue. This is a question where the District Commissioners, under some authority which has been questioned, changed the name of Oregon Avenue to Swann Street, and, as generally occurs in such cases, inconvenience has arisen through confusion in delivery of goods and other annoyances, which, I might say, are generally incidental to changes of this kind. The Senate bill restores the name of the street to Oregon Avenue, and I understand that the residents along the street are in favor of the change restoring the name. In a conversation I had the other day with Senator Bacon, of Georgia, who happens to live on Oregon Avenue, he told me of a case where some of this confusion arose. A man had an order to deliver coal on a very bitter day to a resident of the avenue, and the Senator seeing the man was going away with the coal, acting as a good Samaritan, inquired if he was looking for somebody on Oregon Avenue. The man said he was looking for somebody on Swann Street; the confusion of names was going to result in a temporary loss to the tenant of the coal which he had ordered and an unnecessary labor for the driver of the wagon.

I am glad to make mention of this fact, in order to show that there is such a goodly feeling in the breast of the Senators and to show that they are so kindly disposed to do an act of humanity. There has not been any overwhelming demand for this change to Swann Street, and in response to an inquiry by the Senate of the District Commissioners, they have entered into a lengthy dissertation on the reasons and the laws which give them the right to change the names. The Senate committee having charge of the bill made a report, from which I quote:

In this view and because of the fact that the residents on the original Oregon Avenue desire to retain the name that the highway has borne for so long a time, your committee is of opinion that the name ought to be restored. Furthermore, it seems desirable that the avenue should be extended from Eighteenth Street to Nineteenth Street by the elimination of Cedar Place, and with that end in view your committee favor the restoration of the name and the extension of the avenue as provided in the bill introduced by the chairman of this committee.

The reason assigned by the Senate committee seemed suffi-cient to your Committee on the District of Columbia, and it has taken up that report and made it practically their own.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?
The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I will.
Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman state why the name was changed from a name that begins with a letter "O" to a name commencing with a letter "S"?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I do not know.

Where streets come in between the lettered Mr. MANN. streets the commissioners, a few years ago, undertook to carry out the plan of the city of Washington by a giving a street that came north of a lettered street a name commencing with that So anyone could tell where Swann Street is, and it is the first street north of S Street. When you come down to O Street you will find the same thing there, and as to W Street and every street except Corcoran Street and Church Street. They have not all been changed, but in recent years they have been changing them up in that part of the city to conform to that idea. If it was not for the peculiar circumstances in this case, I should say to change the name back was exceedingly bad policy. But as this bill has already passed Senator Bacon, I think we can not help ourselves.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. O'SHAUNESSY] to the fact that the amendment reported by the House is already in the Senate bill

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. No amendment was reported by the committee.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the

On motion of Mr. Johnson of Kentucky, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 18956) making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, with Mr. SAUNDERS in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the purchase of the necessary instruments, office furniture, stationery, and other authorized articles required for the equipment and use of the officers' schools at the several military posts, $6,000.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the word "six," in line 9, page 27, and insert the word "four," so that it will read:

Four thousand dollars.

I make that motion because the Quartermaster General, on page 80 of the hearing, volume 1, says that item can be cut

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 9, strike out the word "six," and insert in lieu thereof the word "four."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY]. The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Incidental expenses, Quartermaster's Department: Postage; cost of telegrams on official business received and sent by officers of the Army; extra pay to soldiers employed on extra duty, under the direction of the Quartermaster's Department, in the erection of barracks, quarters, and storehouses, in the construction of roads and other constant labor for periods of not less than 10 days, and as clerks for post quartermasters at military posts, and for prison overseers at posts designated by the War Department for the confinement of general prisoners, and for the United States military prison guard; for expenses of expresses to and from frontier posts and armies in the field, of escorts to paymasters and other disbursing officers and to trains where military escorts can not be furnished; authorized office furniture, hire of laborers in the Quartermaster's Department, including the care of officers' mounts when the same are furnished by the Government, and the hire of interpreters, spies, or guides for the Army; compensation of clerks and other employees to the officers of the Quartermaster's Department, and clerks, foremen, watchmen, and organist for the United States military prison, and incidental expenses of recruiting; for the apprehension, securing, and delivering of deserters, including escaped military prisoners, and the expenses incident to their pursuit, and no greater sum than $50 for each deserter or escaped military prisoners, and the expenses incident to their pursuit, and no greater sum than $50 for each deserter or escaped military prisoner shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid to any civil officer or cltizen for such services and expenses; for a donation of $5 to each dishonorably discharged prisoner upon his release from confinement, under court-martial sentence, involving dishonorable discharge; for the following expenditures required for the several regiments of Cavalry, the batteries of Light Artillery, and such companies of Infantry and scouts as may be mounted, the authorized number of officers' horses, and for the trains, to wit: Hire of veterinary surgeons, purchase of medicines for horses and mules, picket ropes, blacksmith's tools and naterials, horseshoes and blacksmith's tools for the Cavalry service, and for the shoeing of horses and mules, and such additional expenditures as are necessary and authorized by law in the movements and operations of the Army, and at military posts, and not expressly assigned to any other department, $1,736,337.

[At the request of Mr. Helm, the foregoing paragraph was again read.]

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph which has just been read at the Clerk's desk represents the form in which this appropriation is made. I now send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read in my time the form in which I think this appropriation could, with more satisfaction to Congress, be made. I ask that the paper I have sent to the Clerk's desk be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. HELM. May I have one more minute? I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to proceed for one minute more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELM. My purpose in having the last paper read is not that I stand for or youch for the amount of each item, because the items exceed the total amount of the appropriation, but simply in order that it may appear in the RECORD and illustrate the manner in which I think appropriations of this character should be made.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, as I stated last Saturday, when the bill was up before, the purpose of omitting the specific amounts for each item contained in this paragraph and placing them in the bill, as suggested by the gentleman from Kentucky, is this: It frequently happens that in the segregation of the lump sum one of the particular items for which the estimates are made may require an amount largely in excess of the original estimates; in fact, a number of the commodities that have to be provided out of this lump-sum appropriation may require a considerable sum in excess of the original estimates. Now, if the bill provided the specific amount for every one of these estimates, the consequence would be that the department would be coming in here continually with deficiency estimates, and, in my judgment-

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. KAHN. Certainly.

Mr. SHERLEY. Why could not that objection be avoided absolutely by a provision allowing 10 per cent of any one item to be used for another item? That is frequently done in the bills that are passed by this House, coming out of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KAHN. Possibly a 10 per cent increase might meet the situation. But it might require a larger percentage. As I pointed out to the gentleman from Kentucky on last Saturday, many of the items that are purchased by the department vary in price from month to month. Take the question of forage, of which I spoke on Saturday. The department makes an estimate upon the prices that have prevailed during the last year or two. If there is a shortage in the production of any one of those articles that go into the forage ration the department has to pay a very large amount in excess of the figure which the department estimated upon, and therefore the department should be allowed to transfer the amount from one item to another.

That is one reason why the department should be allowed to exercise some discretion in the matter.

Now, if the department should not be permitted to exercise that discretion, this is what happens to the tradesman: He furnishes his supplies to the department, and it may be a year or more before he can get his money, and that is not fair to That is, he will have to wait until a deficiency appropriation is passed by Congress. No hardship has ever come from the fact that appropriations are made in this way, and so far as the items themselves are concerned, the officers of the War Department who come before the committee state specifically what they want the money for. In my judgment they should have a certain amount of latitude, so as to avoid deficiency.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to delay the committee by any lengthy discussion of this proposition, but the difference between the contention of the gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn] and that of my colleague [Mr. Helm] lies in this, that one seems to think that a detailed presentation before the committee originally presenting the bill to the House is all that is necessary to prevent undue expenditure by the department, and the other does not think so.

Now, I agree with the gentleman from California that it would be impracticable and unwise to make an arbitrary division of the items that go to make up this total. But it is a thing that is perfectly practicable to do, as is constantly done as to items aggregating large totals, to permit of a transfer of, say, 10 per cent of the amount allowed for any one item to another item. The advantage of presenting the matter to the House in some degree of detail is that the attention of the House-not simply of the Committee on Military Affairs, but of the House itself-may be called to where the money goes, because it often happens-and the gentleman himself is aware of it-that the average Member has neither the time nor the information that would enable him to refer to the hearings and ascertain what a committee dealing with a subject knows. But when it is presented in the bill it will immediately attract the attention of some Member of the House and call forth explanation and defense.

My criticism of all the departments-and it is particularly true of both the War Department and the Navy Department-is not that we maintain too large establishments, but that the methods by which they are maintained are unnecessarily extravagant and expensive. Inasmuch as there seems to be but little disposition to get correction from the administrative end, it follows that Congress must continue to insist, as it has been doing in the recent past, upon having the estimates so itemized and presented here on the floor that we can exercise an individual judgment that might not be necessary if more judgment were exercised somewhere else. And while we realize that it is impracticable to make the change in this bill at this time, I think the suggestion is well worth the attention of the Committee on Military Affairs, and wherever a gross appropriation is made, amounting to $1,000,000 or more, if it is possible to divide it and present it in segregated parts it ought to be done.

I should like to ask the chairman of the com-Mr. KAHN. mittee a question. The original estimates were for $2,000,000?

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. KAHN. Can the gentleman inform the committee just why the reductions are made?

Mr. HAY. A reduction of $20,000 was made upon the recommendation of the Quartermaster General, which you will find on page 89 of the hearings. The other reduction was made by reason of sections in the bill providing for a supply corps and a service corps.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Horses for Cavalry, Artillery, Engineers, etc.: For the purchase of horses of ages, sex, and size as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, for remounts, for officers entitled to public mounts, for the Cavalry, Artillery, Signal Corps, and Engineers, the United States Military Academy, service schools, and staff colleges, and for the Indian scouts, and for such Infantry and members of the Hospital Corps in field campaigns as may be required to be mounted, and the expenses incident thereto, and for the hire of employees: Provided, That the number of horses purchased under this appropriation, added to the number now on hand, shall be limited to the actual needs of the mounted service, including reasonable provisions for remounts, and, unless otherwise ordered by the Secretary of War, no part of this appropriation shall be paid out for horses not purchased by contract after competition duly invited by the Quartermaster's Department and an inspection under the direction and authority of the Secretary of War. When practicable, horses shall be purchased in open market at all millitary posts or stations, when needed, at a maximum price to be fixed by the Secretary of War: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the purchase of any horses below the standard set by Army Regulations for Cavalry and Artillery horses, except when purchased as remounts, or for instruction of cadets at the United States Military Academy: Provided further, That the accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed to remove any suspensions or disallowances in the accounts of quarter-masters for the fiscal years 1910, 1911, and 1912, for the purchase, care, and foraging of horses, because of age, sex, or size, and for the purchase of seeds, machinery, and for labor and other expenditures in connection with the raising of forage at remount depots, from appro-priations of the Quartermaster's Department, $300,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. HAY. I will explain the new language to the gentleman, if that is what he desires.

Mr. MANN. Just a word, and then the gentleman can ex-ain. As I understand from this paragraph, it is now proposed that the Government shall engage in the breeding of horses. I do not know that I have any objection to that.

Mr. HAWLEY. It is already so engaged.

Mr. HAY. I did not understand the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. I understand from this paragraph as presented that the Army proposes to engage in the breeding of horses.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. The provision that was contained in last years' bill in reference to that matter is out of this one. Mr. MANN. Heretofore for some years we have carried a

That no part of this appropriation shall be used for breeding

That is left out of this paragraph, and in its stead, not at the same place, is inserted a provision authorizing the Secretary of War to buy horses of ages and sexes as he may desire, I suppose plainly for breeding purposes. I do not wish to say that I am opposed to that proposition, but'I should like to inquire in regard to it.

Mr. HAY. The words at the beginning of the paragraph:

For the purchase of horses of ages, sex, and size as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War—were put in, not with any view of buying horses for breeding purposes, but because the Comptroller of the Treasury has decided that the department could not pay for the young horses. He has also disallowed some vouchers because of the sex and size of the animals. A number of suspended and disallowed accounts against officers who have made such purchases are pending before the comptroller.

The provision which was heretofore carried in the bill providing that no part of this appropriation should be expended for breeding purposes was left out to give the department the opportunity of buying a few stallions for breeding purposes. Now, so far as I am concerned, I have on objection to that proviso going back if anybody is opposed to the proposition. I think myself this is a good idea, but I am not sufficiently interested in and I do not think the department is sufficiently interested in it to make a point of it. But the other new language in the paragraph is made necessary for the reason that if the law is not changed the remount stations will have to be done away with and we will have to cease buying young horses.

Mr. MANN. I should like to ask the gentleman if there is anything in the Army regulations in force under the law at this time that prevents the Army from using mares in the Cavalry service?

Mr. HAY. No; I think not. Mr. MANN. How does the question of sex arise? Mr. HAY. Perhaps there may be such a regulation, but I do not know how that arises.

Mr. MANN. I am quite confident that if there is such a regulation it has been very frequently violated.

I know that the Comptroller has in several cases refused to allow vouchers for the purchase of horses of a certain

Mr. MANN. I do not know but that it would be a good thing for the Government to engage in this work of breeding the young mares that it may have for remounts.

Mr. HAY. I do not agree with the gentleman.
Mr. MANN. It is perfectly plain that that is what is going to happen.

Mr. HAY. That is not the intention.

Mr. MANN. It may not be the intention of the committee. Mr. HAY. It is not the intention of the department as disclosed to the committee.

Mr. MANN. I have frequently observed that where you confer power on a department and there is some one in that department that is anxious to have that power exercised, it is quite likely to be exercised. This certainly gives that power to the department.

Mr. HAY. It gives power to the department to buy mares for the purpose of using them as remounts or Cavalry horses. Mr. MANN. An

And stallions?

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. MANN. Well, you do not need anything more for the purposes of breeding.

Mr. HAY. It is not intended to breed horses for cavalry emounts. The stallions would be bred to farmers' mares.

That is the purpose.

Mr. MANN. On the other hand, there are a large number of mares at the remount station, and it is very easy to breed them there with stallions purchased under this appropriation, and it undoubtedly will be done. If the committee or Congress wants to do it, I do not object.

Mr. HAY. I do not object.

Mr. HAY. I do not want it and I should object to it.

Mr. KAHN. If the gentleman will yield, I want to say that in the hearings, volume 1, page 124, Gen. Aleshire said:

Gen. Aleshire. Mr. Chairman, in the bill, page 34, at the bottom of the page, the last line, you will find the words, "for the purchase of horses of ages, sex, and size as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War for remounts," and those words are all new language, but are not printed in Italies.

horses of ages, sex, and size as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War for remounts," and those words are all new language, but are not printed in Italies.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do you change that?

Gen. ALESHIEE. The Comptroller of the Treasury has decided we could not pay for the young horses. He also disallowed some vouchers because of the sex and of the size of the animals. We have a number of suspended and disallowed accounts against officers who have purchased them.

I understood from what was said that the original intention was to buy geldings, but some of the officers bought these animals when quite young, expecting they would attain the proper size according to the regulations within a reasonable time, but that the horses had not grown to the full size and allowances have been stopped accordingly. That is my recollection of it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the point of order.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

On page 30, line 11, strike out the word "three" and insert the word "two." After the word "hundred" insert the word "seventy-five," so that it will read "$275,000."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I suppose that the offering of this amendment is the logical and consistent result of the course of the gentleman from Virginia heretofore in the bill. But I am not in favor of striking down the Army of the United States. We have now a proposition to cripple the Navy, but here is a proposition to cut off one-third of the Cavalry at a time when we may need it. I think-it is a wrong policy, dettime when we may need it. I think-it is a wrong policy, detrimental to the interests of the Government and of the country, and ought not to be pursued. Just what fine distinction has been offered by somebody to say that we could dispense with 5 Cavalry regiments out of 15, instead of 4 or 6 out of 15, has not been explained. It is pure guesswork, and, in my judgment, without a sufficient knowledge of the appreciation of the needs of the country. I hope the amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I may say for this side of the House that it has no more intention or purpose of striking down the Army of the United States than has the gentleman from Illinois, and the abolition of five regiments of Cavalry is dictated solely for the purpose of trying to get some decrease in the expenditures without impairing the efficiency of the

It has always seemed to me that when the Army or Navy bill was under discussion somebody somewhere discovered a war scare, which seems to be thrown at us for the purpose of trying to get us to maintain the expenditures at the height which they are now.

Now, we do not propose to impair the efficiency of the Army. We do not want to strike it down. If these five regiments of Cavalry are not to be maintained, this amendment ought to be adopted, because the money can be saved, and I hope, therefore, that the amendment will be agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Mann) there were 37 ayes and 18 noes.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by inserting, after the word "war," line 21, page 29, the words:

Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for breeding purposes.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to that amend-

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt the gentleman for just a moment?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Certainly.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to the gentleman that in this country there is a great lack of horses that are suitable for military purposes. That has been recognized throughout the country. Tremendous effort has been made to equip the Army with proper horses, but the Government has not been able to find them. The race track has been abolished nearly everywhere, and its abolition has put a stop to the breeding of suitable horses. A few high-grade horses, horses that Congress would never consent to purchase, have been presented to the Government, and I hope that no amendment will forbid the use of those horses for the general welfare of the country and of the service. I think that the language of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois would put a stop to the use of horses that are worth, I am told, in one or two instances as much as fifteen or twenty thousand dollars each, which horses have been given to the Government by patriotic gentlemen who are or have been horse breeders.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman tell the committee where those horses came from?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, they probably came from Kentucky.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. This is the same provision that was put in the bill last year after quite a spirited discussion on the floor of this House.

Mr. HAY. It has been in the bill a long while.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. It was talked about a good deal at any rate. It occurs to me that the Government does not desire to go into business of this kind and that we ought to still carry this provision in the bill; that it is not the intention to buy these remount farms and then go into the business of Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that there is a great deal in the contention of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Slayden]. As perhaps all of the members of the committee know, a great change has taken place in the industry of breeding horses. The number of horses bred annually that are suitable for this particular purpose will be reduced a great many thousand each succeeding years and I know duced a great many thousand each succeeding year, and I know it is true that a number of horses of great reputation, horses which sometimes to my sorrow have not lived up to their high reputation [laughter], have been presented to the Government.

Mr. HELM. The gentleman does not mean that they have not lived up to their reputation, but that they have not performed up to it.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I have seen some Kentucky horses perform in such a way that I would be ashamed to admit that they came from the State of New Jersey. [Laughter.] I have seen them perform in such a manner as would be calculated to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of any gentleman from Kentucky. However, seriously, the United States Government has been donated a number of these horses. Thousands of them are being sent out of the country to France and Belgium or to England. There is grave danger that the Army, particularly the Cavalry branch, will be affected by this change in the condition of affairs. I do not see any prospect of a reaction against this wave of legislation which has swept across the country and made this tremendous change. I would like to have the members of the committee consider seriously whether it would not be wise to leave this limitation out of the bill.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Certainly.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I will say to the gentleman that perhaps he knows that it was not the purpose of the War Department in the use of these horses that have been presented to the Government to go into breeding in competition with farmers; but it is their purpose, where farmers bring mares to these remount stations and other places where these valuable stallions are kept, to breed them. The farmer will own the progeny, but the Government will have an option, with the privilege of purchasing at a certain age, if suitable. Am I not right in that?

That is correct. Mr. HAY.

Mr. SLAYDEN. At least the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois ought to be amended to the extent of providing that the provision shall not deprive the Quartermaster's Department, where stallions are owned by the Government, of breeding them to mares belonging to farmers who live in the vicinity and who bring them there for that purpose. That is the suggestion I wish to make to the gentleman, so the Government would not be deprived of the use of these valuable animals that are now in the actual possession of the Quartermaster General's Department.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Hughes] is, I think, unfortunate in his experience with Kentucky horses. His misfortune grows out of his inability to distinguish between different kinds of Kentucky horses. We have both the good and the bad there. Addressing myself seriously to this proposition of the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Chairman, the amendment would be a mistake, in my judgment. There have been some public-spirited men in America who have seen fit to donate to the Government stallions of great value that they might be used for breeding purposes, in order that the standard of horses suitable for Army purposes might be raised.

It does not entail any expense on the Government; it does not put the Government in the business of raising horses in competition with the people outside of the Government; but it does afford an opportunity that would not come by individual initiative and could never be expected to come from Government appropriations, of having sires of very great value for horses that may subsequently be used in the Army; and I can see no reason that will be beneficial in preventing the proper use of those animals which have been generously donated, and I can see very serious harm that will come from it.

Mr. JACKSON. Will the gentleman be kind enough to point out, for I have not paid very close attention, where this amendment of the gentleman from Illinois will prevent the thing of which the gentleman speaks?

Mr. SHERLEY. The very purpose of the amendment is to do that, as I understand it.

Mr. JACKSON. I did not follow the reading very closely— Mr. SHERLEY. And if that be not its purpose, there is no reason, as I understand it.

Mr. JACKSON. I had this idea: That the purpose of offering the amendment was that it was only to prevent the pur-

Mr. SHERLEY. It would prevent the breeding, and the gentleman from Illinois confirms my understanding of his purpose. Now, it so happens that stallions have been presented, and I have reason to believe that several others will be, some of them imported stallions of very high value and worth.

Mr. JACKSON. I quite agree with the gentleman about that, but it seems to me this limitation of the gentleman from Illinois would only go to the use of horses purchased by this appropriation, the way it is worded.

Mr. SHERLEY. That is certainly not the intention of the gentleman from Illinois; and I assume, knowing him, that he has properly worded his amendment to bring about what he had desired, which was the prevention of use of those horses for breeding purposes

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I will state to the committee that the intention of this amendment, which is just the same as it has been in the law for some time, was in last year's law, was to prevent the Government from going into the business of breeding horses. Now, by leaving out this provision, and the buying of remount stations which was authorized in last year's bill, there is nothing to hinder the Army from purchasing horses of ages, sex, and size as may be prescribed by the War Department for remounts. Now, I take it, the language in this provision is such that it would enable them to go and buy all kinds of horses that might seem to them necessary to buy and we would have breeding farms wherever we have these remount stations.

Mr. HAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. In a moment. Now, we have denied this sort of undertaking for several years. Now the question is whether Congress wants to authorize the War Department to go into that sort of business again. I have not thought it was a proper thing for the War Department to engage in and do not believe that it ought to do it now, and for that reason I believe that this proviso ought to go into this bill. As stated here, this provision is not to prevent them from owning stallions which have been given, as suggested by my friend from New Jersey and by my friend from Kentucky. They have not dis-Jersey and by my friend from Kentucky. They have not disposed of them, but with this provision in here it does not change the law from what it was in the past, but it would prevent them from going into this business. Now, I do not believe it is a proper thing for the Government to engage in.

Mr. HAY. I want to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that this provision about the purchase of horses of ages, sex, and size, as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, are for remounts, which means horses to be used in the Cavalry and Artillery and by officers for mounts, not for breeding purposes. They are only allowed to buy them for remounts, that is all. And I may say to the gentleman there is no intention to buy any mares for the purpose of using them for breeding purposes.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. The gentleman from Virginia, as I understand it, is perfectly willing for this provision to go in

Mr. HAY. As far as I am personally concerned, but I think it is much wiser to leave it out.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. What was the object in leaving it

Mr. HAY. The object in leaving it out, as I told the gentleman before, was to permit the department to buy stallions of such character that would enable them to breed them to farmers' mares to raise horses for future use in the Army.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Is there anything in this bill to prevent them under these conditions from raising horses at these remount stations?

Mr. HAY. Why, yes; there is no— Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Breeding mares-

Mr. HAY. No; there is no provision in the bill to use them for any such purpose. You can not use the remount station for a breeding station. As I say, I have been told repeatedly by the Quartermaster General and other officers who were in charge of these remount stations, that they are going to use them, not for the purpose of breeding, but as remounts, and that is what the bill prescribes.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I think that is what they ought to do. Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foster] suggests that he does not think it good business for the Government of the United States to go into the breeding of horses?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Yes, sir.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Suppose the price of horses should be so high that it might be advisable for the Government to enter into the business?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. That is a question I can not tell anything about, but I do not believe the Government could go into the raising of them any cheaper than they can get them as private property. Then, I want to say this to the gentleman from Pennsylvania: The gentleman is opposed to the Government ownership of those things where they come in competition with private parties, is he not?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Generally speaking; yes.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Now, you want to advocate going into a business where you come in competition with private parties.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am very glad the gentleman has turned the question upon me, but he has not quite permitted me to get through with him. I would like to ask whether the gentleman would hold to that same policy of not going into the question of the breeding of horses by the Government if it applied to the business of making ammunition or arms in competition with private manufacturers?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. We do that on account of trusts and corporations which try to gouge the Government. The farmer is not doing that. There is no combination among farmers to try to gouge the Government as to the price of horses, as there is with the Powder Trust of the country. gentleman does not compare the selling of horses with the Powder Trust, does he?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman is growing quite eloquent in answer to my question. The difference that I see, so far as the gentleman's position has been stated, is this, that he is entirely in favor of protecting those who raise horses in the farming districts, but he is entirely against those who manufacture commodities in the manufacturing districts.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois

[Mr. Foster] has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The question is put squarely;

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I ask for two

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am satisfied not to be answered.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I want to say this to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that there is no combination between the farmers and the selling of horses, but the Government goes out and has competition in buying these horses of the farmer.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is not there an understand-

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Just one minute, please. Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is not there an understanding between those who raise potatoes and those who raise tobacco

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I want to say this

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania (continuing). About this matter?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I want to say this, that when the Government goes out to purchase horses they do not purchase them from a great trust or combination-

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I may agree with the gentle-

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois (continuing). But they go where there is competition among the farmers and try to get them as cheaply as they can, and get them from the farmers and not from the head of a great trust.

Mr. SHERLEY. I would like to suggest that while there is no combination in horses there is a difficulty in getting the right kind of horses, and the whole purpose in this is to raise the standard of horses that are required by the Army. Now, let me ask the gentleman this question: Does he think it unwise for the Government, through the breeding of these stallions, to so raise the standard of horses sold by farmers to the Army as to provide the Army with suitable equipment for Army purposes?

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I will say to the gentleman from Kentucky that if we are going to engage in this new enterprise I suggest that we establish these stations in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Mississippi, and all of the other States. Why should we go into only two or three places in the United States and engage in that kind of business? That is the proposition

Mr. SHERLEY. We are not going into any place. Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. That is the proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move that the time of the gentleman be extended one minute.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate be closed on · this paragraph in one minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Hay] moves that all debate be closed on this paragraph and amend-ments thereto in one minute. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

Mr. Chairman, I will amend my motion, and move Mr. HAY. now that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in seven minutes, four minutes to be occupied by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Sisson] and three minutes by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SLAYDEN].

The CHAIRMAN. By unanimous consent, the gentleman's first motion is withdrawn, and the question now is on agreeing to the modified motion.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I want one minute.

Mr. HAY. I move, then, Mr. Chairman, that all debate on this paragraph close in eight minutes, one minute to be occupied by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore], four minutes by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Sisson], and three minutes by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Slayden]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia moves that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be closed at the expiration of eight minutes.

Mr. MANN. I understood that the gentleman asked unanimous consent to divide the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time to be divided as indicated. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, the question

Mr. MOORE, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, the question that was raised a moment ago by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foster] was a question of very great interest. But it works both ways. It is very clear that the Member who comes from the district made up very largely of agriculturalists, as is that of the gentleman from Illinois, is interested in protecting the industries of that district. So by the same token am I interested in protecting the industries of my district. If it happens that people are raising horses in his district, he stands naturally for the protection of horses on account of the very large private interests which prevail there, with a view to selling them to the best customers that can be obtained, including the Government of the United States. The gentleman from Illinois speaks of the great trusts and monopolies that arise among the manufacturing industries of the country. It is true that a man who erects a mill and produces a line of manufactured goods which others do not produce may have what may be termed a monopoly until competition develops in the production of those articles; but I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that a man who owns a prize stallion, particularly in the district represented by the gentleman from Illinois, has in fact a monopoly with which there can be no competition. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am through, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman, the proposition that is presented here now is that the Government of the United States shall go into a very peculiar character of business. I do not recollect myself just when the proviso first went into the bill; the chairman of the committee said it went into it several years ago; but I do recollect that the last time this bill was up for consideration there was quite a good deal of discussion about the proviso, and the reason the proviso was put into the bill was because the Government had indicated that it would go quite extensively into this business. But as I understand it now the proposition is not to own a stock farm, but to own a certain number of stallions, and to give the farmers the special privilege of breeding their mares to the stallions that might be in their neighborhood.

Now, I do not think it is wise at all for the Government to embark on this new character of business. The Congresses prior to this time, as soon as their attention was called to the matter, put in the proviso. With that preliminary explanation, my understanding is that some persons have given some good horses to the Government for the purpose of allowing them to be used for breeding purposes. This amendment would not prevent that being done. It simply means that the Government should not go into the business of buying mares and stallions for the purpose of raising and breeding horses.

As suggested by another gentleman, it seems that this thing is getting in by indirection, and the Government then will be permitted to do that which the gentleman now says they do not intend to do. How does he know? I understand that there was no positive authority given to the War Department to go into this business at first, and the proviso was put in for the purpose of preventing the enlargement of this character of

I agree fully with the gentleman from Illinois that it is rather unwise for the Government to embark in any particular kind of business to obtain things that the Government ought to I do not believe it would be wise to raise corn or wheat, or go into the business of raising forage or producing milk and butter or other food for the soldiers in the Army. I think that ought to be left to private individuals, and the Government ought to stay out of business as much as possible, and not em-bark in too much business. I think this is a step in the wrong direction.

Mr. KAHN. How does the gentleman feel in regard to ammunition?

Mr. SISSON. As far as I am personally concerned, if the Government can procure the ammunition at a reasonable price, I would not be in favor of the Government establishing large powder factories; but under the present régime we only make just enough powder to try to keep the price down by competition, so that we can obtain powder at a reasonable price.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foster] will not prevail. It is to reinsert in the bill this language:

That no part of this appropriation shall be used for breeding purposes,

As I said a while ago, the Government has had presented to it some exceedingly valuable stallions. These horses must be foraged, stabled, kept, and cared for. They are exceedingly valuable property, and some part of this appropriation will be necessary in order to provide for them.

I regret very much that this amendment has been offered, because, as a representative of the farmer, and a man who is jealous of the farmers' interest and wants to protect that interest, I regret the offering of this amendment, because it happens that the farmers in the vicinity of these remount stations where these stallions are are exceedingly anxious to have the privilege of breeding their mares to them, the Government merely retaining the option of buying such horses when they reach the age of two or three years, at which period in the life of the animal the Quartermaster's Department proposes to buy them and train them for the Cavalry service.

Everybody knows that horses have grown to be very scarce in the last few years. Twelve or fifteen years ago the Government was able to supply its Cavalry and Artillery horses at prices ranging from $90 up to $125. Now, I think the last figures indicated that the average price paid was about $175. Something must be done, or in a short time the horses necessary for the Army will not be available in this country. We have authorized the Government to construct a powder plant. I myself introduced a bill to provide for that. Not that I believe the Government ought to supply all of its own powder, but that I believe it ought to be in a position to exercise some influence in the manufacturing and in the fixing of the price, and in such a way that the people will not be robbed by combinations or excessive prices. I am not afraid that the farmers are going to form any combination. They are not going to.

They are not in a position to do it. As a matter of fact, they have not a supply of horses sufficient to furnish the Government with what it needs in that line. But we must have these horses. They are a military necessity, and if the farmers will not breed them we must. They want the use of these stallions at these remount stations, and I think, as a friend of the farmers, it would be very cruel of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foster] to insist on his amendment and deprive them of that privilege. The Government is not going into breeding on a large scale.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Do you know that the Government has raised these race horses and that they have been put into races? Does the gentleman know they have been put into running races? Are we to engage in that sort of business?

Mr. SLAYDEN. I do not feel so outraged at that. Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. They have been entered in races where money has been bet on them and where the bookmakers have been at work.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Uage 29, line 21, add after the word 'war" the following: "Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for breeding purposes."

The question being taken on the amendment, on a division (demanded by Mr. Foster of Illinois) there were-ayes 9, noes 31.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Barracks and quarters: For barracks, quarters, stables, storehouses, magazines, administration and office buildings, sheds, shops, and other buildings necessary for the shelter of troops, public animals, and stores, and for administration purposes, except those pertaining to the Seacoast Artillery; for repairing public buildings at military posts; for extraduty pay to enlisted men and hire of employees; for rental of the authorized allowance of quarters for officers on duty with the troops at posts and stations where no public quarters are available; of barracks or authorized allowance of quarters for noncommissioned officers and enlisted men on duty where public quarters are not available; of grounds for cantonments, camp sites, and other military purposes, and of buildings or portions of buildings for occupation by troops, for use as stables, storehouses, and officers, and for other military purposes; for the hire of recruiting stations and lodgings for recruits; for such furniture for the public rooms of officers' messes and for officers' warriers at military posts as may be approved by the Secretary of War; for wall lockers in permanent barracks and refrigerators in barracks and quarters; for screen doors, window screens, storm doors and sash, and window shades for barracks, offices, and quarters, and for flooring and framing for tents: Provided, That no part of the moneys so appropriated shall be paid for commutation of fuel or quarters to officers or enlisted men: Provided further, That the number of and total sum paid for civilian employees in the Quartermaster General's Department, including those paid from the fund appropriated for regular supplies, incidental expenses, barracks and quarters, Army transportation, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, shall be limited to the actual requirements of the service, and that no employee paid therefrom shall receive a salary of more than $150 per month, except upon the approval of the Secretary of War: Provided further, That of the

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to reserve a point of order to line 20, 21, and 22, on page 31. The language is "that of the amount herein appropriated the sum of $25,000 shall be immediately available for the construction of barracks and quarters." I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia, chairman of the committee, why that provision is put in—what is the deficiency?

Mr. HAY. I will say to the gentleman that $25,000 is supposed to be spent on the barracks and quarters in the Territory of Alaska. They have to have it as soon as possible so they can use it in the spring.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Then it is not a deficiency?

Mr. HAY. Oh, no.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended at any of the following-named Army posts: Fort Apache, Ariz.; Boise Barracks, Idaho; Fort Brady, Mich.; Fort Clark, Tex.; Fort George Wright, Wash.; Fort Jay, N. Y. (mobile garrison only); Fort Lincoln, N. Dak.; Fort Logan H. Roots, Ark.; Fort McIntosh, Tex.; Fort Mackenzie, Wyo.; Madison Barracks, N. Y.; Fort Meade, S. Dak.; Fort Nagara, N. Y.; Fort Robinson, Nebr.; Fort Missoula, Mont.; Fort Logan, Colo.; Fort Douglas, Utah; Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer that amendment to carry out the views of the Secretary of War, which he transmitted to Congress in answer to House resolution 343. On page 14 of that report the Secretary of War states as follows:

The names and cost of all Army posts which would have to be abandoned in order to put an end to the extravagance and inefficiency resulting from improper distribution of the mobile army:

Such a regiment must forfeit opportunities of field training in combination with the other arms (Cavalry and Field Artillery), except at heavy expense for rail transportation.)

Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo.

(This post is not located with a view to maximum economy or strategic effectiveness. Its position in a sparsely settled region involves an increased cost for transportation of manufactured supplies, and its distance from recruiting centers makes the recruitment of its garrison more costly. But there are sufficient quarters at the post for a detachment of all arms, with ample facilities for training. There is an abundant water supply at the post, and climate and sanitary conditions are excellent. There is a large maneuver ground within easy marching distance of the post.)

I find on examination of this appropriation the

I find on examination of this appropriation that $173,000 of the appropriation is allotted to be expended at the posts included in the amendment which I have offered. I do not propose to cut off the appropriation, but my idea is that the money can be expended upon those posts where they propose to concentrate the troops, instead of being wasted and dissipated in posts which they do not propose to occupy.

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. Certainly.

Mr. SHERLEY. Are there any estimates at these posts for the expenditure of the money that would be saved?

Mr. HAY. No; the estimate is for the whole item; but, as the gentleman knows, the appropriations can be spent upon the posts where they propose to concentrate, and it would be much cheaper for the Government to do that than it would be to come to us in the future for a large appropriation to be expended on those posts where they intend to concentrate.

Mr. SHERLEY. But the gentleman proposes to give it to these posts without any knowledge as to what it is to be expended for.

Mr. HAY. It is proposed that the amount saved at these posts shall be expended at the posts at which they propose to concentrate.

Mr. SHERLEY. I agree with the gentleman as to the saving at these posts mentioned, but why give them a free hand at the other posts? I think the expenditure for barracks and quarters of these amounts is indefensible. Congress ought not to appropriate a dollar for the expenditure in any place without full and detailed estimates by the department and a full and detailed hearing on that appropriation. [Applause.]

Mr. HAY. I will say that the hearings in this case show where every dollar is to be spent, for what building, for what purpose it is to be spent; every dollar of the appropriation is itemized, and it is pointed out where it is to be spent.

Mr. SHERLEY. But the gentleman proposes that these sums that are to be saved at the posts that he is going to prohibit the expenditure upon shall be turned over without knowing where it is to be expended or how much is to be expended.

Mr. HAY. It is only to be used on the posts that they are compelled to build up in order to concentrate the troops.

Mr. SHERLEY. I want to say that the extravagance has been of two kinds, not only at the place where the expenditure has been made but the character of the expenditure itself.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. SHERLEY. I ask that the gentleman have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks that the gentleman from Virginia have five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERLEY. While you are eliminating places you are not eliminating the absolute discretion on the part of the department as to the additional sums of money.

Mr. HAY. I do not agree with the gentleman from Kentucky that the department can not be trusted to wisely expend this money at the posts which they are going to occupy in the future. I believe it will be much better to build up these posts out of current appropriations than to come to Congress for a large appropriation, and they will have to have them if they are going to pursue the concentration policy; and if that policy is going to be adopted by Congress, as seems to be the view of Congress to-day, we have got to spend millions of dollars to build up these posts after the abandonment of the old ones.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. HAY. Yes.
Mr. KAHN. Is it not a fact that one of the reasons why the posts have not been abandoned heretofore is that there was no place to put the troops that are there in other barracks and quarters?

Mr. HAY. Of course that is one reason, but it is not the main reason. The main reason has been that certain posts have not been abandoned because the political influence—as suggested by the Secretary of War in his report-has been great enough to compel the department to keep the posts whether they wanted to keep them or not. The department is now undertaking to shift its responsibilities on to Congress. The department has the power to abandon any post, but they say they can not do it for the reasons given, and they ask us to do it for them. I am willing to assist, so far as I can, in that direction, because I believe it is well to do it.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. I understood the gentleman to say that the department concedes, or rather admits, that it has the power to abandon any post it pleases.

Mr. HAY. It does not have to admit it. That is the law.

Mr. BUTLER. While the appropriations are made for the posts they are disposed to occupy them with the troops. If this amendment prevails, there will be no appropriation for those points enumerated in the amendment.

Mr. HAY. There will be no appropriation for the upkeep or improvement of those posts.

Mr. BUTLER. But it does not follow from this that the posts will be abandoned?

Mr. HAY. Oh, not at all. Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to the amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to negotiate with the city of New York for the sale of Governors Island, New York Harbor, for park purposes, and to report to Congress at the beginning of the next regular session as to the terms upon which said property may be sold to the city of New York.

Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve a point of order. Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, the amendment is subject to the point of order, but I trust that the gentleman from Virginia will not insist upon it. This amendment does not do any more than permit the War Department to enter into negotiations with the city and to report to Congress the terms upon which a sale may be made. The Secretary of War has recommended that Fort Jay be abandoned, so far as the maintenance of part of the mobile army is concerned. Fort Jay is the official name of Governors Island. The department desires to retain this island, however, as the headquarters for the Department of the East. Those who are familiar with its location, right in the harbor of New York, within five minutes by ferry from the Battery and an equal length of time from the Borough of Brooklyn, will appreciate the desirability of obtaining for park purposes for the congested districts of the great metropolis of the Western Hemisphere this ideal place. Mr. MANN. Metropolis!

Mr. FITZGERALD. If it be not utilized for the mobile army, it is indefensible to utilize it simply as a desirable place of residence for high officers of the Army.

Mr. HAY. I understand they are going to use it for a military prison.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes; they have a military prison there. Old Fort Columbus, the original fort built during the Revolution, is so used. A few years since the Legislature of the State of New York permitted the Federal Government to enlarge this island by some 110 acres, if I recall correctly, in the belief that it was to be utilized for the mobile army.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman if he can express an opinion, capitalizing it practically on the rate of 2 per cent, of about how expensive such headquarters or offices

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have not the slightest idea of the value of the property

Mr. SLAYDEN. Many millions.

Mr. FITZGERALD. My colleague, Mr. PATTEN, endeavored to obtain an estimate, but was unable to do so in the time at his disposal.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Expensive at least for a prison or head-

Mr. FITZGERALD. A few years since the Legislature of the State of New York authorized the Federal Government to enlarge the island. Three years ago the department submitted to Congress estimates for an appropriation of $110,000 to pay architects' fees for the preparation of plans of buildings to be erected upon the island in connection with the mobile Army, and now we have this recommendation that it be abandoned for the use of the mobile Army. Some gentlemen are not familiar, perhaps, with that estimate, because it did not go to the Committee on Military Affairs, but properly went to the Committee on Appropriations.

If this property is not to be utilized for the mobile Army, if it is to be retained merely as a delightful headquarters for high officials of the Army for whom accommodations could be found in many of the numerous places about the city of New York essential for the defense of the city, it seems to me this petty excuse for wishing to maintain a military prison is too ridiculous to have the Government retain such valuable property practically in idleness. It ought to be utilized by the city of New York, and it is very greatly needed for the purposes mentioned-

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield to the gentleman. Mr. MANN. The city of New York wants the island, I suppose; why should not they make the proposition; why should we make the proposition to the city to see if they will buy it from us?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am making this suggestion, Mr. Chairman, because it seems to be the proper way for the Federal Government to proceed. Here is property practically useless, so far as the Federal Government is concerned, that would be highly beneficial to the city and useful to it. The Government has indicated that it only desires to retain it as a residence for high officials in command of the Department of the East. But a short time ago another department of the Government, controlling another piece of property with an institution of the utmost value to the Government and that would be of practically no value whatever to the city of New York, suggested or intimated to the officials of New York that the Federal Government would be pleased to negotiate for the acquisition of that property by the city. Between selling a navy yard, which is the only check which the Government has upon the Shipbuilding Trust of the country, and for which the Government has imperative use, to the city which could not possibly have any use whatever for it, and selling property for which the Government has no use at all and which could be utilized in a most beneficial manner by the city, I prefer to enter into a transaction which will result beneficially to both parties. Those who are familiar with the conditions in the city of New York will appreciate that if the Government does not need this property for military purposes it could best be utilized for park purposes. In no place in the United States is there a more appalling condition during the heated months of the summer than in the great congested districts of the city which are located very close to this island. With adequate ferry service it would be of a very great advantage to the poor people of the city if they could have access to that island during the hot summer months. If desirable, it could be turned over to the city with a provision giving the Federal Government the right to utilize it for military purposes in time of war-has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois makes the request that the gentleman from New York may proceed for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If this were turned over to the city even upon the condition that it should be utilized only for park purposes, and that in time of war or other difficulty of any kind the Federal Government should have the right to reoccupy it and utilize it for purely military purposes, even then all the advantages from the occupation of the property by the Federal Government would be reserved and at the same time it could be utilized beneficially in the way suggested.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Certainly.

Mr. PEPPER. I am not familiar with the island of which the gentleman speaks-Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman is familiar with its situation, perhaps; it is just south of the Battery.

Mr. PEPPER. How many acres are there, or what is its area? Mr. FITZGERALD. Several hundred acres; I am not sure of the exact acreage. Mr. PEPPER. What is the character as to elevation?

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is a few feet above sea level.
Mr. PEPPER. How is it utilized at the present time, what is there on the island?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The headquarters of the Department of the East and some of the mobile army and old Fort Columbus, the original old stone fort which was built in the Revolutionary period, if I recall correctly, and which has been converted into a military prison.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Fort William? Mr. FITZGERALD. No, Fort Columbus; certain military prisoners are detained there.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Do not they call it Castle

William?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I believe not. It is located, I suppose, half a mile south of the Battery. There is a ferry to it, and it is very accessible to the congested portions of the city of New York.

If it is not to be utilized for the mobile Army, there are a number of places about the city of New York where the department headquarters could be established. I appreciate, of course, that it is a desirable place for the general commanding the Department of the East and his staff to live. It is quite accessible to the city. It makes it easy to participate in New York social life and it makes it a most congenial assignment for military officers, but if it is not to be utilized except for residences for Government officers it might much better be utilized in a manner where a large number of persons would obtain some benefit.

Mr. ANTHONY and Mr. CULLOP rose.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana. Mr. CULLOP. What is the character of the Government buildings there, whether new, old, valuable, or of little value?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am not able to inform the gentleman. Mr. CULLOP. I have been informed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PATTEN] that they are principally old buildings and not of much value.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think there are some new officers' quarters. My recollection is that there are some modern buildings. What I desire, if possible, would be to have the opinion of the department on this matter as to the necessity for retaining the island as a military institution, if not for the use of the mobile Army, and upon what terms it could be disposed of.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Helm] has handed me the following memorandum:

The original area of the reservation was 68.76 acres; land reclaimed, 105.24 acres, making a total of the present area within the sea wall 174 acres; submerged land, 30.50 acres, making the complete total 204.50 acres.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield.

Mr. KAHN. How many prisoners are in the military prison there?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not know, but they could easily be disposed of elsewhere.

Mr. KAHN. Where could they be transferred to.

Mr. FITZGERALD. There are a number of military prisons. I happened to have the fortune, or misfortune, to visit that military prison at one time. My belief is that it would be much better from every standpoint, whatever is done with this island, that the men be quartered elsewhere. I have seen a good many prisons, from the outside mostly [laughter], and I do not think that this is quite a desirable one.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from New York yield to the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield.

Mr. ANTHONY. I want to say that my information is that that place is not used as a permanent military prison. It is used as a place in which to assemble the local prisoners, from which the are transported to other prisons.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Some men are confined there for terms of a year or two.

Mr. ANTHONY. I want to say that I am entirely in accord with the object of the gentleman's talk.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If this island, right in the center of the city, of 204 acres, is not needed for military purposes, except for desirable residences for the officers, and if the city of New York should desire to acquire it and utilize it for park purposes, I believe it would be a proper thing for the Government to turn it over. If there be any special reason in the time of war for the occupation of it, let the right be reserved and the Federal Government take it in time of war.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Has the gentleman confined his thought in the resolution to the consideration of the ground for park purposes only?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is all.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And not for commercial purposes?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, no; I do not think it would be desirable to turn it over for commercial purposes. I think the city of New York would pay as much for it for park purposes as would be paid for it for commercial purposes.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The Committee on Expenditures in the War Department, from which emanated House resolution No. 343, offered by a member of that committee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Bulkley], has been investigating since last summer, and giving close attention to what I believe to be perfectly legitimate lines of investigation, this mobile army post evil. As soon as the letter of the Secretary of War in response to said resolution was sent to the House, or soon after it was sent, my attention was attracted to the statement in the letter which showed, among other things, that Fort Jay, on Governors Island, was one of the mobile army posts which the Secretary of War thought was not necessary for that purpose.

I got in communication with the Judge Advocate General for the purpose of making some inquiries in regard to this particular post. I had ascertained that there was some possible defect in the Government's title to it. I now send to the Clerk's desk a communication from the Judge Advocate General, which I received from him, bearing upon that particular feature of the proposition, and I ask that it be read in my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read the document indicated.

The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL,
Washington, February 9, 1912.

Hon. Harvey Helm, M. C., House of Representatives.

Washington, February 9, 1912.

Hon. Harvey Helm, M. C.,

House of Representatives.

Dear Sir: In reply to your letter of the 8th Instant, requesting information as to what proportion, if any, of the territory of Governors Island, New York Harbor, would revert to the State of New York in the event of the abandonment of the use of the same for military purposes, I have the honor to state that under date of February 7, 1912, this office, in a report regarding this reservation, said:

"According to the records of this office, Governors Island (Fort Jay), N. Y., along with other Islands in the harbor of New York, was donated to the United States by act of the legislature of the State passed February 15, 1800. By act approved May 7, 1880, and patent from the governor thereunder, dated May 26, 1880, title to lands covered by water around this Island, inter alla, was granted to the United States; and by acts of February 27, 1901 (ch. 46, Laws of 1901), and March 6, 1903 (ch. 18, Laws of 1903), and patents thereunder, dated March 7, 1901, and June 5, 1903, respectively, title was granted to additional water-covered lands for the enlargement of the reservation. The reservation includes the whole Island and submerged lands contiguous thereto within limits containing an area of 204.5 acres. The Quartermaster General's office map of May, 1908, shows the limits of the several conveyances of submerged lands as specified above.

"The area of the Island prior to recent filling operations was 68.76 acres, but this office has no information as to the number of acres reclaimed by filling operations or as to the 'cost of the bulkhead and filling in."

By act of May, 1880, "all the right and title of the State of New York" to certain "lands covered with water" adjacent to this reservation, inter alia, "and jurisdiction over the same, are hereby released and ceded to the United States * * for the purpose of erecting and maintaining docks, wharves, boathouses, sea walls, batteries, and other needful structures and appurtenances" upon as the same shall televant to political longer."

It will be noted that this provision applies only with respect to the exemption of the property from taxation and the matter of political jurisdiction, and it is not understood to provide for any reversion of title in the event of the abandonment of the property for military of title in the event of the abandonment of the property for military purposes.

The act of March 6, 1903 (ch. 18, laws of 1903), in authorizing the conveyance "to the United States of America for a nominal consideration," of the submerged land described therein, provides, in section 2, that upon the issuing of letters patent thereto "the jurisdiction of the State of New York in and to said lands under water shall be considered as ceded to the United States of America." Section 3 of said act provides for the reservation of the right to serve process, and section 4 for the exemption of the property from taxation, and, further, that "the jurisdiction hereby ceded and exemption from taxation hereby granted shall continue in respect to said property so long as the same shall remain the property of the United States and no longer." It is not understood that there is any reversion of title to the lands acquired under the authority of this statute in the event of the abandonment of their use for military purposes.

Answering your inquiry as a whole, it is not understood that any part of the reservation of Governors Island would revert to the State in event of its abandonment for military purposes.

Very respectfully,

E. H. Crowder,

E. H. CROWDER, Judge Advocate General.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my time be extended 10 minutes.

Mr. HAY. Does anybody on the other side desire time? Mr. MANN. There are several gentlemen here who want HAY. How much time? MANN. There are sever There are several gentlemen here who want time, but I do not know how much.

Mr. HAY. I do not want to cut off the time, but I want to ascertain how much time is desired.

Mr. MANN. Several gentlemen are interested in this matter who were not here when it was first taken up, and they have been sent for.

Mr. HAY. I do not want to cut off debate, but I am anxious to proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes longer. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Helm] is recognized. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HELM. Certainly.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. Chairman, I wanted to ask the chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department if he has any data at hand with reference to the expenditures upon this post within the last few years?

Mr. HELM. The total cost of the buildings, and so forth, to June 30, 1911, was $322,000 plus. The total sum expended in the last five years for repairs was $39,000.

Mr. PEPPER. I wanted to call the gentleman's attention to the hearings, on page 210, where the expenditure is set down as $56,244.96.

Mr. HELM. That is cost of construction for some year, I suppose. The $39,000 is for repairs.

Mr. Chairman, I have been very much interested in this subject, and I am heartily in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York. I believe that it is an incon-trovertible fact that this island the title to which the Adjutant General now says there is no doubt about, located as it is within a stone's throw of Wall Street, at the very entrance of New York's harbor, containing two hundred and some odd acres of land, is of almost priceless value. I do not believe there is a man on this floor who can estimate the value of that little spot of ground with any degree of accuracy. I do not believe that the Waldorf-Astoria is to be compared with it in value. I would put it this way, that there is not a spot of equal size on the Western Hemisphere that can compare with it in value.

Some men have undertaken to form some conception or estimate of its value. I have heard that one of the leading papers in New York said its real estate agent had stated it would require 30 days in order to reach any approximate estimate of the value of the land. It can be connected with the city by tunnel or by bridge, so as to throw it into immediate connection with the very heart and pulse of New York City.

As to the absolute folly and absurdity of the Government maintaining an Army post on that island I will not undertake to speak, because I have not the remotest idea of its exact value. I have seen it stated more than once in the papers that the value of Central Park, in New York City, while it is far, far larger than this island, and is for that reason, among others, more valuable than this island, the estimates as to the value of Central Park run into the billions. But here the United States Government is the owner of and in possession of this island, maintaining a little out-of-date Revolutionary prison on it, with some elegant quarters also on it. If there is a Member within the sound of my voice who can form any estimate of its value I would like to hear an expression from him.

The cost to the Government of maintaining that Army post there is the interest-earning capacity of the proceeds of the sale price of that island. If you were to say it is worth $100,000,000 at 2 per cent, you would get the cost of the maintenance of the post.

If you go higher or lower you can see what it costs the Government, this joke of a post. As a business proposition, I would say it would be far cheaper to rent an entire floor in the best-equipped hotel in the city of New York as headquarters for these military dignitaries that are located on Governors Island, because the interest on the proceeds of the sale price of this island would pay the rent of that floor and then turn in a handsome profit to the Treasury of the United States.

This, to my conception, is but one of the many instances where the War Department has shown more concern for the comfort and ease of its officers than it has shown for the business side of its administration; and I want to say, with nothing but the kindest feeling toward the War Department, that the time has come when-

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. AMES rose and was recognized.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, I should like some more time. I ask unanimous consent for 10 minutes more.

Mr. HAY. I hope the gentleman will not insist on that.

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, I believe I was recognized. I desire to offer an amendment and have it considered as pending. Mr. BUTLER. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Helm] may proceed for 10 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask whether it is the intention of the gentleman from Virginia to cut off debate soon on this proposition. There are a number of gentlemen on this side who desire to be heard upon it.

Mr. HAY. I am anxious to get along with the bill, and I wanted to fix a time to close the debate, and to include everybody who wanted to speak, if possible. If I can do that, I should like to do so.

Mr. MANN. I do not think it is practicable to close the debate just now.

army that is a real fighting machine.

Mr. HAY. I do not propose to cut off anybody. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Helm] be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection. Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, I may be a little bit zealous or enthusiastic on this proposition, but I am earnest and serious in my statements. I do not believe a more vital proposition has been presented to the House for consideration for a very considerable time. Certainly there is no one particular feature connected with this bill of more importance than this question which is now under discussion nor more far-reaching in its effect; this method of quartering the Army is a double evil, it is a wicked waste of money, and it prevents all possibility of an

I assert that this Governors Island post is but an exaggerated specimen of one of the unbusinesslike methods of the War Department. Why, that prison is a joke. I may be inexperienced, and may be all wrong, but not living in New York, and far remote from it, I have an opinion that the value of this island runs up into many millions of dollars. Here the Government of the United States is in the ridiculous position of maintaining a fort on a piece of property that I dare say there is not a Member on this floor who would venture to estimate the value of.

There are to-day 49 of these mobile army posts in the United Thirteen have been abolished. That makes 62 in all, on which the Government of the United States has expended between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000. Now, look at the proposition. There comes in a resolution in which the Secretary of War says that 41 of the remaining 49 posts should be abolished. That is a proposition that ought to address itself to the most serious consideration of the membership of this House. Here, in this letter from the Secretary of War, is a statement that you are carrying in this bill right here the sum of $5,500,000 that you need not have carried except for these unnecessary, superfluous Army posts. There is a statement by the Chief of Staff in the hearings before the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department in which he says, in substance, that these 49 Army posts are an absolute injury to the Army; that they are working harm and disaster to your Army; that they are, in fact, disorganizing it. That is the statement; that they do not make for efficiency; that if you would abolish them, and save the Government millions of dollars, you would also have a more efficient Army.

I want to say, in all kindness, that the time has come when the people of the United States are going to demand better results for their expenditures for military and naval purposes; and unless the War Department makes up its mind to give the people better results for the millions that they are expending on the military and naval forces, in my opinion, there is going to be a revolt against these heavy expenditures.

I am not a military man, but it is a most serious proposition to me to be expending $100,000,000 annually and getting no better results than officers who are acquainted with the facts in the case are bound to admit. The best place to begin the operation of cutting down these expenses is on these mobile army posts. The department says it can get along with eight of them, and with eight they can build up efficiency in the Army that it is impossible to do now.

I want to make this statement, and I believe it is the correct one: You can not have an army without money, but you can not build up an army or organize an army with money alone. It takes something more than money to make an army.

You may spend a billion dollars annually, but unless the money is well spent, unless there is an organization and teamwork, some good headwork being used instead of spending money lavishly and extravagantly, you never will have an Army. I do not believe the people are unwilling to spend liberal sums for the Army, but I do believe that if they ever come to realize the fact that we are spending millions upon millions and not getting reasonable results, that the time will come, and come soon and speedily, when they will revolt against such lavish expenditure and waste of money.

Somebody has asked, What are you going to do with the 41 posts? My remedy for that situation is to sell them. I have some figures here. There are 13 posts that have already been abandoned. Some say when you abandon them you have to have quarters in which to put and keep the Army. True, but you do not have to sell the posts to-morrow and give possession the next day. Sell them and retain possession of the posts sold until, with the proceeds of the sale, after having decided upon some strategic, suitable, and proper places, then sufficient quarters in which to house the Army can be constructed with the money derived from the sale of the posts. Get the troops to-gether in much larger bodies. Sell Governors Island; it will pay for all additional construction that will be required and have millions left.

There is Fort Assiniboine, that has been abandoned, and in that reserve there are 704,000 acres of land. My information is that this reservation contains very valuable land. I called up the office of the Secretary of the Interior, and I was informed that that land has not been sold. There are some squatters or some people on it claiming rights. But here are 704,000 acres of land at one Army post. Suppose it is worth only $1 an acre, that would be $704,000 that can be used where it may be found best to establish a concentration post.

Then here is Fort Duschene, with 3,480 acres; Fort Niobrara, with 34,560 acres; Fort Wingate, with 83,200 acres.
Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HELM. Yes.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Fort Niobrara has already been abandoned.

Mr. HELM. I understand that; I am only showing the House the amount of land that these abandoned posts have.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Fort Niobrara has 64,000 acres. Mr. HELM. The record furnished by Gen. Aleshire shows that there are 34,000.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. But there has been an addition put on since then. Some of it is worth a dollar or two an acre, and some of it not worth more than 50 cents an acre

Mr. HELM. Now, Mr. Chairman, in the list of posts that the Secretary of War has slated for abandonment here is Fort Apache, with 7,421 acres.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.
Mr. CULLOP. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have 10 minutes more.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I am compelled to object. The gentleman has already occupied 25 minutes, and there are other Members desirous of speaking.

Mr. HELM. I will take five minutes.
Mr. HAY. I will not object to five minutes.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that he may have five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELM. Now, here are Boise Barracks, with 636 acres; Fort Clark, 3,965 acres; Fort Root, 1,022 acres; Fort Logan, 1,072 acres; Fort McKenzie, 6,280 acres; Fort Whipple, 1,730 acres; Fort William Henry Harrison, 1,040 acres; Fort D. A.

Russell, 22,000 acres; Fort Douglas, 8,895 acres; Fort Robinson, 23,400 acres.

I submit to this House that if you can get $1 an acre or 50 cents an acre for these tracts of land, you can get a sufficient sum of money to construct sufficient quarters at pivotal or strategic points and not take a single additional dollar out of the Treasury. Sell this land; get rid of it. It is costing you to-day $5,500,000 that it ought not to cost. I have some figures here that show that since May 1, 1908, the War Department has cost the United States Government over $2,000,000,000. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by inserting these figures in the RECORD.

Now, I submit to this House if, when the Secretary of War said you have no need for these posts, that they are working injury to your Army, that it is costing you $5,500,000, the time has not come to sell them. I say it seems to me that this House, with such facts as these before it, should not continue to vote these sums of money that are demoralizing the Army and which, as long as you do vote for them, you can not have the Army. It is an impossibility. The Chief of Staff said that the recent mobilization on the Texas border was a failure as a division proposition. He said there was no division there; and officers have been before the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department and have vouched for the statement that, under the present arrangement and disposition of the Army, efficiency is impossible. The American Army to-day -I shall not use exactly the term that is in my mind, but will content myself with saying that it is not an army such as the term ought to imply.

The methods you are pursuing here to have an Army are the very things that are going to continually keep you from having an Army, and under the plans you are working, work as long as you will, though millions and hundreds of millions of dollars be expended, you will still have no Army. You have not a division that you can put into the field as a division proposition-not one. The only attempt to have such a thing was in Texas, and I wish I had the license to state what I have heard about that mobilization. The whole thing traces back largely to the way you are housing your Army. You are keeping them scattered out at different places of the country. Officers testify and the records show that you are keeping two or three companies here and there all over the country, and that frequently they can not get more than 20 or 30 men out on drill work. What are you going to do when the time comes when you have got to throw a division together to meet an opposing force in battle? Troops that have never seen each other could do as well; troops that know as little about fighting together as a bunch of college boys, who have not been trained in team work on a football team. You might just as well go around to the different colleges in the country and get a champion football player out of one college, one out of another, and so on, put them into a match game and expect them to win against a team that has had real team work. You can not do it. I do not believe there is a Member on this floor who can successfully deny that as long as you persist in the methods you are now pursuing it is impossible to ever have an Army. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing certain documents which I have in

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 7, 1912.

Sir: I have the honor to forward herewith statements containing the information called for by paragraphs 1, 2, and 4 of your letter dated November 17, 1911.

Statement A shows the total amounts appropriated by all acts and resolutions passed by Congress for the support of the Army and the maintenance of the War Department from May 1, 1808, to June 30, 1911, inclusive, and statement B shows the expenditures made annually, by fiscal years, from these appropriations during the same period for the support of the Army and the maintenance of the War Department. These two statements contain the information called for in paragraph 1 of your letter, classified as requested in paragraph 4.

Statement C shows the total amounts appropriated annually and the title and date of the acts of appropriation from May 1, 1898, to June 30, 1911, inclusive, and statement D shows the amounts expended from these appropriations annually during the same period. These two statements contain the information called for in paragraph 2 of your letter, classified as requested in paragraph 4.

The recapitulation on statement B is a summary of the figures contained on all the statements.

This furnishes all the information called for in your letter above referred to except that requested in paragraph 3, viz, the total amount appropriated and expended for and on account of the Spanish-American Volunteer Army for all purposes whatsoever since May 1, 1898.

By department letter of December 27, 1911, you were advised that in the absence of anything in the appropriation acts showing what portion of the funds appropriated by Congress was intended to cover the expenses of volunteers, the records of the department were not kept so as to show the expenditures separately for the Volunteer Army and the Regular Army, and that consequently any statement of appropriations and expenditures on account of the Spanish-American Volunteer Army that could be made would involve a very considerable expense of time and labor, and at best would be only an approximation. Work upon this feature of your request has therefore been suspended pending the receipt of your reply as to whether such a statement is still desired by the committee, in view of the conditions set forth in my letter above mentioned.

Very respectfully,

ROBERT SHAW OLIVER,

Assistant Secretary of War.

ROBERT SHAW OLIVER, Assistant Secretary of War.

Hon. Harvey Helm,
Chairman Committee on Expenditure in the War Department,
House of Representatives.

STATEMENT A.—Showing the date of, and the total amounts appropriated by all regular, public, private, and deficiency acts and resolutions passed by Congress during the period from May 1, 1898, to June 39, 1911, both dates inclusive, for the support of the Army and the maintenance of the War Department, classified under "military" and "civil" establishments.

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that I wish to offer to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD]. Every word that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Helm] has said in the last 20 minutes applies with equal force to the amendment which I propose, and I ask that it now be read, and then I ask unanimous consent that it may be considered as pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

And provided further, That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to negotiate with the city of New York for the sale of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and to report to Congress at the beginning of the next regular session as to the terms upon which said property may be sold to the city of New York for park purposes.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order upon

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order. Mr. MANN. It is not subject to a point of order. The gentleman asked unanimous consent to have it considered pending. Mr. SHERLEY. Then I object.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let the gentleman bring that up when we consider the naval bill.

Mr. SHERLEY. I want to discuss this bill. Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to let go by the right to make a point of order on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts desire his amendment to come in under unanimous consent?

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, I will yield the floor if an objection is made to my amendment.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I object.
Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, an amendment is not in order at

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. As an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. MANN. That is not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's amendment is not in order at this time.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Then I will offer it as a substitute.

Mr. MANN. That is not in order.
Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I reserved the point of order on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York. I now withdraw the point of order.

Mr. MANN. I reserve the point of order, Mr. Chairman. Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I offered be read.

Mr. MANN. I wish the gentleman would wait until we dispose of this other.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska will be given an opportunity to present the amendment indicated.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, or rather from Brooklyn, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

I appreciate the delicate position in which the gentleman from New York finds himself in the House, and it is no wonder that the gentleman is now seeking to sell the property of the Governthe gentieman is now seeking to sent the property of the Government, in order to raise money to pay the current expenses of the Government [applause on the Republican side], which will soon be needed if the policy on that side of the House is carried out on tariff legislation. [Applause on the Republican side.] But I notice that the gentieman from New York, who is always careful of his constituents, who never misses an opportunity to take care of those whom he represents on the floor of this House, while he is perfectly willing for us to sell or give Governors Island to his constituents for use as a park, is not at all willing to dispense with the useless navy yard in his district, or close to his district, and dispose of that property. Always watching the interest of his constituents, he wants to keep the navy yard, where they work there, close at home. He is perfectly willing to take away the navy yard or Army posts of gentlemen in other parts of the country, but not willing to deprive his constituents of the right to work in the navy yard at Brooklyn. He is perfectly willing for us to dispose of Governors Island. I notice in his resolution the gentleman provides that the Army shall ascertain the terms upon which they can sell Governors Island. I do not know whether the gentleman means terms in regard to cash or time, but if the city of New York keeps on in the next few years the way it has been running in the last few it would need to be time and not cash if we made the sale to it. [Laughter.] Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.
Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the statement is accurate in that if the fusion board of estimate and apportionment is continued beyond its present term, I think the city would speedily become bankrupt.

Mr. MANN. I suppose that was a bright remark, but I did not catch what the gentleman said.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will repeat it. At present in the city of New York there is what is known as the fusion or antidemocratic board of estimate and apportionment which controls the finances of the city, and if it were continued beyond its present term the city unquestionably would speedily become bankrupt.

Very likely; it is very certain if it is not continued beyond its present term the city will become bankrupt Now, why should we propose to the city of New York to buy the Brooklyn-

A MEMBER. Bridge.

Mr. MANN. Not the Brooklyn Bridge, but Governors Island. If the city of New York wants it, let them come up and see if we want to sell it, and I can see no reason why just at present we should undertake to sell the principal of the Government in order to pay the current expenses of the Government, because the threats which you gentlemen are making against the continued prosperity of the country will soon cease. You will not be in power much longer [applause on the Republican side], and this threat to prosperity will be ended and the need of selling Governors Island to raise money to pay current expenses will have passed away. [Applause on the Republican side.] Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I simply wish to say this to the gentleman from Illinois: In 1900 I initiated a movement to construct Government ships in Government yards, and after considerable discussion the Congress adopted that policy. As a result of that policy warships were built in the United States for the first time in its history within the time fixed by contract. Contract time had been limited from 36 to 44 months. Ships had never been delivered to the Government much inside of seven years until the private shipbuilders were placed in competition with Government yards. [Applause on the Democratic side.] We have as a result of that policy not only obtained ships in one-half the time, but we have very greatly saved in the cost of the ships and have obtained much better ships. I know that private shipbuilding plants, everybody interested in ship-building plants not controlled by the Government, has been devising or trying to devise some means of getting rid of the only institution controlled by the Government that actually controls the Shipbuilding Trust. If gentlemen on that side wish to take that attitude, I am glad to have it made public—

Mr. MANN. But you are not going to build any more ships.
Mr. FITZGERALD. So far as I am concerned, regardless of whether ships are built by the Government at Brooklyn or Philadelphia or any of the other yards, that should have been abandoned years ago, I believe it is wise governmental policy to have some construction done under the supervision of the Government itself. The results have shown this policy to be beneficial and advantageous.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. After the gentleman's laudable efforts in 1900 in establishing a Government-controlled yard was accomplished, did not the gentleman's efforts in that behalf cease?

Mr. FITZGERALD. In what behalf?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. In behalf of Government After one yard was established in Brooklyn, did not the gentleman become inactive with regard to the other sections of the country?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman did not advocate the establishment of a yard there. At a meeting of the Institute of Naval Architects in the city of New York in 1899, if I recall correctly, Mr. Baxter, one of the naval constructors, made a lengthy address upon the construction of war vessels in Government yards. He showed such to be the policy of every other maritime nation on the face of the earth, excepting the United States. At the conclusion of the address the gentleman who is now the president of the Fore River Ship & Engine Co., who was then a constructor in the Navy and later chief constructor, made a statement that if he were given an opportunity he could build ships more quickly and cheaply at the Government yard in Brooklyn than they could be built at any other place in the United States. Based upon the statement of these two gentlemen, a hearing was had by the Committee on Naval Affairs, at which the naval constructors from all the Government yards were brought here, and so convincing were the statements they made that some of the construction should be done in the Government yards that the policy was initiated. The "gentleman from New York" in his activities never was controlled by where a ship would be built. It immediately became apparent that by the acquisition of one large crane, which cost $110,000, and the expenditure of the necessary money to equip the ways in the yard, that the Brooklyn yard was fully equipped to build ships. And for the reason alone that it was the best equipped yard the Government had the construction was placed there. It was advocated that these ships should be built there, not merely that labor might be employed, because in that yard there can be done what can not be done in any other part of the United States, namely, 1,500 to 2,000 mechanics discharged in one week without any appreciable effect upon the community, but because it was a distinct service to the United States. And I still favor the policy.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I desire to speak in opposition to the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Hay] which is now pending, and I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr.

MARTIN] asks unanimous consent that on the amendment offered by him to the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia he may proceed without interruption for 10 minutes. objection?

There was no objection. Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, in the paragraph of the bill we are now considering is an item inserted by the committee to the effect that no part of this appropriation which is for barracks and quarters for the coming fiscal year shall be expended at any Army post which the Secretary of War has decided or may decide to abandon in the interest of the service. The chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Hav], now offers an amendment in which he practically enumerates 26 Army posts to which he seeks to apply this proviso. I suggest upon the merits of the amendment that if the committee is inclined to limit this appropriation in any way it ought to be limited not in the manner of the amendment now proposed by the gentleman from Virginia, but in the language of the section as it has been reported by the committee.

I want to say that this entire plan of abandoning numerous Army posts-some 26-in contemplation, so far as this appropriation or denial of appropriation is concerned, involves certainly some serious questions, and questions that ought not to be disposed of upon the meager information that is now before the committee. I am not an expert in war matters nor even a member of the General Staff, and still I think there are some considerations that must appeal to any layman who will give attention to this subject that will make it appear that it is not by any means a one-sided proposition. The theory of the present Chief of Staff of the Army, which is reflected in the report of the Secretary of War in reply to the resolution re-cently passed by the House, is to the effect that a very great improvement in military efficiency and a very great saving of expense in the handling of the mobile army could be made by abandoning our 49 Army posts in different parts of the country and concentrating our forces in 8 Army posts, 3 along the Atlantic seaboard, 3 along the Pacific seaboard, and 2 in the intermediate country.

Upon the subject as to the strategic importance of the proposed plan, perhaps I am not competent to speak. It is a military question. But I do make these two observations upon that

This entire revolution in the matter of housing and sustaining our standing Army in time of peace appears to proceed upon the theory that greater efficiency could be had if the Cavalry, the Field Artillery, and the Infantry Arms of the service are all kept together in one set of barracks and quarters in order that they may have the union of drill, and in order that they may go through the combined maneuvers that they are supposed to go through in time of actual warfare upon a large

The other theory upon which the consolidation of our Army posts along our coasts and border lines is predicated is that our standing Army has for its main purpose the protection of the country from foreign invasion, and therefore you should have the greatest number of our troops stationed on the borders and along the seacoast in order to repel invasion by a hostile enemy. I am not qualified to speak as to whether it is more important as a mere matter of efficiency to keep the Cavalry by themselves or to merge them with the Infantry and the Field Artillery for habitual practice. As to the other theory, however, which I suggest is purely a theory—that we need the concentration of the troops of the standing Army along our seacoast in order to protect this country from foreign invasion-if my recollection of history is correct, it is 100 years this current year since any nation has undertaken to make an invasion of our territory, and in my humble opinion it will be at least another hundred years before we shall meet a like

Therefore the idea that we will need our standing Army upon the seacoast to protect the country against foreign invasion is based upon a very remote contingency and is hardly a sufficient reason for making an entire change in the policy heretofore pursued by the Government.

It is currently reported in the newspapers that these Army posts that are proposed to be abandoned are what are called "political" posts. As to most of them I deny the suggestion. "political" posts. As to most of them I deny the suggestion. The only post that I have any immediate knowledge of is not a "political" post. It was established on the recommendation of Army officers themselves, upon their own volition, and it has been maintained as necessary for many years. In the past decade, upon the recommendation of the War Department itself and to meet the requirements for the proper handling of the Cavalry Arm of the Army, it has been improved from a temporary to a permanent post, with an expenditure of something like $1,225,000.

Now, I will pass from those considerations to the financial side of this problem. What is the scheme? The proposed scheme is to dispose of our 49 Army posts and build 8 new Army posts at 8 other places, as suggested. The present Army posts have cost, including buildings, water supply, and other appurtenances, something like $95,000,000. The great bulk of these expenditures have been for the erection of new quarters and buildings in the last 10 years. The theory is that these quarters and these lands may be disposed of and a fund created from the proceeds by which the new 8 enormous barracks and quarters may be established. As a practical business proposition, I think we, as practical men, know that it will not work out at all as outlined.

Take, for instance, the Army post with which I am familiar, Fort Meade, in South Dakota. That Army post was established at that point because of the favorable climatic conditions, because of the health conditions for the troops, because of the close proximity to the natural supply of Cavalry horses, and proximity to the great Indian reservations of the Northwest. What are the facts? The improvements at that post have cost in the past 10 years $1,225,000. Those improvements are up to date and modern, exactly what are required for the proper housing of cavalrymen and their mounts.

For what could it be disposed of? There are 7,680 acres of and there, practically 600 acres of which are bottom land, worth $25 an acre. The remainder is grazing land, worth not to exceed $10 an acre. The lands of that post, on that basis, would bring a little less than $100,000. The buildings would be of no value or any consequence, except to be torn down and taken elsewhere. The effort to get any profit out of buildings under those circumstances would meet with a negligible result entirely.

It is only a few years since it was proposed to dispose of a building in the city of Atlanta, Ga., a building costing something like $300,000; and the committee of the House having charge of those matters reported the opinion of the Supervising Architect that the highest sum he could get for that building, constructed of brick and stone, was $2,500, on the theory that it would have to be removed, and the expense of tearing it down, when a building is made of that sort of material, is really so great that only a small sum could be realized out of it. So that this conception that we can dispose of Army posts, with that this conception that we can dispose of Army posses, with the lands and the buildings thereon, and with the proceeds build new ones, is chimerical. It will not be realized in actual prac-tice. Many of those buildings and improvements were made for strictly Army purposes, and would not be available for other purposes. If the Government would realize $100,000 out of a post costing $1,000,000, it would be doing well.

Now, it is stated further in behalf of this plan that $5,500,000 could be saved annually by the keeping of the troops of the Army in the 8 great centers that I have spoken of in preference to keeping them in the 49 Army posts as at present.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have five minutes more. Then I will not detain the committee longer.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MARTIN] asks unanimous consent for five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from South Daketa yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Has the gentleman any idea of what it will cost to establish these eight Army posts?

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I suppose it would cost us just as much to build the barracks and quarters to house these men at the eight new Army posts that are proposed as it cost to build the old posts, if not more, because the cost of building has not decreased, but rather increased in the last decade; and if you have to buy the land for these new posts in the large centers of population you will have to pay much more for the ground than you would get out of the sale of the grounds in the remote rural districts. In other words, Congress might just as well face the fact, if we are going to abandon these 49 posts and build new barracks and posts near the large population centers, we will have to expend at least as much to build the new posts and buy new land as the cost of the old ones. The buildings at the existing posts cost $95,000,000, and, as a rule, they were built upon land which the Government already had, and which therefore cost the Government nothing, so far as the land itself was concerned.

Now, in the remaining four minutes I have I want to address myself to the proposition that the suggestion set forth in the report from the General Staff to the Secretary of War, that $5,500,000 could be saved in the operation and maintenance of the Army in these proposed new localities, is absolutely, to my mind, absurd as a business proposition. It only requires an examination of these items in detail, I think, to demonstrate

For instance, it is proposed to save a million dollars and over upon the regular quartermaster's supplies at these new stations, as against the supplies for the same men in the old stations. One of these items is heating barracks and quarters. It is proposed to save 50 per cent, or $556,000. Upon what basis can it be said that it will require any less fuel to warm 20,000 men in barracks near the large population centers than it costs to warm them out in the districts where these posts are now situated? It is purely a question of the cost of fuel and its transportation, and when you remember that the Army posts out in the intermountain West are near the great coal supplies of that section you will understand that this item will not be realized. It will cost just as much for fuel as it costs to warm the same number of men in their present posts.

In the next item it is proposed to save 50 per cent of the cost of lighting, or $309,000. Is that upon the theory that it will take any less lights for the convenience of men in large barracks than in small barracks? It goes without saying that if we build new barracks, near the populous centers, we will be building modern barracks, with electric lights and all of those appliances. Indeed, the life of the Army does not increase in simplicity as you get away from the rural districts and into the centers of population.

Take other items here. It is proposed to save 60 per cent on transportation charges, or $711,000, under this new system. Upon what theory will it cost any less to transport the Army, if they are in these eight posts and you have any use for them elsewhere, than to transport them from the present posts? The whole theory of the saving of transportation is based upon the idea that you will not transport the Army after you get them to these eight posts. If that is so it will be because there If we have use for them we will have to is no use for them. transport them. Take the case of the recent trouble along the Mexican border. Could we have transported the mobile army from these proposed new stations any more cheaply than from their present stations to the Mexican border?

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman permit a question right

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I have no time. If I may have the time, I shall be delighted to do so.

Mr. SHERLEY. The House has been reasonably liberal.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. The gentleman may ask his

Mr. SHERLEY. I should like to have the gentleman tell the committee how many men had to be kept at these posts to protect the property of the Government, when it was desired to mobilize troops?

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I can only speak of the one post with which I am personally familiar. At that post one man was left behind.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota has expired.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. May I have two minutes

Mr. KAHN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for two minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I thank the committee for its liberality. I was only trying to demonstrate that the whole proposition to save is based on the idea that we are to bring these men from all these different Army posts, put them into eight centers, and keep them there.

Why, it is proposed here to save on the transportation of quartermaster's stores other than clothing 90 per cent of the current expenses, $476,000. That is a part of the five and a half million. I undertake to say that whether you save 90 per cent or 10 per cent will depend upon what you transport, and as to the Cavalry posts, you will have more expense in the transportation. If you bring them away from the rural West where forage is cheap and take them to the great cities, you will have to bring your hay and fodder and grain by trainloads across the country. Every financial argument in this connection is based upon a false hypothesis, and I think it will be a long day before the Congress of the United States, if it proceeds to investigate it with that thoroughness that is usually exercised in a proposi-tion of this magnitude—I say it will be a long day before Con-gress will abandon $95,000,000 of modern improvements and embark on this large problem of building new quarters of equal proportions for the Army. Another important consideration must not be overlooked. Our chief use of the Cavalry in recent years has been in the Philippines. One, two, or three years is as long as our men and horses can remain in the service in that tropical climate. Many men in that period become broken down in health. After from one to three years they are brought home and placed in the healthy, invigorating Cavalry posts of the plains country and mountains of the West and rapidly recuperate. The Army statistics show that Fort Meade is the healthiest post of the entire list. The death and sick rate there is the lowest. It would not be possible to recuperate the Cavalry branch of the Army as well in the low altitudes along the seacoasts. We have none too many Cavalry posts at present, and the best of these in the intermountain West should be permanently preserved as a part of the Army Establishment whatever may become of this new plan for the concentration of troops.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Floyd of Arkansas having taken the Chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles

H. R. 16693. An act to extend the time for the completion of the municipal bridge at St. Louis, Mo.;

H. R. 17232. An act to authorize Taney County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the White River at Branson, Mo.; and

H. R. 16677. An act to authorize Butler and Stoddard Counties, in Missouri, to construct a bridge across the St. Francis River at Hodges Ferry, Mo.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary notify the House of Representatives that the Senate has elected Jacob H. Gallinger, a Senator from the State of New Hampshire, President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold and exercise the office in the absence of the Vice President, on February the 12th and 13th, 1912.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, I secured recognition for the purpose of offering an amendment to the amendment of the committee. But it is really in the district of my colleague [Mr.

GARNER], and I yield to him.
Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I intended to offer the amendment, and my name appeared second on the list, but I am obliged to my colleague for yielding his preferential right of recognition by the Chair for the purpose of offering the amendment. I ask that my amendment be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer and convey to the State of Texas, for the purpose of a State tuberculosis sanitarium, such portion of Fort Clark Military Reservation, in the State of Texas, as the governor of the State, or his representative, and the President of the United States, or his representative, may agree upon: Provided, That should the State of Texas in any event refuse or fall to use the abandoned property herein authorized to be conveyed, or any portion thereof, for the purpose designated, then such property shall revert to the United States and become a part of the public domain thereof.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I will state to the committee that this is in substance a bill unanimously reported by the Committee on Military Affairs and passed by the House by unanimous consent at this session of Congress. It seeks to give the President of the United States the power or authority to convey to the State of Texas for a tuberculosis sanitarium such portion of Fort Clark, which is to be abandoned, as the President and the governor of the State may agree upon. There are valuable buildings there now which will be placed in the hands of a caretaker, and if they are not used for some purpose they will become practically useless. They ought to be used for this laudable purpose.

Mr. Chairman, I might go on and explain the matter more thoroughly to the committee, but I am sure that everyone here who heard the matter discussed when the bill was up before the House is thoroughly familiar with the necessity for this transfer. It is for the best interests not only of the United States Government but for the State of Texas.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, when this bill passed the House there was a limitation in it as to acreage to be conveyed. I understand this reservation consists of several thousand acres. Under the persuasion of the gentleman from Texas I think we finally got the limit up to about 600 acres. Unless there is some limitation put in this amendment, so that we may know just how much we are going to give to the State of Texas, when we could not even arrange to negotiate to sell something in another section of the country, I shall have to object. I will not object if the gentleman will include in his amendment the limitation that was put in the bill by the House.

Mr. BURLESON. We are willing—
Mr. GARNER. One moment, Mr. Chairman. I had this amendment drawn with a 640-acre limitation in it. But it was suggested to me by others who were interested in the matter that that provision be stricken out. I was entirely willing to leave it to the President of the United States and to the governor of Texas to determine the number of acres to be conveyed. The main thing I am anxious to get is an opportunity for the President of the United States and the governor of Texas to exercise their judgment as to the advisability of transferring a portion of this post to the State of Texas for a tuberculosis sanitarium.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARNER. Certainly. Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I desire to ask the gentleman if this is one of the 49 posts it is proposed to sell for the purpose of recouping the loss that the Government will sustain by abandoning these posts and building 8 new ones?

Mr. GARNER. I will say that this is one of the posts that it is proposed to abandon. This bill was unanimously reported by the Committee on Military Affairs and was passed through the House by unanimous consent.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Does not the gentleman think that if this proposition of discontinuing these posts goes through and the posts are finally abandoned, the gentleman's proposition here will set a precedent that will be liable to be followed in practically every other case; that the States will be coming here and asking that these posts be conveyed to the States for some public purpose?

Mr. GARNER. I do not think it will, and for this reason: There is no State in the Union, so far as I know, that has taken the forward step that Texas has taken in regard to tuberculosis patients. From all over the United States they flock to that section of the country on account of the climatic conditions, and it is an absolute burden on the State. They not only come from the northern and eastern portion of the State of Texas, but possibly from the gentleman's own State, and especially I know they congregate there from the Eastern and Northern States of this Republic. It is nothing but proper and right, and as outlined in the President's letter to the Committee on Military Affairs, it was such an undertaking that he was glad of the opportunity for the United States Government to assist in this splendid work.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Then it is the gentleman's opinion that this is the only instance where there will be any effort made to have the post that is to be discontinued given to the State in which it is situated?

Mr. GARNER. I have no opinion about that. I submit this, if the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Burke] should come in with a meritorious proposition for the utilization of one of these posts which was going to be abandoned, to be utilized for the sake of humanity, I for one would be in favor of turning it over to his State for that purpose.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The gentleman probably gives the gentleman from South Dakota credit for having sufficient ingenuity to find some kind of a scheme by which he could induce this House to give the State that post.

Mr. GARNER. I imagine that if the gentleman from South Dakota should come before the Committee on Military Affairs, he would present a case that would justify that committee in reporting his bill, else he would not undertake it.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. And I think that would happen in every other case.

Mr. GARNER. And I want to say in connection with the abandonment of these posts that I for one, with originally five posts in the district that I have the honor to represent, three of them having already been abandoned and two others proposed to be abandoned-I am not going to try to interfere. The military should know what is best for the Army, and they say it will be better and cheaper to concentrate them. I believe the Government ought to save money by putting the Army in large posts in place of distributing it all over the country, mainly through the influence of Representatives or United States Senators.

Mr. BURKE of South Daketa. It is the only time that the gentleman from Texas has ever neglected his district that I recall

Mr. GARNER. I disagree with the gentleman as to the neglect.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of my colleague may be extended for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to amend the amendment which I have offered by inserting after the word "reservation," in line 7 of this bill, the words "not to exceed 640 acres." That was the number of acres included in the bill that passed the House.

The CHAIRMAN. If there is no objection, that will be inserted in the amendment. There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Texas yield?

Mr. GARNER. Certainly.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Will the gentleman inform the committee as to the value of this land?

Mr. GARNER. It is very difficult to say what the value of the land is. The value of this property for a tuberculosis sanitarium, I should say, would be worth somewhere in the neighborhood of $150,000. For the purpose of sale I do not imagine that 640 acres would bringe more than twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars, for I can not imagine any purpose it could be used for except as a military training school.

Mr. BUTLER. How about agriculture?

Mr. GARNER. How can you use 640 acres in agriculture when it is occupied by post buildings?

Mr. BUTLER. Are all of the 640 acres covered with houses?

Mr. GARNER. I do not suppose all of it. For agricultural purposes it is worth $5 or $6 an acre.

Mr. BURLESON. It is not suitable for agricultural purposes.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Do I understand that the 640 acres that the gentleman proposes to ask the Government to convey to the State of Texas have buildings covering them?

Mr. GARNER. It has the post there.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. What have the buildings cost the Government?

Mr. GARNER. I have no idea. Some of them were built from 50 to 75 years ago of adobe, of the character of buildings that were constructed at that time.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Does the gentleman think the property for the purpose to which he desires it to be placed is worth $200,000?

Mr. BURLESON. For the lives to be saved it might be worth a million, but for agricultural purposes I doubt whether it could be sold for what the gentleman stated, $2 or $3 an acre.

Mr. GARNER. The department estimates the entire tract is worth $138,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The department says they have expended $138,000 on improvements.

Mr. BURLESON. I will ask the gentleman from California Mr. KAHNI not to press his point of order, because this matter has passed practically by unanimous vote.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. MANN. I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order. I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to this condition

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order for a moment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas has the floor. Does the gentleman desire to ask a question? Does the gentleman from Texas yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. GARNER. Certainly.

Mr. BULKLEY, Mr. Chairman—
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. BULKLEY. No; I want to be heard when the gentleman has finished. I thought he had finished.

Mr. BURLESON. I ask the gentleman not to insist upon his point of order. Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I reserve the point of order. I desire the attention of the gentleman from Illinois, so that after he hears this statement he may then be able to act in accordance with the information.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield? Mr. GARNER. I yield to the gentleman from New York, but I can hardly hear my own ears.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I understood I had reserved the point of order; so that there will not be any misunderstanding

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas had the floor. Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. The gentleman will recognize the difference between his proposition and the one of the gentleman from Texas, to which the gentleman might call attention, and that is that this is a benevolent proposition, a proposition for helping those who go into that community.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I understand that all the Representatives from tubercular-stricken Illinois seem to favor this proposition.

Mr. BUTLER. They do from everywhere.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would be glad to be informed by the gentleman from Illinois why the United States should attempt to force this property on the State of Texas. If the State of Texas finds it desirable to acquire this property for a tuber-culosis sanitarium, why should not Texas apply—

Mr. MANN. Texas has applied.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Of course the gentleman from Illinois says that Texas has applied. It has applied for it in just the way the city of New York applied for Governors Island for park purposes. It has applied through its Representatives offering this amendment on the floor to this bill. A little earlier it applied by having one of them introduce a bill for the same purpose. There was only this mistake made by myself, Mr. Chairman, as I have seen here time and again: If I had suggested that the Federal Government give Governors Island to the city of New York for a park, this House would have arisen unanimously in favor of the proposition, but simply because I suggested that the Secretary of War ascertain whether the city would be willing to purchase it for a park and report to Congress the terms upon which it would be willing to make that purchase, gentlemen oppose the proposition and insist that if the city desires the property it should apply for it. The land involved in the pending amendment is a particularly valuable tract of land. When the Federal Government is asked for it, it shrinks perceptibly in value, but its value will be apparent later. It contains 3,900 acres of land, fine grazing land, and on the portion of the reservation that is proposed to be turned over to the State of Texas is the water supply. Once the water supply is turned over to the State of Texas, the other land will not be of much value to anybody else. These Texans, astute gentlemen that they are, understand that the giving of 640 acres does not affect the result desired, because it means practically applying the entire reservation to the purposes of the

This land, however, is so located that it is peculiarly desirable as a place for the treatment of persons affected with tuberculosis, and it is recognized by medical authorities as specially adapted for that purpose. There is a wide movement in this country for the establishing of sanitariums of this character. So far as I am personally concerned, I shall not interfere with the House having an opportunity to vote upon it. I know that it will be adopted. It seemed to me, however, that the gentleman from Illinois, usually so well informed, should not be permitted to have this point of order withdrawn and this amendment adopted, which will be an invitation to the State of Texas to take this property, without at least having an opportunity to exercise the right to make this point of order, as he did on an earlier occasion, with full information in his possession. gentleman will refer to the amendment, he will find this provision:

That should the State of Texas in any event refuse or fail to use or shall abandon the property it shall revert to the United States.

I know that Texas will get the property. It seems to me that the same rule should apply to all these posts. I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. MANN. I reserve the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman— Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, just a word. The difficulty with my friend from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] is that he often bases his arguments upon faulty facts. He offers an amendment to have the Government ask the city of New York if it will purchase Governors Island. The State of Texas proceeds in quite a different manner. So far from the bill introduced by the House heretofore and reported upon being the first instance where the State of Texas showed its desire to acquire this property, they proceeded in regular manner and indicated their desire to the executive department of the Government, that in case this property should be abandoned, they might be enabled, by Government authority, to establish a sanitarium upon the property. Subsequently, an alert and astute Representative from that State introduced a bill and had it considered by the department and by a committee of this House and by the House itself, showing that they were attending to their business in a proper and businesslike manner. That bill was considered by the House, amended at the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], and agreed to by the House.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman is mistaken. It was not amended at my suggestion. At the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] the limitation was increased from 300 acres to 640 acres.

Mr. MANN. Very well. I accept the responsibility. the gentleman complains about this because this is different. gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], with his manifold duties in the House, has not had the time heretofore to give the attention to the sale of Governors Island that these gentlemen from Texas have to acquiring this other property for a sanitarium.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman is mistaken. The War Department has only within a very few weeks suggested for the first time that Fort Jay be abandoned as a place for the use of the Mobile Army. Thereupon I suggested it would be desirable.

Mr. COOPER. How many acres in Governors Island? Mr. FITZGERALD. Two hundred and four. Mr. MANN. All this is aside. The State of Texas is willing to establish a sanitarium at this old fort, which sanitarium will be a benefit to the people in this country, in and out of the State of Texas. It would be a good thing if we had more of them established. I would be willing to give them the whole 3,900 acres if they can use them. I hope when this becomes a law the President will give them the buildings and the water, although that is not provided for in the proposition now pending before the House.

I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I ask that my amendment be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the amendment by striking out the words "Fort Robinson."

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I offered the amendment for the purpose of calling particular attention to how prodigal it would be for the Government to abandon such military posts as that to which the amendment refers. I think it is a very poor way to enter upon such a policy of economy as to have to clear the base, to begin with, by squandering so much. I think it is a poor way to inaugurate a policy by tear-ing down your houses for the purpose of building greater, and then again tearing down your houses for the purpose of building greater, and throw away the former houses.

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERLEY. Does not the gentleman also think it is rather foolish to make additional expenditures at a place when you have not determined to keep it?

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. It depends, I will say to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley], how far you have gone in tearing down your houses and building greater. Now, eight years ago or nine years ago, Mr. Chairman, it was the declared policy of the then administration, as it seems to be now, to abandon a number of military posts, having reference generally to the smaller military posts; and at that time the War Department took an inventory of the status of the military posts and reached a determination as to preferences for many of the posts, and determined upon an abandonment of some of them. And at that time appropriations were made for some of the posts which it was preferred to be continued and enlarged and made permanent, and erecting permanent buildings of a good class of material, buildings that would last as long as it was possible to have buildings last. Some of the posts in the West, included in this amendment, are of that class.

Now, my amendment refers to Fort Robinson, situated in my When I became a Member of Congress first there were district. two military posts in my district—Fort Niobrara and Fort Robinson. Fort Niobrara has been abandoned, and the determination was reached some six years ago to give Fort Robinson. son the preference, not merely between it and Fort Niobrara, but the preference over many other posts, and that it be made a permanent post on account of the great natural advantages which it possesses for a military post, one of the first being the climatic conditions, and another being the natural facilities in general, including as good spring water as can be found anywhere in the world. Again, it is located at the junction of two great railroads, which are among the leading railway systems of this country—the Northwestern and the Burlington; so that the facilities for the transportation of troops in most any direction that it is at all likely the troops should go are very good indeed.

Now this post, together with other posts in the same zone, can support the Army much more cheaply than other posts in the United States. The statistics of the War Department show that in this very zone, running across the United States north and south, including this military post, the soldiers of the Regular Army are maintained most cheaply of any place in the United States; and not only the men are maintained most cheaply, but the horses also.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that he may proceed for two minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska. Now, it was determined that Fort Robinson would be enlarged to a regimental post. That was determined upon by those best qualified to judge. Gen. Chaffee, then Chief of Staff, was familiar with the post, he having been stationed there for several years, and he reported most favorably upon its merits. Since that time $700,000 has been expended in the construction of permanent buildings and improvements. I think it would be very prodigal for the Government now to tear down those buildings, which were constructed with the idea that they should remain there permanently, constructed of the very best quality of materials, in the very best climate in the United States, with the best railroad facilities, and undertake to sell out that reservation for what you could get for it. It is as good a place for soldiers to be located as anywhere. It is the best place for soldiers brought from the Philippines and from the Tropics generally to be rehabilitated. It would be extreme prodigality to throw this away and pay 10 times as much for another site for a new military post. That would surely be the case, because the values would be put up the instant the new site or sites are de-termined upon. It would surely cost 10 times as much.

I am opposed to the proposition broadside, and I favor the adoption of my amendment. [Applause.]

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY] asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to correct certain misconceptions regarding Army posts which seem to be cherished by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Martin]. He has suggested that the concentration plan advocated by the Secretary of War would involve the abandonment of some $95,000,000 worth of posts. If the gentleman would do me the honor to read the remarks which I made here last Thursday he would see that the total investment which would have to be abandoned to carry out the proposed concentration plan of the Secretary of War is not more than about $31,000,000 or $32,000,000.

The gentleman hastens to assume that no such annual saving as $5,500,000 can be made by the proposed concentration I submit that the Quartermaster General and the Subsistence and the Medical and Pay Departments have carefully worked out these figures, and have submitted the best results that they can get.

Of course, it is a matter of opinion. In many cases it is a matter of guesswork, but the guesses are made by experts. It is the best information we can get, and without hearing these officers or having an opportunity to question them and find out how they arrive at their results, it seems to me premature to assume that their guesses are wrong.

I will say in that connection that the Chief of Staff told me personally that he believed this estimate is very conservative, and that, as a matter of fact, the savings will be greater than are estimated by the officers in question.

But, Mr. Chairman, if there were no money economy whatever, the concentration plan is worth while for the sake of the great increase in military effectiveness in the Army. The best military authority we have tells us that we must concentrate the Army into larger posts in order to promote the proper discipline and training of our forces. This concentration has been in the minds of officers in the War Department for years, but they have not pressed it hard enough.

The Secretary in his recent letter calls attention to the fact that "in 1901 Secretary Root decided that a more concentrated system of garrisoning the mobile Army was necessary for economical administration and efficient training." That was 10 years ago. At that time it was impossible to carry into effect his ideas in respect to concentration on account of the large number of troops returning from the Philippine Islands, who overcrowded the barracks that would have been abandoned had the plan been put into operation at that time. This resulted in further expenditures on posts which ought to have been abandoned long ago. Now, the Secretary goes on to say:

The amounts expended upon these posts became an argument against their abandonment. It seemed wrong to spend large sums of money to make a post habitable, then to withdraw the troops. Throughout the last 10 years records show this argument recurring to prevent recommended concentration being effected, while good money as thrown after bad, perpetuating the very conditions which it was desired to avoid, the pressure of immediate needs being always greater than the pressure for a distant and more or less indefinite policy. Doubtless this argument will again be used to prevent the concentration desired by the present Secretary of War, and unless approached in the spirit of a great business corporation which ruthlessly tears down a 6-story building no longer suited to its needs to erect the 20-story building found necessary, the present movement for an efficient and economically administered Army will fail as have preceding efforts.

Mr. Chairman, had this policy of concentration been put into force 10 years ago when it was suggested by Secretary Roor, a great deal of this money which has been put into posts that are now useless need not have been expended.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. BULKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that I may have two minutes more.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. Chairman, the Secretary of War has now recommended for abandonment 18 army posts. The total cost of these posts is about $10,000,000. Within the past 10 years, or since the time when Secretary Root advocated the policy of concentrating the Army, there has been expended on these posts seven and a quarter millions, and within five years nearly three millions has been expended on these very posts which are now declared to be useless.

There are 7 other posts which the Secretary of War recom-mends for abandonment at some later time. The total cost of these 7 posts is ten and a quarter million dollars, of which five and one-half millions has been expended in the last 5 years and over eight millions in the last 10 years. Taking the total of all these 25 posts which it is proposed to abandon, the total cost is about $20,250,000, of which more than $15,000,000, or 75 per cent, has been spent in the last 10 years, and more than 40 per cent, eight million and some odd thousands, has been spent in the last 5 years.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Hay] proposes to stop the expenditure on these posts, and stop it now. submit that in the view of past experience good money having been thrown after bad to such an extent, as I have related, it is important that we should take this action and stop now the ex- absence for one day, on account of illness.

Mr. Chairman, I ask to extend my remarks, so that I may incorporate tables showing the expenditures on these posts during the last 5 and 10 years.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment and have it considered as pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to offer an amendment and have the same considered as pending to be voted upon when other amendments are voted upon. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the proposed amendment as follows:

On page 32, line 2, strike out the period and insert a comma and add the following: "Provided further, That no part of the sum appropriated by this act shall be used to construct a mobile Army post of less grade or size than a regimental post into a regimental post, or a regimental post into a brigade post."

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, to that I reserve a point of order.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under further consideration House bill 18956, making appropriations for the Army, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. Roddenbery, by unanimous consent, was given leave of MEXICAN COTTON-BOLL WEEVIL (S. DOC. NO. 305).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, ordered printed, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress a communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, accompanying the manuscript of a report on the "Mexican Cotton-Boll Weevil: A Summary of the Results of the Investigation of this Insect up to December 3, 1911." (Bull. No. 114, Bureau of Entomology.)

The report contains valuable information of great public interest to cotton planters of this country and those dependent upon the cotton-plant industry, and I cordially indorse the recommendation of the Secretary that the report be printed for distribution by Congress as well as by the department.

WM. H. TAFT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 12, 1912.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same: H. R. 17232. An act to authorize Taney County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the White River at Branson, Mo.;

H. R. 16677. An act to authorize Butler and Stoddard Counties of Missouri to construct a bridge across the St. Francis River at Hodges Ferry, Mo.; and

H. R. 16693. An act to extend the time for the completion of the nunicipal bridge at St. Louis, Mo.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 4651. An act to amend section 171 of the penal laws of the United States, approved March 4, 1909.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 13, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were HOMESTEAD ENTRIES.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I present a communication from Cola W. Shepard, United States commissioner for the district of Wyoming, with reference to homestead laws. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, the communication was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

The Homesteaders' Weekly Coyote, Colony, Wyo., January 30, 1912.

To the Senate of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas on January 8, 1912, Senator Warren introduced a bill (8, 4240) providing for homestead entries of 640 acres in certain States, which bill, being entirely in the interest of the homesteader of small means who only desires to use his right to obtain a home for himself and family and being opposed to the interests of all who would speculate in public lands, must lack the support of many influential people of the public-land States whose interests are too closely allied to those of the "speculators" or "land grabbers" to permit them to support this measure; and

Whereas by reason of my having been a resident of this country for the past 12 years and an actual settler under the homestead laws for the past 7 years, also a United States devoted exclusively to the interests of homesteaders, I have had abundant opportunity to observe the workings of the various land laws under the various forms of administration which have prevailed during this time, and have made a very thorough study of the legislation most needed to settle this country with a class of home builders and eliminate the speculator who has retarded the development of the West to a great extent: Therefore

I beg to respectfully urge your honorable body to grant the actual homesteader a chance to live on and build up his homestead rather than giving him a chance to get a patent in shorter time so that he may sell it and leave it. This is the purpose of the Warren 640-acre bill—to give the actual homesteader of to-day a law under which he can build a home on the less valuable lands which now remain subject to entry, and to give him assurance that the adjoining lands will not be turned over to nonresident owners under one pretext or another, leaving him without neighbors to help build roads, schools, churches, towns, etc.

It is generally admitte to entry, and to give him assurance that the adjoining lands will not be turned over to nonresident owners under one pretext or another, leaving him without neighbors to help build roads, schools, churches, towns, etc.

It is generally admitted that the lands now left subject to entry under the homestead laws are vastly less valuable than those to be had at the time these laws were first passed, and that the entryman who gets 640 acres of land to-day does not get as much value as the entryman who took 160 acres of land which he could plow up and raise a good crop on the first year; therefore in permitting the entry of 640 acres at this time nothing additional is being granted, it is merely adapting the existing law to the changed conditions.

In the act of February 19, 1909, permitting the entry of 320 acres in certain States no provision was made for granting patent to those entrymen who went onto their land in good faith, but were prevented by causes beyond their control from performing the required cultivation during the second and third years of the entry. It is a well-known fact that there are thousands of entrymen who have taken land under this act and who will not be able to break one-fourth the area by the end of the third year. If these people give up their land and go back it will tend to greatly retard the settlement of this region, but if they be allowed to avail themselves of the provisions of section 3 of the Warren bill they will in most cases be able to comply with the law and will become permanent residents of this country, also their influence will induce others to come West and take up their homes here.

As this bill would insure the continued cultivation of not less than 100 acres out of every entry for a period of 20 years it would more its provisions and would greatly stimulate the agricultural development of the arid and semiarid region, which would benefit the whole Union. As this bill can not possibly be made use of by speculators or land grabbers and does not repeal any other law, but

Cola W. Shepard, United States Commissioner District of Wyoming. ALICE V. HOUGHTON.

Mr. CRAWFORD, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 5137) for the relief of Alice V. Houghton, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 351) thereon.

THE PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE.

Mr. WORKS. I introduce a joint resolution and ask that it be read and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 78) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States was read the first time by its title and the second time at length and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the following be proposed as an amendment to the first paragraph of section 1 of Article II of the Constitution of the United States, which will be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States, namely:

Amend said paragraph to read as follows:

"The executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of six years and shall be ineligible to a second term, and, together with the Vice President, who shall hold for a like term and shall also be ineligible to a second term, be elected as follows."

THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. OLIVER. I offer a concurrent resolution and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 14) was read, as fol-

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the Secretary of State is hereby authorized to furnish a copy of the daily and bound Congressional Record to the under secretary of state for external affairs of Canada in exchange for a copy of the Parliamentary Hansard, and that the Public Printer is hereby directed to honor the requisition of the Secretary of State for such copy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. Do I understand the resolution to mean that it is only for one year, or is it to be continuous?

Mr. OLIVER. It is to be continuous. The resolution is offered in response to a letter which I, as chairman of the Committee on Canadian Relations, have received from the Secretary of State, telling me that this arrangement has been made, and it is the desire of the State Department to make the exchange, which must be authorized by law.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection to the resolution.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been heretofore read.

Mr. HEYBURN. I ask that it may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will go over.
Mr. WARREN. I wish to ask the Senator from Idaho if he is not willing that the bill should come up now.

Mr. HEYBURN. The difficulty with me to-day is that my eyesight is so bad that I can not read and I would like to participate in the consideration of the bill. I will not object to its coming up at any time when I am physically able to participate in the discussion.

Mr. WARREN. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

The bill (S. 2151) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to use, at his discretion, surplus moneys in the Treasury in the purchase or redemption of the outstanding interest-bearing obligations of the United States was announced as next in order, and the Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. BRISTOW. I should like to know what is the purpose of this bill?

Mr. ROOT. There is a report which shows. Mr. SMOOT. There is a company There is a complete report showing the purpose of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If Senators will permit the bill to be read in full, that will, in the opinion of the Chair, be the better course.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill:
Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that I do not know whether it is the purpose of the Senate to consider that matter at any length. It will certainly require a very full explanation. Whether or not that can be done under the five-minute rule-

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection at all that the bill go over, if the Senator desires to make an examination of it.

Mr. BACON. I want the Senator to explain the bill.
Mr. SMOOT. I am perfectly willing to do that if there is no objection to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the reading of the bill

The Secretary resumed, and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Utah if he desires to make an explanation of the bill now? I do not think it can be finally disposed of this morning.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say that if there is objection I have no intention of pressing the bill.

Mr. BACON. The bill will have to be explained. Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator desires the bill to go over, I have no objection.

Mr. CULBERSON. I do not desire to interfere so as to prevent the Senator from Utah making his statement now if he prefers, but I object to the final disposition of the bill or the consideration of it now for that purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, Mr. President, I had just as lief have the bill go over until a time when we can consider it with a view to its passage.

The PRESIDENT

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

The bill (S. 3579) to amend section 1 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to oaths was announced as next in order.

Mr. HEYBURN. I ask that that bill go over to-day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill goes over.

DAVID R. B. WINNIFORD.

The bill (S. 838) to correct the military record of David R. B.

Winniford, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That in the administration of the pension laws David R. B. Winniford, who was a first lieutenant of Company D, Eighth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States on October 24, 1864: Provided, That no pension shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BACON. I should like to have the report in that case read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report (No. 345) submitted by Mr.

FOSTER February 12, 1912, as follows:

The FRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report (No. 345) submitted by Mr. Foster February 12, 1912, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (8. 838) to correct the military record of David R. B. Winniford, has carefully considered same and reports it back to the Senate with a recommendation that it do pass, amended as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert in lied thereof the following:

"That in the administration of the pension laws David R. B. Winniford, who was a first lieutonant of Company D. Eighth Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States on October 24, 1864: Provided, That no pension shall accrue prior to the passage of this act."

Amend the title of the bill so as to read: "A bill for the relief of David R. B. Winniford."

A bill was introduced in the Sixtieth Congress under which a pensionable status was allowed Winniford, and it was favorably recommended by the Military Affairs Committee and passed by the Senate. It was never reported out by the Military Committee of the House: but your committee believes that, by reference to the report submitted to the Senate on that bill, the merits of the present measure will be seen. The report referred to reads as follows:

"It appears from the papers filed in this case that the soldier, sick and unfit for duty, resigned his commission for the good of the service, not knowing that his action would in any way injure his military record. The fact that he was promoted from the ranks to a first lieutenancy within a few months is sufficient proof that he was a good soldier and a brave one.

"Attention is invited to the following statement of the solder's record in the War Department:

"It is shown by the records that David R. B. Winniford was enrolled March 28, 1863, and was mustered into the service to do date the same day at Camp Dick Robinson, Ky. a "'F. C. AINSWORTH, "'The Military Secretary."

"The Military Secretary."

"Winniford, in his deposition filed in support of the bill, says:

"I tendered my resignation October 2, 1864. "for the good of the service," which was accepted. I further state that I was one of the many east Tennesseeans that went to Kentucky and entered the United States service to avoid conscription into the Confederate service.

"While organizing the regiment we remained at Camp Dick Robinson until October, I believe, when our regiment, with others, was attached to the Twenty-third Army Corps, commanded by Gen. A. E. Burnside, and took up our march to Tennessee.

"We were surrounded and besieged at Knoxville, and after the siege was raised we were transferred to the army of Gen. W. T. Sherman, and was in that long campaign through Georgia to Atlanta. My regiment took part in the many engagements during this campaign, and I was on the firing line in many skirmishes. The soldiers of my company all liked me, and I had the good will of the officers and soldiers of other companies of the regiment.

"After reaching Atlanta, Ga., our regiment was placed under command of Gen. Schofield and was ordered to Nashville, Tenn. I had been unwell for some time, having taken severe cold that left me with throat trouble, which developed into catarrh, and I thought I ought to get out of the Army, as I did not want to go to a hospital, and also to look after the welfare of my wife and child that needed my presence. I felt it would be for the best interest of the service.

"Capt. Berry, who was in command of the regiment for about three months before I resigned, was apparently a good friend. We were on good terms, and I can not understand why he made such a report as he did, for it was without any semblance of truth. The fact is that our regiment was not in any engagement of consequence during the time he had command until I resigned."

"In the archives of the War Department may be found other data which, taken in connection with the circumstances under which the record was made, must be construed in Winniford's favor. In substantiation of his deposition he files the sworn statements of several members of the regiment, including the colonel, from which the following excerpts are taken:

"'I Evix Alexander Reeve residing in Washington City state that "'I, Felix Alexander Reeve, residing in Washington City, state that was colonel of the Eighth Tennessee Volunteer Infantry in the War the Rebellion and that David R. B. Winniford was a first lieutenant my regiment. * *

"'I, Felix Alexander Reeve, residing in Washington City, state that I was colonel of the Eighth Tennessee Volunteer Infantry in the War of the Rebellion and that David R. B. Winniford was a first lieutenant in my regiment.

"As I was not with the regiment at the time of Lieut. Winniford's discharge, having resigned on surgeon's certificate of disability in July, 1864, I know nothing of the circumstances of such discharge. I had known Lieut. Winniford well from the time he entered the service, as above stated, until I left it, and can testify to his good character and his merit as a soldier. In fact, it was on account of his excellent record that he was promoted, as above stated. I always regarded him as a brave, intelligent, and faithful soldier and officer, and I hope that any injustice that may have been done to him may be rectified. From my intimate knowledge of his record while under my command I feel that this brave and loyal east Tennesseean is justly entitled to be relieved of the disability under which he has suffered so long."

"William M. Long, Bullsgap, Tenn., late private, Company D, Eighth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, says: 'I knew Lieut. David R. B. Winniford, of said company and regiment. He was a dutiful and good officer while in the service and acted honorably at all times, and know that any charge against his honor is unjust.'

"'Edward Bible, of Cocke County, Tenn., who served in the same company, says: "I was well acquainted with Lieut. David R. B. Winniford during his stay with the regiment. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of David R. B. Winniford."

JOHN L. BAIRD.

The bill (H. R. 8853) for the relief of John L. Baird was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent to John L. Baird for the lands covered by the Keene Stone Placer, Mineral Survey No. 1947, in Lawrence County, S. Dak., upon the transfer by him to the United States of the east half of the southeast quarter and lot No. 1, in section 4, and lot No. 4, in section 3, all in township 1 south, range 1 east of the Black Hills meridian, containing 155.96 acres, situate in the Black Hills National Forest; but patent shall not issue or the exchange be made until the same is approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, and the lands reconveyed shall thereby become a part of the Harney National Forest.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BONDED INDEBTEDNESS OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The bill (S. 4762) to amend an act approved February 6, 1905, entitled "An act to amend an act approved July 1, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 8, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 2, 1903, entitled 'An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands,' and to provide for the more efficient administration of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purwas considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. REED. Mr. President-

Mr. HEYBURN. Did the Senator from Missouri ask that the bill go over?

Mr. REED. I did not.

Mr. HEYBURN. I would suggest-while, of course, no objection can be urged to a request of that kind—that this legislation pertains solely to the internal affairs of the Philippine Islands, and that there is a very urgent necessity that this work should be performed. The bill only provides that a certain portion of this fund shall be available each year, and it enables the Philippine Government to let continuing contracts. It is very desirable that the bill should pass at this time. If the Senator could be induced to waive his request, I should be very glad indeed to get this legislation through this body.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, Fam a member of the committee from which this bill has been reported, and two or three days ago when the bill was before the committee an amendment was agreed upon. In the reading of the bill, as I heard it, I was not sure that the amendment had been correctly incorporated.

I merely wanted an opportunity to examine the bill.

Mr. HEYBURN. The amendment has been incorporated in the bill, and if the Secretary proceeds with the reading of the bill it will be apparent to the Senator from Missouri that the bill as presented to be acted upon is in exact conformity with the agreement of the committee. The amendment has not yet been read by the Secretary.

Mr. REED. Of course I know, Mr. President, that if the amendment was not incorporated it would be a mere matter of inadvertence, but I understood that the matter was coming to vote. Is there any amendment yet to be read?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was about to announce that the amendment reported by the committee would be read.

Mr. REED. Very well.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment reported by the committee will now be stated.

The Secretary. The amendment reported by the Committee on the Philippines is, on page 3, line 5, after the words "sum of," to strike out the words "fifteen million dollars" and to insert "$10,000,000 in addition to such indebtedness as may have been heretofore authorized for the purposes enumerated in this section; nor shall a greater amount of indebtedness under this act than $1,500,000 be incurred in any single year," so as to make the bill read:

make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act of Congress approved February 6, 1905, entitled "An act to amend an act approved July 1, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 8, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 2, 1903, entitled 'An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a colnage system in the Philippine Islands,' and to provide for the more efficient administration of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2. That for the purpose of providing funds to construct port and harbor works, bridges, roads, buildings for provincial and municipal schools, courthouses, penal institutions, and other public improvements for the development of the Philippine Islands by the general government thereof, the said government is authorized from time to time to incur indebtedness, borrow money, and to issue and sell therefor (at not less than par value in gold coin of the United States) registered or coupon bonds of such denominations and payable at such time or times, not later than 40 years after the approval of this act, as may be determined by said government, with interest thereon not to exceed 4½ per cent per annum: Provided, That the entire indebtedness of said government created by the authority conferred by this section shall not exceed at any one time the sum of $10,000,000 in addition to such indebtedness as may have been heretofore authorized for the purposes enumerated in this section; nor shall a greater amount of indebtedness under this act than $1,500,000 be incurred in any single year: And previded further, That the law of said government creating the indebtedness and authorizing the issue of the bonds under this section shall be approved by the

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I now call the attention of the Senator from Missouri to the fact that that was the exact amendment agreed upon in the committee.

Mr. BACON. I will ask, for the benefit of some of us who were not on the committee, that there may be a brief statement as to the provisions of the bill.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, for certain reasons I ask that the Secretary may read the report. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read. The Secretary read the report (No. 347) submitted by Mr. HEYBURN on the 12th instant, as follows:

The Committee on the Philippines, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4762) to amend an act approved February 6, 1905, entitled "An act to amend an act approved July 1, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 8, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 2, 1903, entitled 'An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands,' and to provide for the more efficient administration of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," have given the same a careful consideration and beg leave to submit the following report with the recommendation that the bill pass with the following amendments, viz:

On page 3, line 2, after the words "any one time the sum of," strike out the words "fifteen million dollars," and insert in lieu thereof the following, viz: "ten million dollars in addition to such indebtedness as may have been heretofore authorized for the purposes enumerated in this section; nor shall a greater amount of indebtedness under this act than $1,500,000 be incurred in any single year."

Under the present law the Government of the Philippine Islands is authorized for the purpose of providing funds to construct port and harbor works bridges, roads, buildings for provincial and municipal schools, courthouses, penal institutions, and other public improvements for the development of the Philippine Islands by the general government thereof, to incur indebtedness, borrow money, and to issue and sell therefor (at not less than par value in gold coin of the United States) registered or coupon bonds of such denominations and payable at such time or times, not later than 40 years after the approval of the sum of $5,000,000.

Senate bill 4762, as amended and approved by the committee, confers authority on the Philippine Government to increase such indebtedness to a sum not to exceed $15,000,000 shall be incurred in any single year.

The Secretary of War, to whom the bill was referred for recommendation and report, replied as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 29, 1912.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 29, 1912.

War Department, Washington, January 29, 1912.

My Dear Senator, I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th instant inclosing copy of Senate bill 4762, now in the hands of your committee, amending the act of Congress of February 6, 1905, so as to increase the limit of indebtedness which may be incurred by the Philippine Government from five to fifteen million dollars and requesting that the bill be given consideration and that you be advised of the views of the department regarding it.

The bill conforms to recommendations made by the President, the Philippine Commission, and myself, and I carnestly recommend that efforts be made to secure its early passage. The proceeds of the $5,000,000 bond issue previously authorized by Congress have been spent in the construction of important public works, notably harbor improvements at Manila, Cebu, and Iloilo, and in the construction and maintenance of highways. The Philippine Government has made plans for an elaborate and much-needed road system in the islands and now has available for the carrying on of this work a large corps of engineers and other men of technical knowledge and valuable experience. This organization, which it has taken years to build up, would have to be practically disbanded and the construction of roads and other public improvements discontinued, except such small amount as may be carried on from the current revenues of the islands, unless means are provided to complete the work. The Filipinos are very enthusiastic over the construction of roads and other public improvements, so much so that the Philippine Government has been unable to meet their demands in this respect, and in addition to the money spent by the General Government in this way the Provinces and municipalities have expended large sums of money.

Bonds can not be issued under this authority except in pursuance of legislation of the Philippine Government approved by the President of the United States. This assures a careful consideration of the subject before any issue

Mr.	OVERMAN Mr President may I ask the question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. HEYBURN. Yes.

Mr. OVERMAN. Does the United States Government indorse these bonds?

Mr. HEYBURN. No-

Is the Senator sure about that? Mr. OVERMAN.

Mr. HEYBURN. Not any more than it indorses the Philippine Government.

Mr. OVERMAN. I should like to ask the Senator what becomes of the $14,000,000 surplus now in the hands of Gen, Edwards, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department?

Mr. HEYBURN. There is another measure before the committee involving that question, a separate piece of legislation, which has been under consideration.

Mr. OVERMAN. Would it not be better to have the two

Mr. HEYBURN. They do not belong together.
Mr. OVERMAN. I remember that when I was on the Military Affairs Committee it was stated that there was held in the hands of Gen. Edwards, of the War Department, a surplus fund of $14,000,000, I think, that belonged to these islands, and that had been deposited in the banks of New York. Why can not that money be used for this purpose, instead of authorizing the issue of bonds?

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, that money is the basis of circulation. It constitutes a reserve fund in the Philippine treasury. It can not be used for this purpose.

Mr. OVERMAN. It is not in the Philippine treasury, is it?

Mr. HEYBURN. This measure is to provide means for the

Mr. HEYBURN. This measure is to provide means for the purpose of extending a system of public works. The present is an opportune time to do it, because the organization is complete, having just finished the work heretofore authorized. There is no connection whatever between this work and the surplus held in the Philippine treasury, for which legislation is now pending.

The surplus could not be used for this purpose.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator is mistaken about its being held in the Philippine treasury. It is held by Gen. Edwards, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department.

Mr. HEYBURN. I suppose the Senator means it is under his

If the Senator had been present at the meeting of the com-mittee held on Saturday, I think he would understand the exact relation of that reserve fund, for the use and preservation of which legislation is being sought. But I can assure the Senator that it is not a fund that could be used for this purpose at all. It is a fund to stand behind circulation. This is to provide money to be expended upon public works.

There would be a very great loss to the Philippine Government and to all concerned, if we were to allow the force now available to be disorganized and dissipated. The work that it available to be disorganized and dissipated. The work that it is proposed to perform under this bill is necessary for the development of the islands. We are merely authorizing the expenditure of the money. It does not come out of our own Treasury. The people of the Philippine Islands and those who are conversant with their needs heartly approve the extension of this system of public works.

Mr. OVERMAN. Whether we authorize it or not, do we not become responsible in a measure?

Mr. HEYBURN. We do not. The responsibility is nil. The Philippine Government has demonstrated the fact that financially it is quite able to take care of its own liabilities and to keep its own engagements. Nominally, we guarantee the bonds; but that is because of the relation that exists between that Government and ours, under legislation heretofore enacted, in which doubtless the Senator participated.

Mr. OVERMAN. But, as I understand, whether these bonds

Mr. OVERMAN. But, as I understand, whether these bonds are to be issued under legislation heretofore enacted or under the provisions of this bill, we will indorse them.

Mr. HEYBURN. The relation that exists is by reason of legislation not now up for consideration. I can say to the Senator that this matter has been given the closest attention by every branch of the Government, and it can not now be made operative except under the supervision of the War Department and the President of the United States. There is not the slightest danger of any misappropriation or misuse of this fund. It is as safely guarded as it is possible under our system of government to guard the expenditure of a comparatively small sum. Fifteen million dollars, as applied to work of this kind in that country, is a small sum of money; and inasmuch as we do not have to pay the $15,000,000, we ought to allow the people of the Philippines to advance along the lines upon which they have started.

Mr. OVERMAN. We may have to pay it, though.

Mr. HEYBURN. We have not been bothered so far with any of the bills of that Government, and inasmuch as they have a handsome reserve fund of a good bit more than $15,000,000, it does not seem probable that we shall. This is not an appropriation out of the Treasury of the United States.
Mr. BACON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. HEYBURN. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I should like to make an inquiry. has not entirely taken us into his confidence. He speaks of a $14,000,000 reserve, and when the Senator from North Carolina asks him why that reserve is not utilized for the purpose now sought to be accomplished by this bond issue, his reply is that there is another proposition pending which probably will require the use of that $14,000,000. Without asking the Senator to go into it in detail, I should like at least to know the nature of that enterprise.

Mr. HEYBURN. The reserve is not the only money the Philippine Government possesses. It possesses that and, in addition, it possesses a very large gold reserve. It has a silver reserve, a gold reserve to back it, and a circulation. monetary system. In addition to that, it has available through the ordinary means of taxation and revenue another fund, which should be made available for public improvements upon the islands.

There is no more relation whatever between the money be hind the circulation of the Philippines and the money they receive through their various sources of revenue than there is in our own Government. There is none in ours, We do not take out of the Treasury the money that is held as a basis of circulation or as a reserve and build public works with it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Does the Senator think this $14,000,000 is the basis of an issue? Mr. HEYBURN. While doubtless that was the figure at one time it is a larger sum at present. Mr. OVERMAN. Yes; but the $14,000,000 in the hands of

Gen. Edwards is not the basis of currency.

Mr. HEYBURN. The Senator speaks of Gen. Edwards as the custodian of this fund. I am at a loss to know just exactly what he intends to convey.

Mr. OVERMAN. It developed at one time, before the Military Affairs Committee, that he had a very large sum of money in his hands

Mr. HEYBURN. The Secretary of the Treasury has a very large sum of money in his hands, for that matter.

Mr. OVERMAN. He is the head of a bureau; and it was stated that a large amount of money—I think, $14,000,000—had been deposited by him in a New York bank.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, that fund is exactly where the law says it shall be. If, in organizing the financial system of the Philippine Government, we did not make proper and sufficient provision for the custody of its funds we could hardly hark back to that question now. The statement that Gen. Edwards had the money was, perhaps, rather a careless use of language. I suppose the idea was that as controller of this fund he deposited it at a certain place.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is what I want to know. I want to know how he held it. He is the head of a bureau in the War Department.

Mr. HEYBURN. He held it officially. Mr. ROOT. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. HEYBURN. Certainly.

Mr. ROOT. I think I may be able to give the Senator from North Carolina some information on the subject about which he

Mr. OVERMAN. Information is what I want.

Mr. ROOT. The Senator will remember that when we took the Philippines the islands were upon a silver basis. All the fluctuations and inconveniences which arise from exchange as between the silver basis of the Orient and the gold basis of the Occident oppressed the business of the Philippines. The money changers were taking toll both ways all the time, and legitimate business always had to be accompanied by speculation upon the rise and fall of exchange.

Under the authority of Congress we undertook to take the Philippines out of that condition and put them on the same financial basis as the United States. We did so. The operation was eminently successful, and it was conducted in a manner which reflected great credit upon everybody concerned with the government of the islands.

In the course of that transaction we had, first, to establish a fund by means of which the coinage of the Philippine Islands, which is silver in practical use, could be kept good in gold. It was necessary to keep that fund partly in Manila and partly in the United States, where it would be available for the purpose of supporting the Treasury against any drafts upon it by the purchase of gold here. The fund was deposited in the banks and trust companies which would give the largest return by way of interest upon the amount of the deposit, and which were approved as to solvency by the Secretary of the Treasury. That is the fund which, I suppose, is referred to.

Gen. Edwards, as the Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, was the officer charged with making the drafts upon the fund whenever such drafts should be necessary. It turned out that the credit that was given by the possession of this fund, and its existence, and the ability instantly to throw it into the support of the new system of finance upon a gold basis, made unnecessary the use of more than a portion of it. The net result was that the Government of the Philippine Islands got more interest on that fund, without losing a dollar of it, than it paid on the securities that were issued to borrow it during the process of the transfer from one system to the other.

Mr. HEYBURN. It was a very profitable operation. Mr. ROOT. It was very profitable and successful.

Mr. OVERMAN. I am not criticizing anyone. know about that fund and why it can not be used.

Mr. ROOT. I have made the explanation.

Mr. HEYBURN. I think the reason it can not be used is obvious.

Mr. OVERMAN. I thank the Senator for the information, because I did not know about it.

Mr. ROOT. What remains since the completion of that transaction is the reserve fund, which is always to stand behind the value of the Philippine currency, making it certain that it will always be kept good in gold, just as here we always have a reserve fund standing behind the value of our green-

Mr. BACON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. HEYBURN. I do. Mr. BACON. I should like to have the permission of the Senator from Idaho to ask the Senator from New York whether it is a fact that the business of the Philippine Islands is conducted on a gold basis?

Mr. ROOT. It is.

Mr. BACON. When I say on a gold basis, I do not mean whether it is exchangeable into gold or not; but are prices quoted in gold in the Philippine Islands? The evidence as to whether a country is on the gold basis is whether prices are quoted in gold.

Mr. ROOT. Prices are quoted in the peso, which is fixed by act of Congress, containing a certain amount of silver, approximately equal in value to one-half our gold dollar.

Mr. BACON. Exactly.
Mr. ROOT. The currency which is named in the quotations is that silver currency, in which by law each peso is exactly equal to one-half a gold dollar. The maintenance of that fund as equal to one-half a gold dollar is protected by this reserve just as we have a reserve to protect our greenbacks as equal to a gold dollar. Mr. BACON. I understand the facts to be exactly as stated by the Senator from New York, but I thought, and I still think, that the Senator from New York was not distinguished by his usual accuracy when he made the statement, as I understood him to make it, that the business and financial transactions of the Philippine Islands are upon a gold basis.

Mr. HEYBURN. They are stated in equivalents.

Mr. ROOT. I think I was strictly accurate. The Philippines are on a gold basis, just as Mexico is on a gold basis, and just as we are on a gold basis. Though we quote prices in dollars the prices are good, payable in greenbacks. The greenbacks are kept at a fixed gold valuation by our reserve.

Mr. BACON. I can not agree with the greenbacks are

Mr. BACON. I can not agree with the Senator. there is a wide distinction between being upon a silver basis with the value of the silver coin guaranteed and being upon a gold basis. They are upon a silver basis. It is the common currency of the country, and the prices are quoted in the common currency of that country, in the peso, which is a silver coin corresponding nearly to our dollar, but not exactly. There may be a distinction without a difference, but still I think there is a very wide and a very marked distinction between a country upon a silver basis where that value of the coin is guaranteed to be kept at a certain value and a country upon another basis the unit of which is a gold dollar.

I shall not quarrel with the Senator from Georgia about the sense in which he uses words. He can use them to please himself.

Mr. BACON. Well, Mr. President, I am sure the Senator from New York indulges himself in that liberty very freely.

Mr. ROOT. When I say a country is on a gold basis, I mean that the currency in which its business is transacted has a fixed and immutable value in gold, and is subject to no fluctuations of exchange because of the difference in the value of gold and silver. I may be wrong about that, but I do not think I am. However, if I am, then let us agree that the Senator from Georgia will use the term as he pleases and that I may use the term as I please.

Mr. BACON. The Senator from New York certainly has that liberty; but, Mr. President, I will take the further liberty of pointing out the inaccuracy of the Senator's analogy between our use of the greenback and the use of the silver peso in the Philippine Islands. When we say a dollar in green-backs we mean a dollar of the value of gold. When we say a peso in the Philippine Islands it means a hundred cents which is guaranteed to be worth one-half of that in gold. There is a very wide distinction between the two.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Before the Senator from Georgia takes his seat-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. HEYBURN. I yield.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I wish to call attention to an error which I think the Senator from New York inadvertently made in comparing our gold reserve with the gold reserve maintained in the Philippine treasury. Our gold reserve of $150,000,000 is to maintain the credit of the greenback, which is a promise to pay money. The $10,000,000 kept in the Philippine treasury is kept there not for the purpose of paying any promissory note of the Philippine Government, but is kept there to maintain the value of the Philippine coinage. Something like 30,000,000 pesos, I understand, have been issued and are in circulation pesos, I understand, have been issued and are in circulation either as original silver pesos or as certificates of silver pesos on deposit in the Philippine treasury. This gold reserve is kept as a guaranty to maintain the pesos, whether coin or certificates, upon a certain standard of value. In this reserve some $10,000,000 of gold have been accumulated, so that for 30,000,000 silver pesos, in coin or certificates, in circulation we have in the Philippine treasury, as I understand it, some 30,000,000 pesos in silver and $10,000,000 in gold.

In my opinion that is a cash reserve entirely too large, and the fact that it is too large is indicated by the effort now being made by the administration to provide for the investment of a part of that reserve in securities. That is the bill to which the Senator from Idaho refers and which I consider to be a dangerous bill.

I believe the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] was justified when he called attention to the evil which exists in the large amount of money kept on deposit under the control of the Philippine or Insular Government. It is an unnecessary amount of money, considering the size of the obligation, because something like $14,000,000 are maintained on deposit in the banks.

Mr. OVERMAN. May I interrupt the Senator?
Mr. HITCHCOCK. Certainly.
Mr. OVERMAN. It has been some time ago, but it seems to me, if I am not mistaken, that this fund is entirely under the charge of Gen. Edwards, who has been buying bonds with-

Mr. HITCHCOCK. No---Mr. OVERMAN. I am not sure.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. No bonds have been purchased. It is maintained as a cash reserve, as I understand it. The insular government is now asking the Committee on the Philippines to authorize it to invest a part of this reserve in securities, such securities as railroad bonds of the Philippine Islands and such securities as might be accepted by the United States Government for postal deposits.

for postal deposits.

Mr. OVERMAN. I remember that it came out on cross examination, and I was very much astonished at the time to know it, that the Chief of the Insular Bureau of the War Department had that great amount of money under his care.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I think it is excessive. But in order to cut this matter short, I will ask that the bill may go over. I reluctantly concurred in the report. I think I have found a slight inaccuracy in the preparation of the amendment; there is an omission of several words; and in order that I may verify it, I will ask that the bill go over.

Mr. HEYBURN. I suggest to the Senator not to defer it longer than is absolutely necessary. If the bill goes over, I give notice that at a very early day I will ask the Senate to take it up for consideration.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, before the bill goes over, I want to say a single word in regard to what the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Hitchcock] has said as to the analogy between our reserve to make good a promise to pay in greenbacks and the Philippine reserve.

I have paid no attention to the subject of Philippine finances for a number of years. I do not know how much the reserve is, or whether it is too large. I do not understand that that question is up in this bill, but on some other bill. However, as to the analogy between the two there is just as binding and solemn a promise to be kept good by the Philippine reserve as there is by the United States reserve, because the Philippine Government is pledged to everyone who takes one of its pesos to make it good in gold, and the promise is just as solemn as if it were stamped upon the piece of silver.

Mr. HEYBURN. I would simply suggest, that it may be in the mind of Senators, that there is a separate proposition of legislation pending, and that it bears no relation whatever to It would be utterly inappropriate to confuse them. this fund.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over. The next bill on the calendar is a pension bill and will be passed over.

SENATOR FROM WISCONSIN.

The report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections relative to the charges preferred by the legislature of Wisconsin against Isaac Stephenson, a Senator from that State, was announced as the next business on the calendar.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will go over.

SNARE & TRIEST CO.

The bill (S. 2512) for the relief of the Snare & Triest Co. was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claim of the Snare & Triest Co. for reimbursement for all losses to them, including damage to pier, growing out of a collision by the U. S. S. Colorado on the night of February 9, 1905, at League Island Navy Yard, with jurisdiction to hear and determine the same to judgment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This completes the Calendar of General Orders under Rule VIII.

DEERLODGE NATIONAL FOREST, MONT.

Mr. DIXON. From the Committee on Public Lands, I report back favorably without amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 71) authorizing the State of Montana to take timber from the Deerlodge National Forest for certain purposes, and I submit a report (No. 350) thereon. I should like to ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be

The Secretary read the joint resolution, and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SENATOR FROM WISCONSIN.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I would ask if the minority report has been prepared in the Stephenson case? I am going to ask to have the case set for a day certain. I call the attention of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] to it.

Mr. CLAPP (in his seat). I do not know anything about it. Mr. HEYBURN. I will ask at this time that Order of Business No. 299, on the calendar, which is the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in the Stephenson investigation case, be taken up on February 20, and that it be disposed of on that legislative day.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, there were five members of the committee, I think, who declined to join in the majority report, and I do not see any of them here.

Mr. HEYBURN. The Senator from Minnesota was one of them.

Mr. CLAPP. I mean none except myself.
Mr. LEA. I was one of those who joined in the minority report.

Mr. CLAPP. Personally, I have no objection to fixing that day, but it should not be done just now, I suggest, as there are very few Senators in the Chamber.

Mr. LEA. I was absent from the Chamber when the Senator from Idaho suggested the fixing of a date. What is the date suggested by him?

Mr. HEYBURN. The 20th of February; a week from to-day.

Mr. LEA. I object.

Mr. LEA. 1 object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I should like to ask the Senator from Idaho whether the testimony taken in that investigation has been published in such a form that it is accessible to Members of the Senate.

Mr. HEYBURN. Every Member of the Senate has had a copy of the testimony for some weeks, with a digest. It was sent to every committee room.

Mr. LEA. Will the Senator from Idaho yield for a moment?

Mr. HEYBURN. Yes.

Mr. LEA. I desire to state as one of the five Members who wish to present a minority report that we expect to present a report this week, on Thursday or Friday; and, speaking for myself, after that we will be willing to agree, as far as I know, upon an early vote on the question. But before we present a report, for one I would not like to have a date set.

Mr. HEYBURN. This is not a question that requires unanimous consent. It is a question of the highest privilege, and I give notice that on the 20th of February I will call up this matter.

Mr. LEA. If the Senator will yield for a moment further, I will state that I understand in the Martin case, from Kansas, it was held that such a question is not one of the highest

Mr. HEYBURN. The Senate has held that it is.

Mr. LEA. The Senate held in that case that under an objection it would go over.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 3 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 14, 1912, at 2 o'clock p. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, February 13, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our heavenly Father, let Thy spirit, we beseech Thee, come mightly upon us, that with all diligence, perseverance, and firmness of purpose we may stand for our honest convictions with patience, humility, gentleness, and brotherly love. That in all our intercourse with our fellow men we may do unto them as we would have them do unto us, and so fulfill the law and the prophets in the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

BRIG. GEN. DAVID S. GORDON.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday I introduced a bill providing for the promotion on the retired list of the United States Army of Brig. Gen. David S. Gordon to be a major general. I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a statement with reference to his distinguished military career.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to insert in the Record the military record of Gen. Gordon. Is there objection?

Mr. HAY. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do not think that requests of that sort should be granted. Everybody will be wanting his military career printed in the RECORD. I will ask the gentleman, Is there any particular reason why this should be printed in the RECORD?

Mr. FOCHT. Only that when this question comes up on the bill you will want to know all about it. Mr. Speaker, I will change my request and ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HAY. I object.

PRESERVATION OF THE CATARACT OF NIAGARA.

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Foreign Affairs is about to propose legislation for the preservation of the scenic beauty of the cataract at Niagara. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting an editorial on that subject which appeared in the recent edition of the Outlook.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?
Mr. SULZER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the gentleman whether this editorial was written by the editor of the Outlook or the contributing [Laughter.]

Mr. KENDALL. It is a splendid editorial in either instance. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The editorial referred to is as follows:

THE PRESERVATION OF NIAGARA FALLS.

The editorial referred to is as follows:

THE PRESERVATION OF NIAGARA FALLS.

Five and a half years ago Congress decreed that the imposing spectacle of Niagara Falls is a national possession which must be preserved and that the preservation of it is a function of the Federal Government. Four years later the Governments of Great Britain and the United States agreed that the preservation of Niagara is not only a national duty but an international one. By treaty each Government agreed not to permit the diversion from the river above the Falls of water in excess of certain definite amounts. With the promulgation of the treaty, therefore, the waters of Niagara Falls, in so far as the United States was concerned, came under double protection—the international protection of the treaty and the national protection of the Burton Act.

In limiting the diversion of water the Burton Act was more stringent than the treaty—the act permitting the diversion of only 15,600 cubic feet per second, while under the treaty the United States could, if it wished, permit the diversion of 20,000 cubic feet per second. In addition, the Burton Act restricted to certain definite amounts the importation from Canada of electric power generated by the waters of Niagara. This was an important provision, for the reason that there was not, at the time of the act, nor is there yet, a market in Canada for more than a small fraction of the power which could be generated by the amount of water permitted to be diverted under the treaty. The provisions of the Burton Act have twice been extended since the treaty was promulgated; but the act again expires in March next. A joint resolution is now before Congress providing for the further extension of its provisions during the life of the treaty.

This joint resolution should be promptly adopted, for four reasons: First. The American people have determined that the scenic grandeur of Niagara Falls shall be preserved as a precious national possession.

Second, The duty of preserving Niagara is a national du State.

Third. That the existing diversions have not harmed the Falls, and that no increased diversion possible within the treaty limits would harm them.

Fourth. That no limitations should be put upon the importation of power from Canada, because the power will be generated there anyway, and American interests might as well have the benefit of the power so and American interests might as well have the benefit of the power so generated.

The reply to these arguments is plain:

First. The contention of the power companies that they suffer because they have not received all that they were intended to have might conceivably afford the basis for a claim for damages; it affords no basis, however, for a demand which would work further injury to the Falls as an object of natural beauty.

Second. The principle has already been established, both by statute and by treaty, that the regulation of the use of the waters of Niagara is not a State function, but a national and international function. To reverse that position now would be to take a long step backward. Incidentally, it must be remembered that up to the time when the Falls came definitely under the national control no move was made by New York State to preserve their integrity.

Third. In a report by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army, based on a long and thorough investigation by Army engineers, which was recently transmitted to Congress by the President in a message, the following conclusion is reached: "The existing diversions have already seriously interfered with and injured the scenic grandeur of Niagara Falls at the Horseshoe, which injury and interference will be emphasized by the effects of lower stages sure to recur on Lake Erie and the upper lakes due to natural causes." Upon this point this conclusion of unprejudiced expert observers should be final.

Fourth. The investigation of the Army engineers has shown that less than one-eighth of the power which could be generated in Canada by the amount of water permitted under the treaty is now in use. It has not yet been proved that the Canadian market for power will be large enough in the near future to use any considerable proportion of the water permitted by the treaty to be diverted on the Canadian side. Unless the power can be imported into the United States, therefore, the use of water on the Canadian side is not likely to increase rapidly.

The reenactment of the provisions of the Burton Act is a national duty, because the people of the United States have determined that the scenic grandeur of Niagara Falls shall be preserved; because that scenic grandeur is already impaired and is in danger of further impairment; because the Burton Act has provided a method by which the integrity of the Falls has been effectively protected; and because no other method which is proposed will accomplish the same result.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL,

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 18956) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. CLARK of Florida in the chair.

Mr. CLARK of Florida took the chair amid general applause. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment to the amendment which is pending.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the amendment by striking out the words "Fort Robinson." The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota) there were—ayes 52, noes 13.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I now offer an amendment to strike out the word "seven" and insert the word "six" in line 1, page 32.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 32, line 1, strike out the word "seven" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six," so that it will read "one million six hundred and twenty-one thousand three hundred and eighty-nine dollars."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, is there not pending an amendment which was offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not recall the amendment referred to, but will ask the Clerk to report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 32, line 2, strike out the period and insert a comma and add the following: "Provided further, That no part of the sum appropriated by this act shall be used to construct a mobile Army post of less grade or size than a regimental post into a regimental post, or a regimental post into a brigade post."

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, is there not a point of order pending to that amendment?

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I reserved the point of order when the amendment was offered.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is reserved.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, this is merely a limitation on the appropriation.

on the appropriation.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, when I reserved the point of order last evening I did not catch the full import of the amendment. In looking it over I am satisfied that it is simply a limiment. tation-upon the appropriation, and, therefore, I desire to withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn. The question is on the amendment.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, is the amendment subject to debate? The CHAIRMAN. No; all debate was closed by the committee on yesterday.

Mr. FERRIS. What was the ruling of the Chair as to the point of order which was reserved?

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order was withdrawn.

Mr. FERRIS. Then I desire to reserve the point of order. Mr. SHERLEY. It is too late.
The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it is too late. The point of order was withdrawn in the presence of the committee by the gentleman from California.

Mr. FERRIS. No proceedings have taken place since then.
The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS). The Chair was in the act of putting the question to the committee. There was no haste about it. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Helm].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Ferris) there were-ayes 50, noes 31.

So the amendment was agreed to. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Transportation of the Army and its supplies: For transportation of the Army and its supplies, including transportation of the troops when moving, either by land or water, and of their baggage, including the cost of packing and crating; for transportation of recruiting and recruiting parties; of applicants for enlistment between recruiting stations and recruiting depots; of persons on their discharge from the United States military prison to their homes (or elsewhere as they may elect), provided the cost in each case shall not be greater than to the place of last enlistment; of supplies furnished to the militiar for the permanent equipment thereof; of the necessary agents and other employees; of clothing and equipage and other quartermaster's stores from Army depots or places of purchase or delivery to the several posts and Army depots and from those depots to the troops in the field; of horse equipments and of subsistence stores from places of purchase and from the places of delivery under contract to such places as the circumstances of the service may require them to be sent; of ordnance and ordnance stores, and small arms from the foundries and armories to the arsenais, fortifications, frontier posts, and Army depots; for payment of wharfage tolls and ferriage; for transportation of funds of the Army; for the hire of amployees in the payment of Army transportation law-flux on such languart rallunds as hance with the payment of Army transportation law-flux on the such languart rallunds as hance with the such as the payment of the service with a flux of the Army; for the tail of the contract of the service with a such as a ferriage; for transportation of tunds of the Army; for the public at large, and shall be accepted as in full for all demands for such service; Provided further, That in expending the money appropriated by this act a rallund company which has not received all in bonds of the United States for postal, military, naval, and other Gov

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to inquire of the gentleman from Virginia whether it is possible to state how much of this appropriation is expended for mileage?

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I do not know that any of it is expended for mileage. The appropriation for mileage is under a separate item in the bill—$500,000. There is no part of this appropriation expended for any such purpose. To what does the gentleman refer?

Mr. FITZGERALD. There are a great many items grouped in this paragraph, and I was endeavoring to ascertain whether any of this appropriation is available for mileage, Mr. HAY. It is not. The gentleman will find on page 246 Mr. HAY. It is not. The gentleman will find on page 246 of volume 1 of the hearings an itemized statement of what this appropriation is expended for. He will see from that that no part is expended for mileage. Mileage, as I understand it, is for travel expenses of officers of the Army. That is included in an item of $500,000 on a previous page of the bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would inquire whether the gentleman from Virginia has taken up the question of segregating the various services for which this appropriation is available?

I have not. That matter was called to the attention of the House on yesterday afternoon by the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Helm, and by the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. SHERLEY.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Roads, walks, wharves, and drainage: For the construction and repairs by the Quartermaster's Department of roads, walks, and wharves; for payment of extra-duty pay to enlisted men employed in opening roads and in building wharves; for the pay of employees; for the disposal of drainage; for dredging channels and for care and improvement of grounds at military posts and stations, $598,557: Provided, That $10,000 of the amount herein appropriated shall be expended to macadamize the roadway upon the Government property between the United States Government experimental farm and the Arlington Military Cemetery, in the county of Alexandria, Va.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order upon the proviso.

Mr. HAY. Will the gentleman state his point of order?

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I make the point of order against the proviso beginning on page 35, line 15, and concluding with line 19, upon the ground that the authorization is not contained in existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I have only to say that this roadway is part of the Government property between the United States Government experimental farm and the national cemetery at Arlington, and it is in order, I believe, because it proposes to continue a public work already in progress.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it contended that this is an appropriation for a public work already in progress—

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, this bill carries appropriations for the support of the Army, and any public work in progress is not in order on an Army appropriation bill. It must be shown to have some intimate connection with the mobile army. I do not believe these Government experimental farms and the national cemetery come within that category.

Mr. HAY. I will state to the gentleman from New York that it is intended to improve the road which goes to the Arlington Cemetery and it is only for that reason it is put in the bill. I do not know that any military road is in progress of being built.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offered an amendment The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will send it to the desk.

Mr. HAY. I have already sent it to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. But the gentleman from Virginia had not been recognized in respect to any amendment, and the Chair was not aware of any pending amendment. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 35, line 19, after the word "Virginia," insert the following: "Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended at any of the following-named Army posts: Fort Apache, Bofse Barracks, Fort Brady, Fort Clark, Fort George Wright, Fort Jay, Fort Lincoln, Fort Logan H. Roots, Fort McLotosh, Fort Mackenzie, Madison Barracks, Fort Meade, Fort Niagara, Fort Ontario, Fort Wayne, Whipple Barracks, Fort William Henry Harrison, Fort Yellowstone, Fort Ethan Allen, Plattsburg Barracks, Fort Robinson, Fort Missoula, Fort Logan, Fort Douglas, and Fort D. A. Russell."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I would like that amendment to come in line 14, after the word "dollars," as the other language has been stricken from the bill, and I offer it in accordance with the report of the Secretary of War to which I referred yesterday afternoon.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Chairman, the policy of concentrating the Army at certain strategic posts, as outlined in the late communication from the Secretary of War, ought not to be effected hastily on an appropriation bill. Among other posts designated the Secretary is the of Ferre Devider. Utah but in nated by the Secretary is that of Fort Douglas, Utah, but in this connection the Secretary of War notes the strategic features of Fort Douglas for military purposes, but notwithstanding its importance and desirability for a large Army post it is included by this amendment in the wholesale slaughter con-templated. I desire to read a statement of the Commercial Club of Salt Lake City, which gives full and complete information showing the importance of this post as a strategic rendezvous for a large body of troops. Instead of limiting and restricting this fort, it ought to be enlarged to a brigade post. It has all the necessities for such brigade post. It has ample grounds, an abundant supply of pure mountain water, and a climate renowned for its life-giving and invigorating properties. It is in close and immediate communication with the entire country and has ample railroad facilities for transportation with promptness and dispatch to any point required. It is in the center of a rich agricultural section, which insures a low cost of maintenance and support of troops. All these facts are so convincingly and accurately set forth by the statement of the business men of Salt Lake City, which I earnestly commend to the attention of the House:

FACTS AND MEMORANDA ON THE PROPOSED ENLARGEMENT OF FORT DOUGLAS MILITARY POST, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, FROM A REGIMENTAL TO A BRIGADE POST.

[Issued by the Commercial Club of Salt Lake City, Utah.] SALT LAKE CITY.

Salt Lake City has 100,000 inhabitants, with the usual quota of banks, hotels, office buildings, and mercantile establishments. Its altitude above sea level is 5,230 feet. Its average winter temperature is 32.1°. Its average summer temperature is 76.2°.

The average annual precipitation is 20.2 inches. It is situated at the western base of the Wasatch Mountains, in latitude 40° 46' and longitude 110° 54'.

TABLE OF DISTANCES.

TABLE OF DISTANCES.

It is distant from Denver 668 miles.

It is distant from Omaha 1,037 miles.

It is distant from Portland 865 miles.

It is distant from Seattle 1,050 miles.

It is distant from San Francisco 803 miles.

It is distant from Los Angeles 781 miles.

It is distant from San Diego 907 miles.

It is distant from El Paso 887 miles.

It is distant from Fort Assinniboine 685 miles.

RAILROAD CONNECTIONS.

It has direct railroad connection with all these cities. With San Francisco it has two railroad lines, the Southern Pacific and the Western Pacific Railroads. With Denver there are two lines, the Denver & Rio Grande and the Union Pacific Railroads.

FORT DOUGLAS RESERVATION.

Fort Douglas Military Reservation of 10,000 acres, lies to the east and a little nearer to the mountains, and a few hundred feet higher than the city. The western boundary of the reservation is the eastern boundary of the city. From the flagstaff at Fort Douglas to the United States post office in the city is 2.75 miles. An efficient electric car system, telephone, and telegraph lines connect the city with the fort. About one-fourth of the reservation is comparatively level land, below the foothills, and three-fourths in the foothills, canyons, and mountains to the east of the level ground.

WATER SUPPLY.

WATER SUPPLY.

The reservation covers the entire watershed of the Red Butte Canyon of about 10 square miles area. From this canyon is available a supply of pure water sufficient to cover the needs of a permanent encampment of at least 5,000 troops and the necessary animals going with that number of men. It also covers the watershed of Dry Creek, a canyon on the north side of the reservation, from which an additional water supply may be obtained. A Salt Lake City water main 36 inches in diameter passes across the reservation from Parleys Canyon. A 12-inch city water main from Emigration Canyon line also passes across the reservation. For additional water supply, in case it should be needed, the city "high line" from City Creek Canyon could furnish a head of 400 feet above the level of the base of the flagstaff at the fort. This extends around the base of the mountain to the north boundary of the reservation.

DRAINAGE AND SEWERAGE.

The entire comparatively level portion of the reservation slopes to the west and there is no opportunity for the gathering of surface water in pools or lakes and the formation of swamps or malariabreeding places. The sewers at the fort are connected with the complete sewerage system of Salt Lake City, whereby all sewage matter is conveyed to and deposited in Great Salt Lake, where it is purified by the exceeding saltness of the lake water.

MAP OF RESERVATION AND SALT LAKE CITY.

A map accompanying this statement, Exhibit A, shows the extent and topography of the reservation and the boundaries of Salt Lake City, the union railroad depots, and the proposed spur, 4 miles in length, from the Park City branch of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad into the reservation.

MAP OF FORT DOUGLAS AND COUNTRY WEST TO THE COAST.

Another map, Exhibit B, shows the location of Fort Douglas with reference to the Pacific coast, the principal cities on the coast, the Canadian and Mexican boundaries, and the railroads radiating from Salt Lake City to those various points and the distance to each point.

PASSES THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS TO THE WEST.

There are only three passes through the mountains to the west which are available for railroads or wagon roads, and they are occupied by the three railroads extending west from this city.

CLIMATE.

The climate of Salt Lake City is salubrious, without extremes of either heat or cold. Troops coming to Fort Douglas from foreign service, debilitated from the climate, rapidly recuperate and recover health and strength at this station.

HOT SPRINGS.

Inside the city limits and also adjoining it on the north are numerous hot mineral springs, the waters of which are claimed to have all the curative qualities of hot springs elsewhere.

GREAT SALT LAKE,

Great Salt Lake, 90 by 30 miles in size, is situated about 12 miles northwest of the city and is reached by three railroads. The water of this lake contains 16 per cent salt, and besides furnishing most delightful bathing is found to be very beneficial in rheumatism, skin diseases, and other ailments.

SURROUNDING CULTIVATED COUNTRY.

In the area surrounding the city are thousands of cultivated farms and orchards, where all the vegetables, fruits, grasses, and grains of the Temperate Zone are produced in abundance, much of which is now exported from the State. Cattle, sheep, and hogs are raised in the State far beyond the supply needed for consumption by the people of the State.

RAILROADS TO THE EAST.

Two railroads from the east—the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande—now enter the city, and a third, the Moffat road, it is expected, will be extended from Colorado to this point in the near future.

TARGET, DRILL, AND MANEUVER GROUNDS.

TARGET, DRILL, AND MANEUVER GROUNDS.

The area of the reservation is ample for all necessary buildings, drill and parade grounds, target range for both artillery and infantry. In the Salt Lake Valley and in the mountains surrounding it there are innumerable locations suitable for camp grounds within a day's march from the fort. At various other points in the State other grounds can be reached in from two to five days' march where all requirements in the way of wood, water, feed, etc., can be easily secured. For the annual maneuvers there is a territory in the vicinity of Heber City, reached by the Denver & Rio Grande Rallroad, which has been used by the National Guard of Utah, which is admirably suited in every particular and is large enough for two brigades to maneuver at the same time. This field is 40 miles from Salt Lake City, over good roads, and an easy three days' infantry march. Among the other excellent fields for maneuvers is Strawberry Valley, 140 miles, or six days' march, from Salt Lake City.

BUILDING MATERIAL.

A good quality of building stone exists on the reservation near to the point where it will be needed. This stone has been extensively used in the erection of the buildings now standing at the fort. Other building material can be obtained here at reasonable prices.

STRATEGIC POSITION OF FORT DOUGLAS.

material can be obtained here at reasonable prices.

STRATEGIC POSITION OF FORT DOUGLAS.

It is thought by those competent to express an opinion that Fort Douglas is admirably located strategically for a base for supplies and troops for the defense of the entire Pacific coast.

Los Angeles, 781 miles distant, is reached by regular trains in 24½ hours. This can be made by special trains, when necessary, in about 18 hours, the restriction placed by competing lines being the only reason for the present schedule of 24½ hours.

San Francisco is 803 miles distant by the Southern Pacific Railroad and a few miles farther by the Western Pacific. Regular trains between Salt Lake City and San Francisco are scheduled at 25 to 29 hours, and this time could be cut, if necessary, at least 5 hours.

Portland and Seattle, 865 and 1,050 miles distant, are made in 31 and 38 hours, respectively, over the Oregon Short Line Railroad and northern connections. The completion of shorter lines now under construction will reduce this time about 5 hours.

A base at Fort Douglas would be safe from attack or capture in case of foreign invasion, and small bodies of troops from this point could quickly occupy and hold the very few mountain passes in the Coast Range against any invading force, and give the required time for preparation and gathering of necessary troops and supplies to meet and overcome a foreign foe.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, December 26, 1911.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the amendment was adopted. The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to say to the committee in respect to amendments that gentlemen desiring to submit an amendment must secure the recognition of the Chair for that purpose, and amendments that are simply lodged with the Clerk without a previous recognition are not in a position to be presented to the House. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Water and sewers at military posts: For procuring and introducing water to buildings and premises at such military posts and stations as from their situation require it to be brought from a distance; for the installation and extension of plumbing within buildings where the same is not specifically provided for in other appropriations; for the purchase and repair of fire apparatus, including fire-alarm systems; for the disposal of sewage; for repairs to water and sewer systems and plumbing within buildings; and for extra-duty pay of enlisted men and hire of employees, $1,702,595.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. HAY. Well, Mr. Chairman, I will wait until the gentle-

Mr. SHERLEY, I want to ask the gentleman as to the reasons for the language on page 35, line 23, "for the installation and extension of plumbing within buildings where the same is not specifically provided for in other appropriations"?

Mr. HAY. I will state to the gentleman that that was new language. The Quartermaster General stated:

Gen. ALESHIRE. That has been submitted that we might be prepared for the comptroller. There is no specific provision for the installation and extension of plumbing under this appropriation, although we have done it, and it has been passed.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you just put it in out of abundant caution?
Gen. ALESHIRE. Yes, sir.
The CHAIRMAN. To meet any possible objection on the part of the auditor?
Gen. ALESHIRE.

auditor?

Gen. Aleshire. Yes, sir; also the provision for the including of fire-alarm systems. We have been called upon by the Surgeon General for a fire-alarm system in certain hospitals, and there was no specific provision for it, and the new language is accordingly submitted. Neither of these changes has involved any increase in the appropriation. There is also provision for plumbing within the buildings. We are installing plumbing in every building we construct, but should it become a question of specific authority we would not have that authority.

Mr. SHERLEY. Now, under the paragraph relating to barracks and quarters, is the language "for repairing public buildings at military posts." Would not this provision give you two appropriations for the same work?

Mr. HAY. How does that affect it?
Mr. SHERLEY. It affects it in that it makes it difficult to have a proper check on the department. There ought not to be two appropriations authorizing the same things. Here is an appropriation for barracks and quarters for something over a million dollars, and here is another appropriation of $1,700,000.

Mr. HAY. I will say to the gentleman that the barracks and quarters provision is entirely different from the water and sewer appropriation, and that the authorization under barracks and quarters is not new, but it is new in the water and sewer appro-

Mr. SHERLEY. Have you not power under the barracks and quarters paragraph now to do this entire work of plumbing?

Mr. HAY. The department thinks not. It has done it, and it has been passed by the comptroller without any question.

Mr. SHERLEY. What the gentleman read, if I understood it wright, was that this language was necessary, or, rather, thought desirable, in order to make the authorization proper, under water and sewer appropriations for military posts. Now, am asking him whether he has not already authority under the barracks and quarters provision?

Mr. HAY. Where is the language?

Mr. SHERLEY. On page 30 of the bill, in line 17, where it refers to repair of public buildings at military posts.

Mr. HAY. That does not give the authority to install plumb-ing and fire-alarm systems.

Mr. SHERLEY. The point I am coming to is this: As you appreciate, this bill does not carry authorization for buildings that exceed $20,000 in value, of original construction.

Mr. HAY. I understand that.

Mr. SHERLEY. Here you are undertaking to authorize plumbing and fire-alarm systems.

Mr. HAY. Well, as a matter of fact, ought not that to be an authorization to put plumbing and fire-alarm systems in houses constructed, and in hospitals, where fire-alarm systems are

Mr. SHERLEY. This does not limit you to the buildings you have authority to construct. It gives you the right to do it as to any building.

Mr. HAY. Is it not proper that they should have that authority?

Mr. SHERLEY. I think that ought to be estimated for along with the buildings when their cost is submitted. What you are liable to do here is to give additional leeway to the department for expensive buildings.

Mr. HAY. When I come to think of it, I do not believe this authority would extend beyond any building which would be built under the appropriation carried in barracks and quarters.

This money is to be spent on buildings constructed under this bill, and it certainly could not apply to buildings to be constructed under some other bill. These buildings ought to have plumbing systems. Plumbing ought to be installed in them, and certainly in hospitals there should be fire-alarm systems.

Mr. SHERLEY. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman as to the advisability of doing particular work, but I am so much opposed to tremendous lump-sum appropriations that I do not like to see the scope of them enlarged by the addition of new language.

Mr. HAY. I will call the gentleman's attention to the fact that under this bill there could be no building erected costing over $20,000, and therefore under the language referred to by him no fire-alarm system or any plumbing could be put in any building that costs over $20,000.

Mr. SHERLEY. That is as to a new building being erected, but in point of fact what frequently happens is that under the guise of repair they practically build a building over, and here you have in two items nearly $4,000,000 authorized for the expenditure on harracks and quarters and it is carried in a lump. penditure on barracks and quarters, and it is carried in a lump sum, with no knowledge to the House as to what it shall be expended for. I am not saying but that the committee may have accurate knowledge of it.

Mr. HAY. If the gentleman desires it, I can give him an itemized statement as to how the appropriation is to be spent as well as how the appropriation for barracks and quarters is to be spent.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman knows that would be of no value to me in the consideration of this bill at this time. will not insist on the point of order, though I did want to call attention to these large lump-sum provisions.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended at any of the following-named Army posts: Fort Apache, Boise Barracks, Fort Brady, Fort Clark, Fort George Wright, Fort Jay, Fort Lincoln, Fort Logan H. Roots, Fort Melnesh, Fort Mackenzie, Madison Barracks, Fort Meade, Fort Niagara, Fort Ontario, Fort Wayne, Whipple Barracks, Fort William Henry Harrison, Fort Yellowstone, Fort Ethan Allen, Plattsburg Barracks, Fort Robinson, Fort Missoula, Fort Logan, Fort Douglas, and Fort D. A. Russell.

Mr. HOWELL and Mr. FITZGERALD rose.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call to the attention of the gentleman the question as to whether it would not be necessary to modify his amendment slightly. This paragraph provides for the purchase and repair of fire apparatus; also for extra-duty pay of enlisted men and hire of employees. Now, it carries more than mere new installation.

I understand the desire of the gentleman is not to permit any improvements to be made, but there are certain services paid out of this appropriation that should be continued and provided for.

Mr. HAY. I think the gentleman is correct in that. I will change the amendment in accordance with the gentleman's suggestion.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia desire to withdraw his amendment?

Mr. HAY. I desire to change it in one respect. In the meantime I will yield to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Howell].

The CHAIRMAN. By unanimous consent the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia is temporarily withdrawn in order to give opportunity for changing it and resubmitting it later in amended form. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for permanent improvements at any of the following-named Army posts: Fort Apache, Boise Barracks, Fort Brady, Fort Clark, Fort George Wright, Fort Jay, Fort Lincoln, Fort Logan H. Roots, Fort McIntosh, Fort Mackenzie, Madison Barracks, Fort Meade, Fort Niagara, Fort Ontario, Fort Wayne, Whipple Barracks, Fort William Henry Harrison, Fort Yellowstone, Fort Ethan Allen, Plattsburg Barracks, Fort Robinson, Fort Missoula, Fort Logan, Fort Douglas, and Fort D. A. Russell.

ment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Barracks and quarters, Philippine Islands: Continuing the work of providing for the proper shelter and protection of officers and enlisted men of the Army of the United States lawfully on duty in the Philippine Islands, including repairs and payment of rents, the acquisition of title to building sites, and such additions to existing military reservations as may be necessary, and including also shelter for the animals and supplies, and all other buildings necessary for post administration purposes. $450,000: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended for the construction of quarters for officers of the Army, the total cost of which, including the heating and plumbing apparatus, wiring and fixtures, shall exceed in the case of quarters of a general officer the sum of $8,000; of a colonel or officer above the rank of captain, $6,000; and of an officer of and below the rank of captain, $4,000.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman. I reserve a point of order.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order. I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia about the language on page 36, line 10, relating to the acquisition of title to building sites. What is proposed to be purchased in the way of sites in the Philippine Islands?

Mr. HAY. I do not understand that anything is proposed to be bought. This is the language that has been in this item for some years past. The question was asked whether any sites were expected to be bought, and it was stated that there were

Mr. SHERLEY. What is the $450,000 to be expended for there, if the gentleman can state briefly?

Well, it is to be expended in the Department of Mr. HAY. Luzon and in the various other departments in the Philippine Islands. I will state to the gentleman some of the items that are stated here: Department of Luzon, $63,922.01; department of the Visayas, $18,894.42; department of Mindanao, $57,426.92. Then the various posts are given under which that $140,000 is to be expended. Then there is to be expended at Camp Wilhelm $300, and at Quartel de Espana, $3,180, and various other posts making up the total amount.

Mr. SHERLEY. What is the nature of the expenditure, aside from the locality in which the expenditure is to be made? Mr. HAY. Well, they are buildings for the use of the troops and for the shelter of animals and supplies.

Mr. SHERLEY. Last year's bill carried $600,000 for this purpose. The bill in the year before that carried $375,000. Now you are asking $450,000. That makes a total of over $1,400,000 in three years for this purpose in the Philippines.

Mr. HAY. I would say to the gentleman that the estimate made was $600,000, and it was cut down by the committee to $450,000.

Mr. SHERLEY. I congratulate the committee on that cut. But I am trying to find out what possible expenditure of $1,400,000 could be necessary inside of three years in the Philippine Islands for barracks and quarters.

Mr. HAY. I can not tell what was expended in the last two years

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Virginia will permit me, I think I can answer that question. The first barracks and quarters constructed in the Philippine Islands were of timber, which were thought to be much cheaper, and they were; but they have insects out there that eat up these timber quarters in a very short time. Now, all the military posts in the Philippine Islands are being reconstructed with concrete material.

If you will examine the hearings along at page 353 and following, you will find that they have experimented in the Philippines with what they call the cement gun in their architectural construction. They put a framework of wire and other construction to retain the cement, and then they shoot the liquid cement into that and make the wall in that way. They built one house in San Antonio last year that my friend from Connecticut [Mr. Tilson] probably saw. That was very cheap, compared with other construction, and has given satisfaction.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky

has expired.

Mr. HAY. I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Kentucky be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAY. I will state to the gentleman that the general staff have adopted a policy of declaring certain posts in the Philippine Islands to be permanent. These comprise about 21 posts, and the money in this appropriation is to be spent mainly on those posts. For instance, they are proposing to construct a permanent post at Camp Stotsenburg, which is to be a cavalry post, and is eventually to accommodate two regiments of cavalry. This money is to be spent mainly upon these permanent posts and upon 73 posts and garrisoned towns in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. SHERLEY. What I was trying to arrive at here is this: In three years there has been an expenditure of $1,400,000. Can the gentleman tell how much of that has gone for the acquisition

I can not; but I do not recall that any land has Mr. HAY. been acquired in the last two fiscal years.

Mr. SHERLEY. There is a very large post outside of Manila.

Fort William McKinley.

Mr. SHERLEY. Can the gentleman state how much of that money has gone for an addition to that post?

Mr. HAY. I understand that no money has been expended in the last two fiscal years to buy any land at Fort William McKinley.

Mr. SHERLEY. Was the original project abandoned, which was for the purchase of a large area of land there, or was it carried out?

Mr. HAY. I think it was abandoned. Certainly the land has not been bought up to the present time, and it can not be bought out of this appropriation, because the appropriation is not suf-

Mr. SHERLEY. What is the most expensive building that is proposed to be erected, or can the gentleman state?

Mr. HAY. I can not, because I do not know what every building that is to be erected is to cost; but I can say to the gentleman that the committee have cut down the amount of money which can be expended for the quarters of officers.

Mr. SHERLEY. I was very glad to see that. I myself offered the original proviso, and at that time made it more liberal than I thought was necessary, in order to assure its adoption. I am very glad to see that in that particular the committee has cut the amount.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, some years ago we appropriated $3,000,000, if I recall correctly, for what were designated temporary quarters for the troops in the Philippine Islands. Since that time annually the War Department has been asking in the neighborhood of $500,000 for quarters for troops in the Philippine Islands. And yet all the plans of the department are to concentrate a force at Manila, so as to make a last resistance in case of any trouble over there. It seems to me we are expending for these military purposes in the Philippines very much in excess of any amount that can be justified.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman from New York yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes. Mr. KAHN. Gen. Carter testified before the committee that, with the exception of Fort William McKinley in the Philippines, the barracks and quarters were in an exceedingly bad condition and that it was the purpose of the department to put up permanent buildings in place of the temporary quarters that are now being used. He spoke of the fact that even the windows in the existing buildings were in such a bad shape that in stormy weather the rain blows in and destroys personal property

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is not to the credit of the War Department.

Mr. KAHN. That is very true; but you have a peculiar condition in the Philippines.

Mr. FITZGERALD. We have had that peculiar condition on the Isthmus of Panama.

Mr. KAHN. Oh, no.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let me make my statement, and then the gentleman can make any he desires. We had the peculiar condition on the Isthmus of Panama. There is an estimate before Congress now for permanent quarters on the Isthmus for troops for a great many million dollars, and in an explanatory note it states that they are to take the place of the buildings that will be turned over whenever they are necessary to be disposed of, and yet we are utilizing frame buildings there erected by the French company 20 years ago. If the War Department did as effective work in the Philippine Islands as elsewhere these so-called temporary structures, for which $3,000,000 was appropriated in one bill and more later, they would not be in the dilapidated condition they apparently are, or as it is claimed they are, when an effort is made to obtain additional appropriations. I am inclined to believe that the administration of this fund in the Philippine Islands is marked with the grossest extravagance. This is always the case when conducted far from the observation of the eyes of public officials charged with the responsibility of the collection and disbursement of public money.

I am very glad that the gentleman from Virginia has reduced the appropriation from that of the current year, and I hope that next year he will make a much more substantial reduction. I believe that after he has effected the reforms for the Army which he is advocating he will be able to give these other matters such careful scrutiny as will result in additional reforms. I have no doubt that the results will be very beneficial.

I have had some experience with gentlemen who can draw distressing pictures as to the condition of Government buildings as a foundation for new appropriations. Much of their statement must be discounted by reason of their interest and en-thusiasm in their work. The figures already mentioned dem-onstrate that there has been an amount of money already expended for barracks and quarters in the Philippines that can not be justified.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] has referred to the conditions on the Isthmus of Panama. The Philippines are in an entirely different condition. In the first place, they have an insect there—the white ant—which eats up wood almost as rapidly as you can put it down, and you have no such conditions at Panama. The Army officers have told the Committee on Military Affairs that this ant is a great source of destruction to military barracks and quarters.

It is a condition that no officer is responsible for. Nature is responsible for it, and I am sure the gentleman from New York does not want to see the officers and soldiers of the Army housed in dilapidated buildings. The Army within the last two or three years has discovered a new process, or has been using a new process, for putting up buildings. They are using the process in Honolulu with splendid success. It is a cheap method of putting up buildings. It is done by squirting cement against the sides of a form, and when the work is over you have a perfectly constructed cement building.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let me call the attention of the gentleman from California to the fact that Col. Hogdon writes that contrary to a common impression, concrete construction in the Philippines would not be inexpensive, but on the contrary would be very expensive, and he goes on to point out the rea-sons for that statement. So the gentleman's statement as to the inexpensive process to be adopted is not at all applicable to the Philippine Islands, about which we were talking.

Mr. KAHN. It is inexpensive in the Hawaiian Islands, and if it be more expensive in the Philippines the additional expense will result in better accommodations for our Army and for the officers. I apprehend that it is worth while to spend a little more money on barracks and quarters to be occupied by the officers and soldiers of the United States in the Philippines. I was in the Philippines in 1901, and I stated on the floor of this House, after I returned, that I saw soldiers quartered in barracks there that you would not put a pet dog in.
Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KAHN. Certainly. Mr. SHERLEY. Can the gentleman tell this committee what this $450,000 is to be expended for?

Mr. KAHN. On page 362 of the hearings the Quartermaster General gives a specific list of the places where he proposes to use the money.

Mr. SHERLEY. Was there any examination of the Quartermaster General, or anybody else, as to any of these particular items, and the need for the particular amount, whether these were upon an estimated basis upon plans formed, or whether they were simply estimates in a general way?

Mr. KAHN. I will say frankly that I was not at the committee meeting when the Quartermaster General appeared.

Mr. SHERLEY. I have no desire to seem to be a critic of the committee, but the reason for my inquiry is this: Nearly a million and a half of dollars has been appropriated in three years for buildings in the Philippines, and, so far as I can ascertain in the hurried search that I have been able to make, there is no detailed examination as to any of those expenditures. know that it developed in the fortifications hearings that the engineers missed by $1,000,000 in their estimate in regard to cement work in the Philippine Islands. It seems to me if we are to have these lump-sum appropriations brought in here, we ought to at least have some evidence of a detailed examination of the items in the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KAHN. I see by the hearings, on page 353, volume 1, that the Quartermaster General has set forth a large number of barracks and quarters in the Philippines, and he tells the committee just how many troops he intends to quarter in each one

Mr. SHERLEY. But the point is this: There is a great deal of difference between a statement submitted by a department and an examination of an official as to that statement. One is an ex parte affair and the other is an ascertainment of the detail. If we are simply to have the department send their statement, and let it go at that, we might as well take the estimates in the first instance.

Mr. KAHN. I shall have to refer my friend to the gentleman from Virginia, the chairman of the committee, who has charge of it.

Mr. SHERLEY. I am not saying this with any desire to reflect on anyone. I think the committee as a whole is to be congratulated on a great deal of its work, but it does show the evil of these lump-sum appropriations, about which this House is asked to vote without any knowledge at all.

Mr. KAHN. My colleague from Kansas [Mr. Anthony] says that on page 362 the Quartermaster General has set forth all the repairs that he intends to make, but says nothing about new construction.

Mr. SHERLEY. Those were made a year ago.

Mr. KAHN. No; they are the estimates for this year.

Mr. SHERLEY. I think the gentleman is mistaken, as he will see if he looks.

Mr. KAHN. Estimate for fiscal year 1913, Philippine Islands, mobile Army, $119,448.62. Then he speaks of the amount that he expended in 1911.

Mr. SHERLEY. The detail consists of the statement that $119,448.62 is for the mobile Army service in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. KAHN. True. He speaks of the increasing age of the old frame buildings, and he says that they demand a much larger expenditure for repairs than has been necessary in the past.

Mr. SHERLEY. Oh, yes; and that is highly illuminating as to how much is to be expended at any particular place! It gives us all the possible information on the subject!

The CHAIRMAN. Is the point of order withdrawn?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Finley having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 4362. An act to provide for the construction and equipment of additional light vessels for general service;

S. 4518. An act to provide for completing the reestablishment of the light and fog-signal station marking Thimble Shoal, Chesapeake, Bay, Va.; S. 104. An act for the relief of Carl Krueger S. 547. An act for the relief of Sarah A. Waite;

S. 4238. An act to provide for the use of the American National Red Cross in aid of the land and naval forces in time of actual or threatened war;

S. 4786. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the sale of isolated tracts of public lands in Imperial County, Cal.," approved March 3, 1909; and

S. 3570. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for determining the heirs of deceased Indians for the disposition and sale of allotments of deceased Indians, for the leasing of allotments, and for other purposes," approved June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. L., p. 855).

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14055) to provide for the sale of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following order:

Ordered, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that the Senate has elected Jacob H. Gallinger, a Senator from the State of New Hampshire, President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold and exercise the office in the absence of the Vice President on Wednesday, February 14, 1912.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

Senate concurrent resolution 14.

Resolved by the Schate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of State is hereby authorized to furnish a copy of the daily and bound Congressional Record to the undersecretary of state for external affairs of Canada, in exchange for a copy of the Parliamentary Hansard; and that the Public Printer is hereby directed to honor the requisition of the Secretary of State for such copy.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

H. R. 16675. An act to authorize the city of Chicago to construct a bascule bridge across the Calumet River at Ninety-second Street, in said city; H. R. 16676. An act to authorize the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Co. to construct a bascule bridge across the

Calumet River at South Chicago, Ill.;

H. R. 14484. An act to amend an act approved February 24, 1911, authorizing J. W. Vance and other to construct and maintain a dam and tunnel on the Big Bend of the James River, in Stone County, Mo.; and

H. J. Res. 194. Joint resolution granting the temporary use of certain lands in the Presidio of San Francisco and Fort Mason (Cal.) Military Reservation to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Co.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS). The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Clothing and camp and garrison equipage: For cloth, woolens, materials, and for the manufacture of clothing for the Army, for issue and for sale at cost price according to the Army regulations; for altering and fitting clothing and washing and cleaning when necessary; for equipage, and for expenses of packing and handling and similar necessaries; for a suit of citizen's outer clothing, to cost not exceeding $10, to be issued upon release from confinement to each prisoner who has been confined under a court-martial sentence involving dishonorable discharge; for indemnity to officers and men of the Army for clothing and bedding, etc., destroyed since April 22, 1898, by order of medical officers of the Army for sanitary reasons, $4,913,271.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I. offer the following amendment.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 37, line 11, strike out the word "nine" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight," so that it will read "four million five hundred and thirteen thousand two hundred and seventy-one dollars."

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield to the gentleman from California?

Mr. HAY. Certainly. Mr. KAHN. I offer to amend by way of substitute by making the sum $5,431,700.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Page 37, lines 11 and 12, strike out the words "four million nine hundred and thirteen thousand two hundred and seventy-one" and insert in Heu thereof the words "five million four hundred and thirty-one thousand seven hundred."

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, for many years the Quarter-master General has been endeavoring to create a reserve in the way of clothing. Up to a year ago he was enabled to do that, but last year's appropriation did not permit him to add anything to the reserve accumulation of clothing. He says that it is a very difficult matter in an emergency to manufacture the clothing. So far as shoes and underwear are concerned there is no difficulty in purchasing them at any time, but clothing is a difficult matter to procure in an emergency. He says, furthermore, that the general administrative charges of his department in the matter of clothing aggregates $325,-769.83. His total estimate to the committee was $5,431,700, the amount that I have offered as a substitute for the amount put into the bill by the committee. The clothing for his reserve accumulation was estimated at $130,700, but unless he receives the amount that he estimated for the administrative charges I feel confident that there will be a deficiency in this appropriation.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. KAHN. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. How frequently has the clothing equipment of soldiers been changed in the last 10 years?

Mr. KAHN. Well, the matter of clothing has been changed,

Mr. KAHN. Well, the matter of clothing has been changed, I think, two or three times within the last few years.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Every time there is a change a lot of surplus supplies are sold cheaply, are they not?

Mr. KAHN. Oh, no; the change that has been recently made is in the way of economy. If the gentleman will recall, the change that was made in 1910 or thereabout provided for smaller pockets on the blouses of the soldiers in place of the large pockets and stand-up collars in place of turned-down collars, and a number of changes of that kind, all of which added to the saving on the cost of the blouse.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is not what I have in mind.

Mr. KAHN. The gentleman perhaps has in mind the matter of uniforms, which is another matter altogether. This is clothing, as I understand it, for the enlisted men, and the changes I have indicated to the gentleman have resulted in a material saving to the Government.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Out of this appropriation is bought uniforms for the enlisted men?

Mr. KAHN. That is what I understand. Now, the present uniform provides, I believe, for a stand-up collar instead of a turned-down collar, and the Government saves—
Mr. FITZGERALD. In the change of uniforms, what has been the practice of disposing of accumulations?

Mr. KAHN. I understand that in making these changes it is done very gradually so that the department itself has not made any material loss on any of this property.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let me just call the gentleman's attention to this. My attention has been called to the fact that there is a place very close to my district where it is possible to buy all sorts of quartermasters' supplies in the way of harness, clothing, and equipment at very insignificant prices at sales made from time to time following changes in the character of the uniform, and instead of being done gradually, from the information that has been given to me, it must have been a wasteful method.

Mr. KAHN. Well, I have taken up the matter with the Quartermaster General personally a number of times with respect to some one article of clothing allowance and he has invariably told me that it is always the effort of the department to utilize the old material before the new material is issued and that, as a general proposition, there is no material loss to the Government by these changes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the statement is hardly accurate, because I know a man who makes the practice of buying his harness in such places—

Mr. KAHN. Well, that is not clothing.

Mr. FITZGERALD. No; he happens to buy harness and such supplies the same way, and one year there will be tan harness and then they substitute black harness and then change to some other harnes

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And this discredited harness can be purchased in that way very cheaply and—

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that I may be given five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks that he may be allowed to proceed for five minutes. Is there objec-[After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman—
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from California yield to the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. KAHN. Certainly.

Mr. SHERLEY. I have here a statement showing changes in specifications for clothing and equipment made since 1898 from page 381 of the hearings before the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department. This is a table furnished by Gen. Aleshire, and shows that the cost to the Government of the property amounted to $1,263,521.44.

The receipts from the sales amounted to $404,278.24, showing an apparent loss to the Government of $859,243.20.

Was that on clothing? Mr. KAHN.

Mr. SHERLEY. That was on clothing, caps, shirts, trousers, and so forth.

Mr. KAHN. I want to say that the present Quartermaster General, in my judgment, is one of the ablest men who has ever occupied that position. He is a man who is exceedingly careful in his estimates. I think every member of the committee will verify that statement.

Mr. SHERLEY. That is the reason I was quoting him as showing this great loss. He has nothing to do with these changes. He simply obeys orders. Does the gentleman think in view of that fact that this committee is authorized to vote money for reserve in clothing? This bill carries no reserve for ammunition for mobile Artillery; is it not carrying the matter to an extreme to say you want a reserve of clothing, when men can fight in any sort of clothing?

Mr. KAHN. Nevertheless, the soldier should be proud of his uniform, and he should have an adequate one when he goes marching under the Stars and Stripes. [Applause.]

Mr. SHERLEY. I agree to that; and the gentleman's statement is very pretty. But the proposition is not to supply the soldier with a uniform. It is to lay up a reserve that is not needed, and which has been changed so often that since 1898 you have lost $800,000 in money by it. I say to you that it is better that the soldier have ammunition than to have a uniform when he is sent into battle. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN.

Mr. MANN. It is necessary to have both.
Mr. KAHN. Exactly so. It is necessary to have both. When the matter of ammunition comes up on this floor, I shall offer an amendment to this bill. I agree with the gentleman absolutely. We can only manufacture 300 rounds of Field Artillery ammunition a day, with our factories going full blast, and we ought to accumulate a reserve of ammunition in order that we may be prepared at any moment.

The country has never been so well prepared, so far as reserve supplies are concerned, as at the present time. We have more small arms in reserve than we have ever had before. I think we have a greater quantity of clothing in reserve than we have ever had before, and more ammunition than we have ever had before. But, for all that, I do not think it advisable at this time to begin to cut off the appropriations. I believe in the still further accumulation of necessary reserve clothing, ammunition, and rifles.

The loss of which the gentleman speaks may have been made, and undoubtedly was made, because the Quartermaster General would not testify it was made if it had not been so. I do not know just what percentage that may be of the total amount expended for clothing. It may be a very small percentage of the great amount expended for that purpose. If I recall the statement of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley], the report says that the loss accumulated since 1898. In 1898 occurred the War with Spain. The clothing was all in use, and in equipping the Volunteer regiments they obtained the best they could get in many instances. They were anxious to send the men into the field properly equipped and properly clothed. I dare say that a considerable loss occurred immediately after the war. As my colleague on the committee from Massachusetts [Mr. Ames] suggests, they changed from heavy uniforms to light uniforms when they went into the Tropics, and that no doubt led to a considerable loss to the Government.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I believe in a proper reserve for those things that are essential for the Army when there shall be a demand for it in war and a consequent expansion of it. No man who has ever dealt with appropriations but knows there are relative importances as to reserves of matériel for the Army and the Navy and that we never have and never will give all the things that the departments think will be necessary.

I maintain that the very least important of all the reserves necessary for an army is the reserve of clothing. It is desirable that the reserve be had in some instances, but it would not necessarily cripple the service to any appreciable extent, and yet many other things can not be given because of the necessary limitation, not the limitation placed by this side of the House, but the limitation that would be placed by either side in appropriating for the Army. The amount that can be appropriated makes it necessary to eliminate certain items, and of these clothing is the least important and can be best eliminated.

Now, when, in addition to that fact, we find that by constant changes of the style of uniform there is a great waste in the clothing cost we may well afford to go slow in providing this One of the distinguished Army officers, who has been so highly and properly commended by the gentleman from California, Gen. Aleshire, speaking on this subject, was asked in regard to it and what change can be had to prevent the abuse.

The chairman asked him:

Do you know how that could be remedied? Gen. ALESHIRE. I think it could be remedied to a certain extent if they would adopt a uniform and keep it and not make such material

Now, until they show a disposition to do that, I think Congress can afford to be a little slow in piling up a reserve of clothing, particularly when it is slow, and necessarily slow, in providing a reserve as to other items that would require much time and difficulty to obtain. An Army will never be withheld from being put into the field because of a lack of clothing in a country like this, where the supply of clothing can be had in almost no time, but it will frequently be prevented from being put into the field by an absence either of guns or of ammunition. So I say to the gentleman, realizing, as he realizes, the limitation that must be placed upon these supply bills, that we can well afford to eliminate this increase in this bill.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SHERLEY. Yes. Mr. KAHN. I tried to point out that the Quartermaster General said that unless we had the item for administrative expenses there would undoubtedly be a deficit upon this item. The matter of clothing reserve takes only about $131,700 out of the appropriation, as estimated for by the Quartermaster General, but there is an item, I think, of $325,769.83 for general administrative charges that he says he can not get along without.

Mr. SHERLEY. As to that I have no doubt the chairman of the committee can more properly answer. But the gentleman's speech in large measure was an appeal to this House to provide a reserve of clothing.

Mr. KAHN. Oh, I spoke of that and tried to point out to the committee and to the House that that work had been going on for a number of years, and that I thought it would be advisable to continue it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, we ought to provide what is really necessary for the Army. We ought not for political purposes to go to the country on the theory that in reducing expectations of the country of the two weakness will later on penses we should cut down that which we know will later on come up in the shape of a deficiency.

Now, take the item under discussion. The amount appropriated is $4,974,000. The amount asked for is $5,431,000, in round figures. Gen. Aleshire says that it is absolutely necessary to have for general administrative charges $325,769.83. The discussion seems to be turning upon the reserve proposi-tion, which is $131,700. We insist that the general administrative charges are absolutely necessary, and they have cut that amount $325,000, which, the officer in charge says, is needed. How do you make this estimate? Gen. Aleshire, in response to a question to that effect, said:

This estimate, as I explained, for current requirements is based upon the money value of the clothing allowances prescribed for the enlisted man, and on that basis, together with the quantity of equipage required for issue according to past years, there would be required of the entire amount estimated $5.300.000.

Permit me to explain that in that amount is included $325,769.83 to meet general administrative charges, salaries, and wages of permanent amplayers.

Now, what is the purpose of the appropriation as presented here? It is to cut it $325,000. That, the general says, is necessary to meet general administrative charges, salaries, and wages Employees where? In the Quarterof permanent employees. master's Department. What is to be done with that? Make a supply department of it. Will that lessen it? As to the officers proposed, what is to follow? The enlistment of 5,000 service men. Five thousand men must have officers somewhere. Are they to be turned loose without drill? Five thousand men means colonels, perhaps, and lieutenant colonels, and all the full complement of officers. Have they told you anything about that? Yet these men are to take the places of the employees required by law, and it fixes, as the general says, administrative charges for wages and permanent employees.

Mr. SHERLEY. Do these officers all come from Kentucky? notice the gentleman speaks of them as "5,000 colonels."

Mr. PRINCE. A great many of them will no doubt come from there. I know a good many of them came from there over into Illinois, and a good many of them still remain in Kentucky. [Laughter.]

Now, the contention here seems to be over the supply of reserve stock. That amounts to $131,000. That would leave $5,300,000 as absolutely necessary to conduct the business of the Government, assuming that the $131,000 reserve is not needed. But what does the officer say about that on page 365 of the hearings on this appropriation bill: hearings on this appropriation bill:

hearings on this appropriation bill:

Gen. Aleshire. Yes, and it is the idea of the department that supplies of clothing and equipage that are special, by reason of color or manufacture, should be accumulated. Anything like underclothing, that is not special, could be bought on short notice. The necessity for accumulation does not exist in the case of such things. We do not have to accumulate a large stock of shoes. We have a large stock of lasts on hand and now we have many competitors for our shoes. Formerly there were only a few competitors, but now we have a good many, so we can have them made quickly.

Mr. Slayden. Are you still wasting good material by abandoning styles and colors and things of that kind, and thus taking out of use material that is valuable in itself?

Gen. Aleshire. We have not had any changes recently.

It is based upon the uniform of the style and color of clothing.

It is based upon the uniform of the style and color of clothing that the soldier needs to-day. It is based upon the present uniform, for no changes have been made recently, and he says this amount is necessary. I hope the committee will not cut this amount below, perhaps, the $131,000 that might be cut off. The answer that will be given to us, perhaps, is that we have reduced the Cavalry by five regiments. That is an afterthought. It never was considered by the committee, never appeared in the appropriation bill, and it seems to me that it does not affect the permanent employees of the department. Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to the fact that last year the sum carried by this item was $4,901,271. This year there is estimated $530,000 more than was carried in the bill last year. Last year the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Prince] thought that $4,901,000 was ample for this purpose. Before I offered the amendment to strike out the $100,000, we carried in the bill $4,913,271, which was more than was appropriated last year.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. MANN. Whether in this item or any other items which might be affected the gentleman has taken into consideration the creation of the supply corps?

Mr. HAY. I have.
Mr. MANN. Which might add 6,000 enlisted men.
Mr. HAY. I did not cut this particular item on that account. The gentleman will see that the committee, in making up the bill, gave more than was appropriated last year.

Mr. MANN. Yes; I see that. What I wanted to ask about was, what would be the effect, suppose the supply corps is created?

I do not think it will affect this item. Mr. HAY.

Mr. MANN. It would necessarily take a considerable amount of money to provide what is provided for in this paragraph for the new enlisted men.

Mr. HAY. The gentleman does not mean the supply corps.

He means the service corps.

Mr. MANN. You call it the supply corps in the bill, and I call it the supply corps. I mean the enlisted men in the supply corps. You refer to it in the debate as the service corps, but in the bill you call it the supply corps, and I use the language in the bill.

Mr. HAY. I will say to the gentleman that there will not be more than 1,000 men taken into this service corps in the next fiscal year. Therefore I do not think that would affect this appropriation to any material extent.

I want to call attention to the fact that the Quartermaster General stated, in answer to a question which I asked him, as

The CHAIRMAN. What I want to get at is this: If we did not give you all you ask for in this item, whether you would have reserve enough to supply the Army?

Gen. ALESHIRE. We could have plenty to meet the current issues, Mr. Chairman. But the stock in the depots would go down; that is, it would be reduced.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that.

Gen. ALESHIRE. Answering your question, we could make the current issues.

rent issues.

Mr. Slaxden, But, as a general policy of defense, the idea is to accumulate stocks of reserves in those stores, is it?

In other words, they have money enough to supply all the needs of the Army under the amount that is given in the bill.

I therefore hope the amendment to the amendment will be rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The vote will first be taken on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY]

The question was taken; and on a division (demarded by Mr. KAHN) there were 33 ayes and 19 noes.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. KAHN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Shooting galleries and ranges: For shelter, shooting galleries, ranges for small-arms target practice, repairs, and expenses incident thereto, including the extra-duty pay of enlisted men and hire of employees, such ranges and galleries to be open, as far as practicable, to the National Guard and organized rifle clubs under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War: Provided, That of this amount the sum of $3,450, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is made immediately available for the purchase of additional land adjoining the military reservation of Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., for use in connection with the rifle range, $93,336.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order. Mr. HAY. I will state that this sum of $3,450 is in the nature of a reappropriation. Two years ago in the Army appropriation bill there was appropriated for the purpose of buying a target range at this point $18,000. All of that money has been expended except this $3,450, and this would have been expended had it not been that there was some question about perfecting the title to the land. The Government has agreed to buy this land, but did not pay all of the money over within the fiscal year, because they had not perfected the title to the land, and for that reason this $3,450 still remains of the appropriation. But contracts have been made by the Government, and the committee thinks that the money ought to be paid.

be abandoned.

Mr. HAY. That is true; but they have already expended something over $14,000 for the purchase of this target range, and the small tracts of land the purchase of which is to be perfected by this amount of money is included in land already owned by the Government for a target range. I think it would be wise to complete the contract. If you do not, you will practically throw away all the money that has been spent.

Mr. FITZGERALD. What I had in mind was that this was one of the forts to be abandoned.

Mr. HAY. Yes; and if the land had not already been purchased and the money expended in large part, I would not be in favor of it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Contingencies, Engineer Department, Philippine Islands: For contingent expenses incident to the operations of the Engineer Department in the Philippine Islands, to be expended at the discretion of the Secretary of War, $5,000.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

Mr. Chairman, the Secretary of State has just started on a visit to Central America and Mexico. It is distinctly a peace He is followed by the prayers of all peace-loving people. Only those who covet something some one else has and hope to get it through strife and pillage are following him with the "evil eye" and endeavoring to thwart his beneficent

This journey of the Secretary of State, Mr. Chairman, and his effort to promote and maintain peace between nations is in striking contrast to what is being done by others, some of whom are officials in one of the great departments of the Government.

For the last 30 days my attention has been drawn to a series of newspaper publications of the most sensational and alarming or newspaper publications of the most sensational and anathing nature. They have mostly been about affairs in Cuba and conditions in Mexico. They have usually appeared under a Washington date line, a fact that is confusing to people away from this Capital, who look upon nearly everything emanating from this city as official. That is what makes a Washington lie more important and hurtful than one from any other city in the country

Many of these stories in the newspapers claim to report the language of this or that official in the War or Navy Department, or—and this is less excusable—what this or that general or admiral has to say about the menace from Japan, the intrigues of Germany, the volcano in Cuba, or the revolution in Mexico. They tell about preparations for the dispatch of an army of occupation to Cuba or an army of intervention to Mexico.

I have lately seen newspaper dispatches in which it was stated under startling, nerve-racking headlines that preparations had been made to assemble an army of 100,000 men in Texas; that plans had been made at the War College and by the General Staff for invading Mexico, and had been approved by the authorities; and that a movement to or toward the border was imminent.

That may all be true, but I do not believe that it is.

What I protest against is this inexcusable effort to disturb the peace, this blatant yellow journalism, with official or semiofficial It looks like an effort is being made to say or do things that will involve the country in war, that will bring about a situation in which Congress will be forced into war.

In the Washington Post of this date an officer of the Cavalry criticizes the proceedings of this body in a statement that is ill timed, if not in bad taste. He says:

In Mexico the lives of many Americans are in deadly peril, and property to the value of hundreds of millions is threatened.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not believe it, and the author of that statement can not know it. I have friends and relatives in Mexico, with whom I am in regular communication. Of course they are disturbed by the revolution in Mexico, but more because it hurts business than because they see any personal peril in the situation.

Soldiering is a profession, like law or medicine, with this difference, that the lawyer undertakes by peaceful methods to allay strife and the doctor to heal physical hurts. Soldiering is a vocation that finds its best opportunities, its quickest promotion, and greatest rewards in war, and, very naturally, men of that trade, even though they assume the personal risk, look upon war with less horror than do the rest of us.

When they associate themselves with sensation mongering, the situation is dangerous.

I have referred to Americans in Mexico. It happens that yesterday I received a letter from an American residing there, a lady who has lived there for 25 years and who is at the head of a great school. She is not alarmed; she appears to be incapable of personal fear, and she does not get excited. In that letter she said:

That letter confirms what she wrote me a year ago under similar conditions, when she said that in her judgment the only danger to Americans was in the talk of intervention-that she deplored.

Sensational reports that appear to come from the State, War, and Navy Building are hurtful and ought to be stopped. Another source of danger under existing conditions is in the greed of American owners of mining and other properties in Mexico and Cuba. There is much truth in the Mexican contention that certain great interests there do try to foment trouble, secretly, of course, between those countries and ours. They think, and with truth, I believe, that if they were colonies of the United States their properties would have more value. But that is no good reason for the wicked war propaganda against which I am protesting.

Mr. Chairman, I commend what the President of the United States has said in relation to this scandal mongering and what the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs has said in relation to it. It is altogether wicked, and ought to be stopped. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Ordnance service: For the current expenses of the Ordnance Department, in connection with purchasing, receiving, storing, and issuing ordnance and ordnance stores, comprising police and office duties, rents, tolls, fuel, light, water, and advertising, stationery, typewriters and adding machines, including their exchange, and office furniture, tools, and instruments of service; for incidental expenses of the ordnance service and those attending practical trials and tests of ordnance, small arms, and other ordnance stores; and for publications for libraries of the Ordnance Department, including the Ordnance Office, and payment for mechanical labor in the office of the Chief of Ordnance, $300,000.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, on page 45, line 10, the words "three hundred thousand dollars" and insert the words "three hundred and thirty-seven thousand dollars."

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, I do that for this reason: I want to restore the amount that was appropriated in last year's appropriation bill for the Ordnance Department.

In volume 2, page 634, of the hearings you will find this:

The CHAIRMAN. You do not expect to have any deficiency, however? Gen. CROZIER. We never have any deficiencies, Mr. Chairman, in the Ordnance Department.

Mr. SLATDEN. You hew to the line?

Gen. CROZIER. Yes, sir; we hew to the line. In the beginning of the year I go very carefully over this appropriation, for instance, and allot to everybody under a carefully considered schedule what is necessary to run him through the year, and I always reserve a certain amount for contingencies, and then I agree that the reserve will only be drawn on at a certain rate; that is, every two months I will allow it to be reduced so much, and if anything is called for which will reduce it below the amount which I have made up my mind I will allow it to be reduced to at that time, I will disallow the estimate unless it is absolutely imperative, as resulting from a disaster or something of that kind. In that way I have been able to run the appropriation through without any deficit.

Now, if this cut is made it will be made at the expense of the general efficiency of the Army. It does seem to me that with as careful an officer as Gen. Crozier, who hews to the line, who never does have a deficiency, that when he comes in and asks this committee for the amount he thinks necessary for the general good of the service we ought to encourage by legislation that kind of an officer's estimate, and not adopt the policy, without knowing the facts, of making a downward cut. effect of that kind of legislation on our part will be to encourage officers to pad their estimates, knowing that we are going to cut the appropriation.

I am inclined to believe that it is far better policy for Congress, when we have an officer that hews to the line and toes the line, who comes up and explains thoroughly and carefully just what he needs and what he ought to have, to give that officer and his department what he asks for when he states that a failure to get it will work against the general efficiency.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman anticipated me in offering this amendment, as I had desired to offer an amendment cutting down the appropriation on a statement which I have from the Chief of Ordnance. I therefore move to amend the amendment by striking out the word "three" in line 10 and inserting the word "two," and inserting after the word "hundred" the words "and fifty"; so that it will read I think that is a very moderate cut, in view of "$250,000." his statement.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. Certainly.
Mr. MANN. How can they figure out a cut of $50,000 in an item of $300,000 by the abolition of five regiments?

Mr. HAY. I do not know. I only know, of course, that these ordnance stores and supplies go largely to the Cavalry and the Field Artillery. Gen. Crozier says:

JAMES HAY,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. Dear Mr. Hay: Answering your telephonic inquiry of Saturday, I can now say that if the Cavalry regiments of the Army should be reduced by five, and the personnel of the remaining regiments should not be increased, the maintenance of the Cavalry in ordnance equipment would be reduced by the following amounts under the several headings of appropriations:

Small-arms target practice..... Ordnance stores and supplies... Manufacture of arms - $71,500 - 80,750 - 9,850

_ 162, 100 Total Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM CROZIER,
Brigadier General, Chief of Ordnance, United States Army.

Mr. MANN. But this is not for ordnance stores and supplies. Mr. HAY. Yes; it is. Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon. This is for maintenance of the service in the Ordnance Department.

Mr. HAY. I beg the gentleman's pardon. My amendment ought to come on page 56. I am wrong, and, Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the amendment which I offered and will offer it later on.

However, I do not think that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Prince] should be agreed to. Two or three years ago this appropriation was $300,000, and it has gradually been increased every year until now they estimate this year $337,000. I think $300,000 is ample.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

Ordnance stores—Ammunition: Manufacture and purchase of ammunition and materials therefor for small arms for reserve supply; ammunition for burials at the National Soldiers' Home in Washington, D. C.; ammunition for firing the morning and evening gun at military posts prescribed by General Orders, No. 70, Headquarters of the Army, dated July 23, 1867, and at National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and its several branches, including National Soldiers' Home in Washington, D. C., and soldiers' and saliors' State homes, $250,000.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Change the period to a colon after the word "dollars," in line 23, page 45, and add:
"Provided, That not to exceed 10 per cent thereof shall be expended in the purchase of ammunition."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve the point of

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, this amendment and the ones I shall offer on subsequent paragraphs of this bill provide that the Government shall manufacture its military powder. One object of this amendment is to bring the legislative branch of the Government in harmony with the executive A couple of years ago the Attorney General of the branch. United States commenced an action to dissolve the Powder Trust. Since the last appropriation bill was passed appropriating money for the purchase of powder and ammunition, the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Delaware has decreed that the Powder Trust is a combination in restraint of trade and has its dissolution.

We make appropriations for the purchase of ammunition and powder in three separate bills, namely, the Army appropriation bill, the naval appropriation bill, and the fortification appropriation bill. The last Army appropriation bill, under this and other paragraphs, authorizing the purchase of ammunition, carried $2,300,000. The naval appropriation bill carried $1,150,000 for smokeless powder alone, in addition to a large appropriation for projectiles, torpedoes, and other ammunition. The fortification appropriation bill carried for ammunition $865,000, making a total of $4,315,000. In addition, a large amount was appropriated for projectiles, torpedoes, and mines, where powder is a large ingredient in their manufacture.

The price which the Government has been compelled to pay for powder has varied from $1.50 per pound to 60 cents per pound; 60 cents per pound being the price at which the last contract was made.

Will the gentleman permit an interruption? Mr. AMES.

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. AMES. Does not the Government manufacture almost one-half of its powder?

Mr. GOOD. It manufactures about one-fourth, so Gen. Crozier testified at the hearings.

Mr. AMES. I thought he said almost one-half in the hearings before our committee.

Mr. GOOD. If the gentleman will look at the hearings before the subcommittee on fortifications he will find he said we purchase about three times as much as we manufacture.

The testimony adduced before the several appropriating committees shows that the Government is manufacturing powder at a cost of about 43 cents per pound, not including overhead charges, most of which charges would be necessary for the Government to bear, whether the officers were engaged in the manufacture of powder or were detailed on some other work. If the Ordnance Department was authorized to increase its manufacture of powder, it could, no doubt, effect economies which would work a great reduction in the cost of powder.

It is not alone the question of unreasonable profits which the powder company has made under its contract with the Government that is objectionable, but also the dual position taken by the executive and legislative branches of the Government on the trust question as it relates to the Powder Trust that is obnoxious. The executive branch is reaching out to crush this monopoly, while the legislative branch is furnishing it with The executive branch is reaching out to crush this lucrative contracts with which to defeat the ends of justice as administered by the Executive. The Executive would have the courts dissolve the Powder Trust. We would pay this unlawful combination unreasonable profits on their product to guarantee their continuance. This, too, notwithstanding the fact that the record of the Powder Trust shows that it is one of the greatest violators of the law upon which the light of publicity has ever

I have been looking into the history of this most remarkable legislation and I have read speeches made on both sides of the House for a quarter of a century, all to one end, namely, that by encouraging private manufacturers in the manufacture of powder in time of peace, when war should come we would then have mills from which we could purchase powder. What are the facts? The facts are that from 1872, at least until 1908, one of the most unconscionable trusts ever known in the history of this Government is the one that is manufacturing powder. By one plan and another, by the organization of one holding company or another, the Du Pont Powder Co. of New Jersey, organized in 1903 with an organized capital stock of $50,000,000, presents a most remarkable situation. Fifty million dollars of rapitalization! Three men organized this trust, and they put into the treasury of that company the small sum of $1,500. That is all the cash that was ever paid into the Du Pont |

Powder Co. of New Jersey, yet in the short space of six and a half years that corporation declared dividends to the extent of $11,000,000 and set aside a surplus of between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000, and now we are asked—the fact of the fact that this company has obtained control of all the powder companies of the United States, either by purchase or contractto add to these dividends-

Mr. HAY. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention to the fact that the amendment which the gentleman has just offered applies to ammunition and does not apply to powder?

Mr. GOOD. I have tried to follow the language of the bill, and the only way we can make a limitation to the paragraph is to apply it to the language of the bill. If you would make your appropriations only for powder and limit expenditure to powder, and then provide that in no other paragraph should the money be used for the purchase of powder, it could be reached directly; but the only way here now to reach it under the language of this bill and be at all sure that the money will not be expended for powder is to place the limitation in the language of the paragraph.

Mr. HAY. I will call the gentleman's attention to the fact that this ammunition is not bought from the Du Pont Co., it is bought from the small-arms manufacturers of the country. The Du Pont people have nothing to do with the manufacture of small-arms ammunition, as far as I know.

Mr. GOOD. I have before me a statement made by Mr. Buckner, vice president of the Du Pont works, and I was somewhat amazed to read that statement. Mr. Buckner goes on to tell the Committee on Naval Affairs how, when the Spanish-American War broke out, President McKinley sent for him and told him that they had to have at least 25,000 pounds of powder a dav.

Mr. AMES. What I want-

Mr. GOOD. I think I can answer your question in just a few words. Mr. Buckner finally agreed they would turn one of their commercial mills into one for the manufacture of powder, and they did so. The war came to a sudden close, and then the Powder Trust was asked by the War Department what it would require to cancel that contract. But the Powder Trust said, "We want nothing. We have furnished the powder for a hundred years because of our patriotism; we have not made any material amount of money. But you have also a contract with this Dittmar Chemical Co., one of these small manufacturers," and you know that company held the Government up to the tune of $35,000 to cancel that contract.

Mr. AMES. That company did not make ammunition. [The time of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good] having expired, he was granted an extension of 15 minutes.]

Mr. HAY. What I want to direct the gentleman's attention to is the fact that this item that he is proposing to amend provides for the purchase of ammunition and the materials that go into the manufacture of it. Now, what I would like him to do would be to state whether or not his amendment will cure what he wants to get at. I am in sympathy with the gentleman.

Mr. GOOD. Let me ask the chairman of the committee to point out a single paragraph in this bill that authorizes the purchase of powder alone.

Mr. HAY. If the gentleman will change his amendment so as to provide that not more than 10 per cent of powder can be purchased under this appropriation, I think that would accomplish what he desires.

Mr. GOOD. I hardly think so. To conclude what I was saying in regard to the Dittmar While Mr. Buckner was complaining that his company was patriotic and canceled the contract, the Dittmar Co. had collected $35,000 in damages. But he failed to tell the committee at the time that the Dittmar Co. was owned by the Hazard Powder Co., and the Laffin & Rand Powder Co., that the stock in these companies was owned by the Eastern Dynamite Co., and all the stock of the Eastern Dynamite Co. was owned by the Du Pont Powder Co. The man that was before them was vice president of that organization. Mr. AMES. Will the gentleman

Will the gentleman yield?

Yes.

Mr. GOOD. Mr AMES. Where do you reach the ammunition manufacturer?

Mr. GOOD.

They are all tied up together.
Oh, no. The gentleman is entirely mistaken. Mr. AMES. Mr. GOOD. Mr. GOOD. The gentleman represents one or two little ammunition companies up there in his section, which make a few buckshot and things of that kind.

Mr. AMES.

That may be. But these big concerns that have had the Gov-Mr. GOOD. ernment contracts are the concerns that are a part of the Du Pont Powder Co. As Mr. Buckner testified, their concern was the only concern which furnished the Government powder for a hundred years.

Mr. AMES. I know that the gentleman does not include the Winchester Co., the Metallic Cartridge Co., the United States

Cartridge Co., and the Peters Co. Mr. GOOD. When Gen. Crozier was before the Committee on Fortifications a couple of weeks ago, he testified it was costing the Government from 35 to 54 per cent more to buy guns and fieldpieces than it was to manufacture them, and what is true in the purchase and manufacture of guns and fieldpieces of material but the Government? No one at all.

Mr. AMES. On the contrary-

Mr. GOOD. As long as that condition prevails, I am unwilling to vote for an appropriation that gives to a powder manufacturer from 35 to 54 per cent profit.

is true in the purchase of ammunition Who is using this kind

Mr. AMES. On the contrary, the gentleman does not want to get misstatements into the RECORD. The amount of ammunition furnished by these small companies amounts to about a million rounds apiece in the last two or three years.

Mr. GOOD. I will yield for a question.

Mr. AMES. It is so small in proportion to their business that they hardly want to take the contract.

Mr. GOOD. I want to give a little of the history of the organization of the Powder Trust. In the Government's case to dissolve the Powder Trust it was shown that practically all of the manufacturers of powder in the United States in 1872 became members of what was known as the Gunpowder Trade Association of the United States.

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask—Mr. GOOD. I can not yield.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. AMES. I would like to ask the gentleman just one ques-

Mr. GOOD. I will yield for a question.

Mr. AMES. Would the gentleman be willing to sacrifice these ammunition manufacturers in order to hit the trust, as he calls it-the Powder Trust-although they are in no way connected with it?

Mr. GOOD. I am willing that the Government should embark on the manufacture of its own ammunition. I think it ought to do it, and I think no one but the Powder Trust will be injured in the long run.

The object of this association was stated in the preamble in this way:

For the purpose of securing an equitable adjustment of prices and terms for sales of powder throughout the United States.

And one of the articles provides:

That the minimum price for powder of the various sorts required for the trade shall be established and regulated by this association.

Four years later the California Powder Works became a party te this unlawful combination, and an amendment was then made to the association agreement which went further than the original agreement, for it not only regulated the price at which powder should be sold, and provided penalties for violation of the agreement, but it also prescribed and limited the territory in which certain powder manufacturers could sell their powder. The effect which this unlawful combination had on the price of powder can not be better described than by quoting the testimony of Mr. Waddell, an agent for the Hazard Powder Co. at the time. Mr. Waddell testified that-

Immediately on information of the new association or pool, I received a telegram from the Hazard Powder Co. to advance the price of rifle powder—as near as I can now recollect the figures—to $5 a keg throughout my territory, halves and quarters in proportion, and to advance the price of blasting powder, as I recollect, first to $1.50 a keg, in a few weeks to $1.75, and a little later to $2.10 and $2.15.

THE SECOND ASSOCIATION AGREEMENT.

The second association agreement was entered into on August 23, 1886, at which time all powder manufacturers in the United States were members of the Gunpowder Trade Association of the United States, excepting only the "Widow Rand Mill," and a few small mills in the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania. The object of this agreement is stated in the preamble of the agreement:

To regulate "in a convenient and desirable manner the business of the parties hereto in such of their sales of powder as are treated in this agreement, including the regulation of the prices at which said powder shall be sold; for the purpose of avoiding unnecessary loss in the sale and disposition of such powder by ill-regulated or unauthorized competition and underbidding by the agents of the parties hereto."

The agreement also provided what proportion of the whole aggregate trade of all the parties to the agreement should be allotted to each of the parties thereto, and also further provided for a supplemental agreement with the California Pow der Co. relative to prices to be maintained for the sales of powder, and the general harmonious arrangement of the powder THIRD ASSOCIATION AGREEMENT.

The third agreement between the powder manufacturers became effective on July 1, 1890-just one day before the Sherman antitrust law was approved-and is known as the "fundamental Under this agreement a board of trade was created in the Gunpowder Trade Association of the United States, with power to "fix prices and to vary or change the same at any time and for any place, to meet contingencies, and for the protection of the common interests." Just what was intended to be conveyed by the expression "for the protection of the common interests," which appeared for the first time in the preamble of the "fundamental agreement" of the Gunpowder Trade Association of the United States, I leave it to the friends of this unlawful combination to explain.

Another vicious agreement of the "fundamental agreement" is as follows:

That any party hereto who shall suffer excessive loss by an overt act of the board of trade—as, for instance, the reduction of a price at a place in treatment of a local disturbance of trade—shall receive compensation for the damage it shall sustain by payment of money as may be agreed upon at a general meeting of the board of trade.

It is seen, therefore, that the board of trade not only had the power to fix prices at which members of this unlawful combination should sell powder, but it also had the power to direct that a member of the association should carry on a competitive war against a manufacturer not a member of the association, and that the board of trade would compensate such member for any loss sustained in such a warfare. All of the power and all of the money of the trust was to be used to crush out the independent companies. In the light of these facts is it not strange that fat Government contracts are annually demanded by this Many other provisions contained in this agreement might be quoted to show their illegal and unconscionable character. It is sufficient, however, for us to know that when the "fundamental agreement" was entered into practically every powder manufacturer in the United States had either voluntarily joined or by unfair and unlawful competition became a party to an unlawful agreement which regulated the output of powder, prescribed the territory in which certain manufacturers could transact business, and absolutely fixed the price at which powder could be sold; and this condition existed during all these years, the Sherman antitrust law to the contrary notwithstanding.

EUROPEAN AGREEMENT.

But the American powder baron was not satisfied with the limited territory over which he held complete sway. He not only wanted to limit the output and fix the price of all powder in the United States, and prescribe the territory within which certain manufacturers could transact business in the United States, but he desired to prevent competition from without. The protective tariff was not high enough to suit his purpose, and so in October, 1907, the Gunpowder Trade Association of the United States entered into an agreement with the European powder manufacturers.

This agreement was known as the "European agreement." By its terms the civilized world was divided into districts. The United States, with her present and future possessions, Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Colombia, and Venezuela were decreed as the exclusive territory of the American factories, and were designated as "American territory." A few South American countries were designated as "syndicated territory," and the rest of the world was to the exclusive territory of the European factories, with the exception of Canada and the Spanish possessions of the Caribbean Sea. The agreement further provided that the American factories "shall abstain from manufacturing, selling, or quoting, directly or indirectly, in or for consumption in any of the countries of the European territory," and, on the other hand, the "Europeans are to abstain in like manner from manufacturing, selling, or quoting, directly or indirectly, in and for consumption in any of the countries of the American territory." A common fund of of the countries of the American territory." A common fund of $50,000 was provided for to protect the "common interests against outside competition." This agreement also provided for the payment of penalties for the violation of the terms of the agreement. On December 30, 1903, there had been paid in penalties $778,277.80, of which the American manufacturers received $10,586.53 and the European manufacturers received $767,691.27. The cost of the American manufacturers, then, to preserve their monopoly in the United States from competition in European countries is seen to be $767,691.27.

This agreement became effective in July, 1897, and was in full force and effect at least as late as February, 1908.

MEXICAN AGREEMENT.

To protect this great monopoly from competition of powder factories located in Mexico, an agreement was entered into between the powder companies of that country and the "Gunpowder Trade Association of the United States," in 1879. agreement contained provisions similar to those found in the first, second, and fundamental agreements.

Under the operation of the policy of the Powder Trust, as explained in the preamble of the fundamental agreement, "for the protection of the common interests," we find that in April, 1902, competition in the powder trade in the United States had been suppressed. That there were no independent powder factories, except a small mill at Fairchance, Pa., and a few small mills in the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania. Notwithstanding this fact, Mr. Buckner, vice president of the Powder Trust, on Wednesday, June 12, 1910, appeared before the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House, and gave this very remarkable testimony:

Mr. Thomas. As to the cost you start with, the 40 cents, I understand, and a fraction.
Mr. Dawson. 43.21.
Mr. Thomas. You start with that basis. Now, what is your actual COST?

Mr. BUCKNER. I submit that this is hardly a fair question.

It should be remembered that Mr. Buckner was vice president of this trust, and I want you to get his answer:

I submit that is hardly a fair question. The Government is one customer of ours, and we have competition all over the world.

If there was a place in all the world where the Powder Trust had competition at the time he made that statement, I would like some friend of this trust to make explanation of it now.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GOOD. I would like to have five minutes more. Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good] be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Buckner continued:

If I give my costs on this powder I make for you, I give to the world my costs on the other powder and other business.

If the other statements made by Mr. Buckner at these hearings are as unreliable as this one, then that gentleman should have no standing whatever before the House or any of its committees. All competition had been eliminated by these unlawful agreements, and Mr. Buckner knew it; yet he states to us that they "have competition all over the world."

For a number of years Congress has made large appropriations of money, aggregating hundreds of millions of dollars, for powder and ammunition. Most of this money went to the Powder Trust. Year after year appropriations have been made for the purchase of powder and ammunition, when we knew that the Government of the United States could manufacture cheaper than the price we are compelled to pay for it; but we continue to authorize these purchases on the principle that by encouraging the private manufacturer of powder in times of peace he would build up a large factory which in time of war would be available for Government purposes. We are now brought face to face with the proposition that while Congress has been favoring the Powder Trust for years, while it has helped to make it strong, we now find that it is one of the greatest violators of the law that has ever been brought to justice. The first two American agreements were undoubtedly in violation of the common law, and the fundamental agreement and the European agreement have been declared to be in violation of the Sherman antitrust law.

Yet to this great violator of the law we have been practically intrusting the real protection of the United States. For a great many years it was the only source of supply of military powder. The American agreements were bad enough, but when we turn to the European agreement we find a far worse condition. So far as that agreement related to smokeless military powder, if its provisions were carried out it would place the United States Government absolutely at the mercy of this unlawful combination in time of war. For under its provisions military powder could be secured only from concerns that were members of this unlawful combination, and then only upon the terms, at the price, and in the quantities fixed by the parties thereto. I submit that we are certainly in a bad way when we find that the protection of our property, our liberty, and our lives depend upon a criminal class. For of what value are cannons and guns, of battleships and forts, of armies and navies without ammunition? And of what value are powder mills if they run in open violation of the law under agreements that are not only illegal but disloyal as well? Is it not our patriotic duty to provide for extending our Government powder mills so that we can manufacture all the powder needed for Government purposes?

The statement of Mr. Buckner above referred to, and similar statements from the same source, have for years been relied upon by Members of the House in making appropriations for powder and ammunition. In order to show how the House and its committees have been deceived by this kind of testimony, I desire to furnish the committee with certain facts testified to in the case of the United States of America against E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. et al., to which I have just referred. Outside of the Government's powder at the factory at Indianhead and at Picatinny Arsenal, the only concern that has manufactured any military powder in the United States for the past 100 years has been the Du Pont organizations. Under one name or another the Du Ponts and the interests engaged in the manufacture of powder which they control have been parties to these three unlawful American agreements and to the European agreement.

For a number of years the Du Ponts carried on the manufacture of powder under a partnership known as the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. In 1899 the surviving members of this partnership organized under the laws of Delaware a corporation called the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. The business was largely carried on by Eugene du Pont until his death, which occurred in 1902. At the time of his death no stockholder desired to assume the management of the business. At this time HENRY A. DU PONT, Thomas Coleman du Pont, and Pierre S. du Pont entered into negotiations for the purchase of the property of the Du Pont Co.

The result was that they organized a corporation under the laws of Delaware under the name of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co., with an authorized capital stock of $20,000,000. The 1902 Du Pont corporation then purchased all of the property of the 1899 Du Pont corporation for $23,997,000, payable as follows: Its promissory note for $12,000,000, stock in the new corporation of the face value of $11,997,000. In October, 1906, the 1902 corporation issued $300,000 additional stock for the purchase of capital stock in the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Co. of New Jersey. The only stock issued in the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of 1902 for which any money was paid was 30 shares issued to the three corporations, for which $3,000 in cash was paid into the treasury of the company.

The property turned over to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co.

by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. was largely stock in other powder companies. By this purchase it secured stock in other powder companies, as follows:

Austin Powder Co., 266 shares, or 32 per cent of its capital stock. Birmingham Powder Co., 203 shares, or 32.5 per cent of its capital stock.

California Pewder Works, 650 shares, or 20 per cent of its capital

Chattanooga Powder Co., 371 shares, or 29 per cent of its capital

Consumers' Powder Co., 530 shares, or 25 per cent of its capital stock. Eastern Dynamite Co., 1,908 shares, or 9.5 per cent of its capital stock.

Enterprise Powder Manufacturing Co., 438 shares, or 35 per cent of its capital stock.
Equitable Powder Manufacturing Co., 298 shares, or 29.8 per cent of its capital stock.
Fairmont Powder Co., 446 shares, or 59.4 per cent of its capital stock. Indiana Powder Co., 411 shares, or 20.5 per cent of its capital stock. Lafin Powder Manufacturing Co., 2,091 shares, or 34.8 per cent of its capital stock.
Lake Superior Powder Co., 908 shares, or 22.7 per cent of its capital stock.

Stock.

Mahoning Powder Co., 500 shares, or 50 per cent of its capital stock.

Northwestern Powder Co., 136 shares, or 22.6 per cent of its capital ock. Ohio Powder Co., 230 shares, or 15.3 per cent of its capital stock. Oriental Powder Mills, 1,255 shares, or 31.3 per cent of its capital stock.

Phoenix Powder Manufacturing Co., 2,314 shares, or 28.9 per cent of s capital stock. Hazard Powder Co., 10,000 shares, or all of its capital stock.

The Hazard Powder Co., all of the stock of which was now owned by the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co., at that time owned, in turn, the following powder companies:

Eastern Dynamite Co., 5,164 shares, or 25.8 per cent of its capital

Jock. Hecla Powder Co., 52 shares, or 5.2 per cent of its capital stock. Lake Superior Powder Co., 909 shares, or 15.2 per cent of its capital

Ohio Powder Co., 116 shares, or 7.7 per cent of its capital stock. Oriental Powder Mills, 122 shares, or 30.5 per cent of its capital stock.

Phoenix Powder Co., 1,104 shares, or 13.8 per cent of its capital

At the time of the trial of said case, Mr. Button, one of the officers of the trust, testified as follows:

In the course of our investigations we found out, or obtained a list of the stockholders of the other corporations, and we then learned that the Lafin & Rand Powder Co. was substantially interested in nearly all of the corporations in which we were interested and that their stock holdings, together with ours, controlled the management of these corporations. * * We determined to purchase the Lafin & Rand Powder Co. with a view of obtaining control of our properties.

stock.

A list of the stock which the Laffin & Rand Powder Co. owned in the other companies at that time is as follows:

The Anthracite Powder Co., 125 shares, or 50 per cent of its capital stock.

Birmingham Powder Co., 149 shares, or 23.8 per cent of its capital

Chattanooga Powder Co., 544 shares, or 21.8 per cent of its capital stock.

Eastern Dynamite Co., 5,807 shares, or 29 per cent of its capital

Equitable Powder Manufacturing Co., 192 shares, or 19.2 per cent of s capital stock. Hecla Powder Co., 157 shares, or 15.7 per cent of its capital stock. Indiana Powder Co., 476 shares, or 23.8 per cent of its capital stock. Laffin Powder Manufacturing Co., 2,091 shares, or 34.8 per cent of its Lake Superior Co., 826 shares, or 20.6 per cent of its capital stock.

Mahoning Powder Co., 500 shares, or 50 per cent of its capital stock.

Marcellus Powder Co., 179 shares, or 29.8 per cent of its capital stock.

Monarch Powder Co., 183 shares, or 91.5 per cent of its capital stock.

Northwestern Powder Co., 143 shares, or 23.8 per cent of its capital

Ohio Powder Co., 224 shares, or 14.9 per cent of its capital stock. Oriental Powder Co., 1,223 shares, or 30.5 per cent of its capital Phoenix Powder Manufacturing Co., 2,099 shares, or 26.2 per cent of a capital stock.

Schaghticoke Powder Co., 779 shares, or 77.9 per cent of its capital

The control of the Laflin & Rand Powder Co., and hence the control of the powder companies above given, was obtained in the following manner: In September, 1902, Thomas Coleman du Pont, Pierre S. du Pont, and Alferd I. du Pont, the same persons who organized the 1902 Delaware corporation, organized the Delaware Security Co., with an authorized capitalization of $4,000,000, with a cash paid-up capital of $2,000. On the same day they authorized the purchase of 5,524 shares of the capital stock of the Laflin & Rand Powder Co., to be paid as follows: $3,998,000 in stock and $2,209,000 in bonds of the Delaware Security Co. The only real consideration, however, for the purchase of this stock was the $2,209,000 in bonds, for practically all of the $3,998,000 of the stock in the Delaware Security Co., which was paid to the stockholders of the Laflin & Rand Powder Co., was turned over to the E. L. du Pont de Nemours Co. The only consideration moving from the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. was the promotion services of Thomas Coleman du Pont, Pierre S. du Pont, and Alferd I. du Pont, in acquiring the stock in the Laffin & Rand Powder Co., and for this it secured a majority of the stock in the Delaware Security Co. In acquiring the stock in the Laffin & Rand Powder Co. it was discovered that it would be necessary to also secure the stock in the Moosic Powder Co., and so Thomas Coleman du Pont, Pierre S. du Pont, and Alferd I. du Pont organized another holding company, known as the Delaware Investment Co., with a capital stock of $2,500,000, only $2,000 of which was paid into the treasury in cash.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman had half an hour under the five-minute debate. Other gentlemen desire time. How much time does the gentleman from Iowa desire?

Mr. GOOD. I think I can get through in 10 minutes. Mr. HAY. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman may be extended 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman may be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. GOOD. Yes

Mr. McKELLAR. I am a new Member in the House. want to know if the Mr. du Pont whom the gentleman is speaking of is the same Mr. du Pont who used to be treasurer of the Republican national committee?

Mr. GOOD. The du Ponts I have mentioned here are members of the same du Pont family. I do not recognize his initials or name as the person to whom you refer. I do not think I think, however, they may be of the same family.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is it Coleman du Pont?

Mr. GOOD. Thomas Coleman du Pont is the one I men-

Mr. McKELLAR. It is the same one, is it not?

Mr. GOOD. I think not. Now, as to these holding com-

Nine hundred and fifty shares of the capital stock of the Moosic Powder Co. was purchased by the Delaware Investment Co. for $4,988,000, payable as follows: Two million four hundred and ninety-eight thousand dollars in stock of the Delaware Investment Co. and $2,500,000 in bonds of the said company; but no soooner had the $2,498,000 of capital stock of the Delaware Investment Co. been turned over to the owners of the 950 shares of stock in the Moosic Powder Co. than a majority of said stock in the Delaware Investment Co. was turned over to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. in consideration of the promotion work of Thomas Coleman du Pont, Pierre S. du Pont, and Alferd I. du Pont in the purchase of the said stock in the Moosic Powder Co. In this connection it should also be kept in mind that Thomas Coleman du Pont, Pierre S. du Pont, and Alferd I. du Pont received $8,940,000 of the capital stock of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1902 corporation) without paying anything therefor, and solely for promotion services which they rendered the stockholders of the 1899 corporation in securing a sale to the stockholders of the 1902 corporation at a fabulous sum, a price far in excess of the value of the stock.

The organizers of the Powder Trust doubtless found that the control of the powder business could be better obtained by one large holding company than through several holding companies, for in 1893 they organized the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Co. in the State of New Jersey with an authorized capital stock of $50,000,000, divided equally in common and preferred stock. This company had a cash paid-up capital of $1,500. It then caused $16,000,000 of preferred stock and $13,600,000 of common stock, or $30,200,000, a majority of both the common and preferred stock, to be issued to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware in consideration of the equity which that company held in the stock owned and controlled by that corpora-By this operation, in 1903, the Delaware corporation of 1902 acquired control of the New Jersey powder company, and the New Jersey powder company, by the same transaction, acquired control, first, of all the capital stock of the powder companies formerly controlled by the 1902 Delaware corporation; secondly, the Hazard Powder Co. and all the powder then controlled by it; and, thirdly, the Laffin & Rand Powder Co. and all the capital stock of the powder companies then owned and controlled by it; and, fourthly, the Eastern Dynamite Co. and all of the capital stock then controlled by it. With this transaction completed, the Powder Trust had brought into one company every powder manufacturing company in the United States except the following: The King Powder Co., the Giant Powder Co., Hancock Chemical Co., American Powder Mills, Miami Powder Co., Ætna Powder Co., and these companies, with the exception of the Hancock Chemical Co., are parties to the fundamental agreement.

The E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of New Jersey, has had a very interesting history. It commenced business in 1903 with an authorized capital stock of $50,000,000, but with a paid-up capital of only $1,500. It then transferred to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware $30,200,000 of the capital stock in exchange for stock that that company secured by a system of stock juggling and without the payment of any money therefor. Yet this New Jersey company, in six and one-half years, has paid in dividends $11,000,000, and in addition has set aside a surplus fund of more than $12,000,000. Twenty-two million dollars should be considered a good return on an investment of $1,500 in six and one-half years. Even the $6,644,000 in dividends which the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware received on its $30,200,000 of stock in the New Jersey corporation should be considered as a fair return on the $3,000 originally invested in that company.

If we believe the statement of Mr. Buckner, vice president of the Du Pont Powder Trust, we are led to believe that the Powder Trust has been losing money on its Government contracts; that it is a sort of eleemosynary institution.

I have not attempted to give the entire history of the organization of the Powder Trust and consequently the control of the powder industry. I have only touched the high places in the history of the powder company's monopolization of the powder and dynamite industry. A great many holding companies were formed and "watered stock" was quite numerous. Under one device or another the independent manufacturer was forced to retire, and his plant was taken over by the trust. The question now is, Do we, as legislators, really want to bring about the dissolution of this unlawful combination, or do we want it to continue to exist in order that we may talk about it? If we are looking for results, and not for campaign material only, let us put a stop to the practice of giving to the Powder Trust lucrative Government contracts aggregating from $4,000,-000 to $5,000,000 annually. We will have then taken one step in the direction of a real dissolution of this unlawful combina-

This amendment provides that 10 per cent of the amount appropriated may be available for the purchase of powder. This authorization will permit the Government to purchase powder from domestic and foreign manufacturers, so that we may ascertain whether or not the powder manufactured by the Government is at all times up to a standard test. At present we purchase a small amount of powder abroad for this purpose,

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. GOOD. Just for a question. I can not yield for a speech.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Assuming that the amendment the gentleman has offered in adopted the specific production. the gentleman has offered is adopted, providing that the Government shall not purchase more than 10 per cent of its powder from private companies, in what position will the Government be with regard to the remaining 90 per cent which it may need in case of emergency?

Mr. GOOD. Let it manufacture it. We now are manufacturing one-fourth of our powder and running our present mill, which cost us only $516,000, to one-third of its capacity.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is the Government equipped to go on and make the other 90 per cent?

Mr. GOOD. Just as the Du Pont powder factory in the Spanish-American War became equipped in 60 days to go on and manufacture the powder that was needed, so the Government in time of peace can become equipped, so that it will not have to depend upon a criminal class in order to obtain this important part of its military stores in time of war.

Mr. PEPPER. Assuming that this amendment is passed and that the Government can manufacture 90 per cent, what ob-jection has the gentleman to having the Government manufacture the other 10 per cent?

Mr. GOOD. I have been very liberal with this trust. The testimony before the committee is to this effect: That the purchasing agent ought to have the power to purchase some powder abroad from European and other mills to see that the kind we are manufacturing is up to standard tests.

Mr. PEPPER. Would the gentleman have any objection, then, to limiting the purchases so that they shall be for experimental purposes only?

Mr. GOOD. No; I think that ought to be done.
Mr. PEPPER. And cut out the remaining 10 per cent?
Mr. GOOD. I would be perfectly willing to do that.
Mr. SHERLEY. Right at this point, does not the gentleman's amendment provide a limitation as to ammunition and not as to powder?

Yes. I have used the language of the bill. Mr. GOOD.

Mr. SHERLEY. Is the gentleman desirous of putting a limitation upon anything except powder?

Mr. GOOD. Yes. I should like to put it on ammunition, because my study of the case has convinced me that you can not limit the one without limiting the other, that the powder companies and the ammunition manufacturers are so linked up together that you will never be able to obtain real results until you go to the bottom of the whole transaction.

Mr. SHERLEY. Does the gentleman think the other fellows are in the trust, too?

Mr. GOOD. I think they are very close to the border line. I realize that when the question is raised of the Government engaging in an undertaking there is a hue and cry raised that it costs the Government more to do this work than it costs private manufacturers to do the same thing.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I want to ask the gentleman if he knows whether or not the same system prevails with reference to purchases of powder in the Army that prevails in the Navy? That is, that the price is fixed by a board of officers.

Mr. GOOD. Yes; there is a joint board that purchases powder both for the Army and for the Navy. Mr. GOOD.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. And the board knows what it costs to manufacture powder?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Does not that board fix the price with reference to that cost?

Mr. GOOD. Well, we have somewhat; we brought powder down from $1.60 a pound to 60 cents, and I think that is because of our experiments in manufacturing.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Certainly; and that system is in existence now.

Mr. GOOD. If we manufacture powder in a larger way we will manufacture it cheaper than we do now. We are now in the experimental stages.

I was about to say when interrupted that when the question is raised of the Government engaging in such an undertaking that the hue and cry is heard that it costs the Government more to do work of this kind than it does private manufacturers-that Government work is always more expensive than the work done by private contractors. I admit that this was formerly true, and that it is true to-day in some of the departments of the Government; but it is to our everlasting credit that it is not altogether true, and I hope that the day will soon dawn when it will not be true at all. I hope that the time has arrived when the industrious and efficient Government employee will crowd out of every branch of the Government service the indolent and the inefficient.

In the construction of the Panama Canal Col. Goethals has achieved singular success and distinction. This, the greatest work of the century, is being accomplished as a Government proposition with a degree of industry and efficiency unequaled and unparalleled in any other undertaking. Some of the work of Gen. Crozier at the Government arsenals has been attended with great success. With an expenditure of only $514,125 in powder mills, he is manufacturing one-fourth of the military powder procured by the Government. This, too, notwithstanding the fact that the plant is being run at only one-third of its capacity. If he was authorized to manufacture practically all of the military powder procured by the Government, I have no doubt but that the cost of 43 cents per pound would be greatly reduced. The lowest price at which the Government has purchased powder is 60 cents per pound, and this comparatively low price was only available in the last contract entered into by the Government.

In the manufacture of guns and fieldpieces Gen. Crozier's record is little short of marvelous. He recently testified that guns and fieldpieces manufactured by the Government were produced at from 35 to 54 per cent cheaper than they can be purchased from private manufacturers. There is no ques-tion about our ability to effect economies in the manufac-ture of powder. We could likewise effect great economies in the manufacture of our guns and cannon at our Government arsenals, for I believe that we should manufacture all our own powder and all our guns and fieldpieces at Government arsenals.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Certainly. Mr. GOOD.

Mr. KAHN. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that Gen. Crozier advises the continued purchase of a considerable quantity of ammunition from private concerns?

Mr. GOOD. I know that he says that it is a great question upon which men materially differ.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. GOOD. I ask unanimous consent that I may have two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa asks for an extension of two minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I do not object, but I want to give notice that I shall offer an amendment after the gentleman closes

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. GOOD. I am surprised that gentlemen on the other side of this House who have talked so long and so loud against the trusts should, the first time opportunity offers to administer a rebuke to one of the most flagrant violators of the law of the trust variety, instead report a bill giving to the law-defying Powder Trust one of the most lucrative Government contracts This, too, right upon the heels of a deit has ever obtained. cision of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Delaware that this recipient of your bounty and of your good will is an illegal and unlawful combination in restraint of trade.

If this amendment which I shall offer should prevail, we will have at least taken a step forward in the matter of dissolving the Powder Trust, and will at the same time adopt a policy that will save the Government many millions of dollars. [Applause.]

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with amazement to this neurotic attack upon a perfectly defensible, honestly conducted industry, the manufacture of ammunition. I endeavored to call the attention of the last speaker to the fact that he was making mistakes, but he soon wearied of the interruption

Gen. Crozier, in his testimony before the Military Committee, page 641 of hearings before Military Affairs Committee, said that the Government makes about half of its powder, or not quite one-half. His testimony was to the effect that the Government made almost half of its powder; but what has that to do with the ammunition manufacturer? The Powder Trust is do with the ammunition manufacturer? The Powder Trust is the producer and the manufacturer of ammunition is the consumer of powder. The manufacturers of ammunition have to buy powder from this Powder Trust. And yet the gentleman sugests that you kill off the ammunition manufacturer in order to hit the Powder Trust. The facts that he has marshaled in good array against the Du Pont Powder Co. have the semblance of verisimilitude, but if he is not more accurate in his facts with reference to the ammunition manufacturer than he is in reference to the powder manufacturer, I would not give much for the paper that his speech is written upon.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AMES. Certainly.

I want to state for the information of the gen-Mr. GOOD. tleman from Massachusetts that the facts upon which my remarks are based are all found in the records of the court of the United States for the district of Delaware.

Mr. AMES. I do not care if they are found in his family Bible at home; they do not alter the facts in the case. I speak advisedly. I am not a stockholder in any ammunition manufactory, but my family are, and I am somewhat interested to that extent. I know that they have to buy their powder from the Powder Trust, and they have to pay the price that the Powder Trust can demand, because it makes the best powder and the only powder that is possible for military cartridges.

In regard to the manufacture of ammunition, Gen. Crozier testified before the Committee on Military Affairs that the Government was making 68,000,000 rounds of small-arms ammunition and only buying 8,000,000 rounds, and that that was divided up among the ammunition manufacturers so that no one got over 2,000,000 rounds, and some less than 1,000,000 rounds. And yet the gentleman from Iowa would propose an amendment like this to prevent the purchase of any ammunition practically for the purpose of killing off the powder trust. That is why I call it a neurotic attack. Give it to the trust if you will, but do not kill off innocent manufacturers.

The Government ought not to enter into undue competition with private industries. The Government ought not to make its boots and shoes when it can buy them, nor its clothing, nor anything else it can buy, and neither ought it to make all of the small-arms ammunition, and for this reason. If in time of necessity, when war comes upon us, the small-arms ammunition manufacturers are not equipped with tools for making Government ammunition and are not blessed with the experience necessary for that particular class of ammunition, they would be of no service to the Government. For that reason, that they may have tools, that they may have experience, that they may learn the manufacture of ammunition to meet the ballistic tests required by the Government, Gen. Crozier decided to recommend that a small part of the ammunition be made outside-8,000,000 out of 68,000,000 rounds, which is a very small proportion.

Yet the gentleman speaks of the ammunition manufacturers as conspiring against the Government. I hope the gentleman will not leave the Chamber. I want to call the attention of the committee to this proposition. The testimony before the Military Affairs Committee is that the Government makes almost half of its powder; that the manufacturers of ammunition make only 8 out of 68, or one-eighth of its ammunition. A proper governmental policy, I believe, would be limited as follows: That the Government make about one-half of its powder. Manifestly it would be absurd to make it all, and equally absurd to buy it all. So, with the ammunition. It would be absurd for the Government to buy all of its small-arms ammunition.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, it would be manifestly absurd for the Government to buy all of its small-arms ammunition. It would be manifestly absurd for the Government to make all of it. Somewhere in between the two is the proper balance for the governmental policy in regard to building up the ammunition manufacturer to be of assistance in time of need. it is one-third or two-thirds or one-half should be left to the discretion of Congress and be determined thereby, and I should recommend that, and I should be satisfied as a Government policy if the Government bought half of what it used and made the other half, and not make sixty-eight millions as against eight millions. The Ordnance Department's figures as to cost are all based on manufacturing sixty-eight million as compared to eight, and of course those figures show lower than the private manufacturer of ammunition. They can not make different sizes of ammunition as cheaply as the manufacturer can, and it is almost a fundamental axiomatic fact that they can not, as a Government, manufacture the small-sized ammunition as cheaply as they could buy it.

In regard to this proposed amendment, it only hits the smallarms manufacturer. I have no difference with the gentleman about the Powder Trust. I know little more about it than he has told us, and I am doubting a great deal of that now. This is a proposition to prevent the Government from buying a reasonable, rational part of its small-arms ammunition, and as the War Department sells small-arms ammunition to the Navy and the Marine Corps, it affects all the small-arms ammunition used by the military establishment. I hope this amendment will not be adopted. It is not germane to the paragraph. It is not the way to get at it. It does not affect the Powder Trust in the slightest degree and will only hurt an innocent class of manufacturers who have broken no law and are doing the best they can by themselves and the Government. [Applause.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, at the risk of being charged with making an argument in support of what is commonly called and what may be a trust, I am going to say a few words in contravention of what I believe to be some of the erroneous statements or deductions of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good]. For several years—indeed, since I became a member of the Committee on Military Affairs-I had been very much interested in this question of procuring munitions of war. A few years ago when we were stirred up by communications received by every Member of this House to a state of actual, open hostility toward powder trusts I became convinced that it would be a good thing for the Government to engage, at least to a limited extent, in the manufacture of powder. I proposed a bill to erect a powder plant, to be conducted by the War Department. A number of other gentlemen, inspired, no doubt, by the same communications, having open to them the same sources of information, introduced other and similar bills. It happened that the bill that I proposed was adopted. That is to say, a bill was adopted which provided precisely the same amount of money that I asked for and for the plant to be operated along precisely the lines I suggested in the bill I offered. It was not my intention then-and I have never seen or heard anything since to change my views-to have the Government manufacture its entire supply of the munitions of war. I believe it would be an extremely unwise thing to do; and in that opinion I have been supported by the testimony of gentlemen in the War Department, upon whose judgment I have come, through years of acquaintance with them and their official records, to place great reliance. So far as I am advised, all of the great Governments of Europe-England, Germany, Austria, and Russia-buy their powder from private manufactur-France, I believe, is the only exception to that rule. France makes all of the powder that she uses in her army and navy and has a governmental monopoly on the manufacture of explosives. Every man here who has familiarized himself with the history of the French military operations for the last few years knows that there has been a series of accidents due, it is alleged, to the defects in powder.

The last great disaster to the French navy, in which there was an internal explosion and great loss of life and loss of a ship, was said to be due to the unsatisfactory nature of the powder. Now, Mr. Chairman, no such accident as that has happened in our Navy, and, so far as I am informed, no such accident as that has happened in the English or the German navies. It may or may not be true that the French powder manufactured by the Government under the Government monopoly is not so good as ours. I have no technical knowledge on that point, but I am inclined to believe that it is very much inferior to that which we make both in our governmental and in our private plants.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Did it not appear that reports had been filed in the department of the marine in France, calling attention to the fact that this powder on this vessel which was blown up was of such a character that it should be withdrawn, and that those reports were suppressed, and after the investigation started it was shown that this explosion was due to the fact they did not observe the precautions that should have been observed if the report of the inspector had been followed?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, my recollection is—I read everything about it that appeared in the newspaper press at the -that the statement of the gentleman from New York is entirely and absolutely accurate.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And the fact is this powder deteriorates, all of these high explosives, and in some instances acquires additional strength and explosiveness so as to be dangerous to handle.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I am so informed, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, a comparison between the powder supplied in foreign countries and in ours is all to the advantage of that produced in this country. A few years ago, when we went to the small-caliber rifle—to the .30-caliber rifle—it was found that the powder we were then using and which had been entirely satisfactory

The CHAIRMAN, The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes, or so much thereof as may be necessary to conclude my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes. Without objection. the request will be granted. The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Texas is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. SLAYDEN. When we changed from the larger to the smaller caliber gun it was found that the powder which had been entirely satisfactory under the previous conditions was not satisfactory under the new; that it caused such an erosion that the gun would wear out after, my recollection is, about 1,500 rounds had been fired. Of course that was a condition that could not be tolerated; it was too expensive; it destroyed our guns too rapidly, and would have involved an enormous charge upon the Treasury. It greatly disturbed the Chief of Ordnance, and he, wise man that he is, set about bettering the conditions. He had heard of a powder made in Germany, and he was assured by the agent of that powder that he could sell him a product that would increase the life of his guns very considerably, because 5,000 rounds of that powder could be considerably, because 5,000 rounds of that powder could be fired through one of these rifles before it would become unfit for military purposes. A quantity of it was bought; I think 50,000 pounds. It did not give the entire satisfaction that was expected, but it did materially increase the life of our guns, because they could fire 3,000 rounds rather than the 1,500 which had been fired before that. But, Mr. Chairman, even that was not satisfactory. The pride of the American inventors and business men were aroused, the pride and spirit of our Government was aroused, and Gon Croyler took the matof our Government was aroused, and Gen. Crozier took the matter up with this despised Powder Trust that has been referred to here, and in the course of a short time they brought to him a powder, without increase of price, as I remember it, which multiplied the life of that gun by three. In other words, to put it in another way, where the gun would have been exhausted with one shot, for comparison, it was made to stand without apparent deterioration three shots. I think it is 15,000 rounds that may be fired from these guns with this powder without any appreciable deterioration in the weapon. That is without any appreciable deterioration in the weapon. an important fact, Mr. Chairman, and one that should be considered. I heard the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good] refer to the hearings before the Committee on Naval Affairs Wednesday, January 12, 1910. It was a statement made by Col. Buckner, who is associated with the Du Pont Powder Co., and who, by the way, is the only man I have ever seen or known in my life who was associated with any powder company.

Col. Buckner made a statement detailing the history of the joint operations of the Government and of his company for a number of years. He told of an interview with Mr. McKinley at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. On the request of the President that they provide the Government a supply of powder they did undertake to create in 60 days a factory that made powder, not a smokeless product, not this scientific powder that we are compelled to have now, but the brown, prismatic powder that had become almost obsolete. But it was the only thing that could be had at the time and in time to meet the necessities of the Government. They made a contract with the Government to supply some 5,000,000 pounds of that powder. The war came to a much earlier conclusion than had been anticipated, and there remained an unexecuted balance of that That was cancontract of something like 2,500,000 pounds. celed on the request of the Government, with no cost to the Government. Mr. Chairman, I think that is a commendable act, even though it was done by the Du Pont Powder Co.

This document tells of certain scientific developments, processes, and improvements in the manufacture of powder that have been made by the Du Pont and other great corporations engaged in the manufacture of powder, and in every instance, according to my information, the Government has been freely and gratuitously given the benefit of any development along that line, just as the Government was given blue prints and plans for the construction of its own powder plant—the powder plant that I advocated the construction of a few years ago.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. SLAYDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Yes.

BERGER. Are we to understand that the gentleman would argue that we are to leave the defense of the country to a trust, the Du Pont Co. or whatever it be-a private

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman understands that I argued any such thing as that he absolutely mis-understands what I have been saying.

Mr. BERGER. I can not understand it in a different way as long as they are to furnish the powder. Powder is one of the main parts of the defense, and if we are to depend on any trust for ammunition, then we are to depend on the trust for our defense.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Now, the gentleman can not state my posi-Mr. SLAYDEN. Now, the gentleman can not state my posi-tion for me. I might risk him doing it if I thought he could do it accurately. I yield no further now. Mr. BERGER. Go ahead. Mr. SLAYDEN. I am opposed to a dependence upon a trust, as I am opposed to a dependence upon an inadequate source of supply. I am supported in this position by officers of the Navy and officers of the Army, who believe we ought to buy a considerable part of our munitions of war from private plants in order that we may not be left in a defenseless condition in time of need. What position would we have occupied in 1898 if it had not been for private manufacturers? What position would England or Germany or Austria be in to-day but for their private plants? It is because I do not want to see the Government in a defenseless position in a crisis that I agree to what is recommended by Admiral Mason in his report, and by Gen. Crozier in his hearing before the Committee on Military Affairs, that we should not put these people out of business. I am in favor of buying from private manufacturers a portion of such powder and munitions of war as we may require, just as I am in favor of buying all the other munitions of war that we may require-to a great extent at least-such as equipment of Artillery, Cavalry, and so forth, from private plants.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. As I understand it, we are only buying about 15 per cent of our ammunition, while we are buying 75 per cent of our powder. Is there any reason why we could buy a greater per cent of powder than we do of our ammunition?

Mr. SLAYDEN. I am sorry to say I can not answer that question. I have not examined into the relative requirements of these articles.

Mr. SHERLEY If the gentleman will yield to me, I will say that we are actually manufacturing over 25 per cent of the powder that we use.

Mr. PEPPER. It is over half.
Mr. SHERLEY. Twenty-five per cent. It is not half.
Mr. PEPPER. I was saying if we purchased over half.
Mr. SHERLEY. We purchase nearly three-quarters of what we use.

Mr. PEPPER. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that, according to the hearing, Gen. Crozier testified that we are only purchasing a very small amount of ammunition. there any reason why we should purchase 75 per cent of our powder and only about 10 or 12 per cent of the ammunition? Is there any reason, either economical or from a military standpoint, why we should do so?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I do not know where the line of danger would come. I believe it would be dangerous and improper to put these private manufacturers out of business. believe it might be very dangerous to the country in the event of a sudden war, of an unexpected crisis; but whether that danger line be at 25 per cent, 50 per cent, or 75 per cent I do not know. But I am quite sure that it will be before we reach the 90 or 95 per cent proposed by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good], because no private manufacturer, if I know anything about the business could maintain the relation know anything about the business, could maintain the plants to do the work, even in a crisis, if given only that percentage of the business.

The price of powder has steadily declined for a number of years. It has gone down by reason of scientific developments. It has gone down by reason of the reduction in the price of alcohol and other elements that go into the making of gunpowder.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes.
Mr. FITZGERALD. It has gone down also, has it not, because of legislation enacted by Congress putting a limit on the

Mr. SLAYDEN. Undoubtedly; but it has also gone down, I will say to my friend from New York, to sportsmen and to the trade as well as to the Government.

Mr. SHERLEY. Not anything like the extent of the limitation I was instrumental in putting on by provision some years ago of 64 cents for small-arms powder. They were then buying it at 67 cents or a little over. I was told then that we were putting the Government out of the opportunity for getting powder from private manufacturers, but we have obtained powder since then for 60 cents.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes; and I think the Government will get it still cheaper.

Mr. GOOD. Does the gentleman make his statement about the superior quality of our powder with full knowledge of the statement made by Mr. Buckner before the Committee on Naval Affairs? He said:

They know-

That is, the Government-

Mr. SLAYDEN. Pardon me one moment. Is the gentleman reading from hearing No. 13?

Mr. GOOD. Yes; No. 13:

They know what they want, and they make us produce it. They get behind us and discover weaknesses in the powder, and they insist that the powder shall be what they want.

It would seem, then, would it not, that the Government has been demanding that a better grade of powder be made?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Precisely; and I was citing to the House a striking instance of it, as when the Government went to Germany and bought 50,000 pounds of powder the Du Pont people immediately developed a much better powder than that we got

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I would like to have one minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SLAY-

DEN! asks unanimous consent to proceed for one minute more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Before the Committee on Naval Affairs, on January 12, 1910, after that hearing was over and Mr. Buckner, the vice president of the Du Pont Powder Co., had concluded his discussion, Mr. BUTLER, of Pennsylvania, said:

I wonder if any one of these gentlemen wishes to say anything to us before he goes, because these figures will stand here for discussion.

Admiral Masox. I have no criticisms to make concerning Col. Buckner's statements. I think they are very fair and just.

That I look upon, Mr. Chairman, as a certificate of the truthfulness of the statements made therein, and I would have con-tempt for myself as a Member of this House and as a representative of the people if I could not be fair and just, even to a Powder Trust. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. I think we are at the end of the paragraph, are we not?

The CHAIRMAN. Is this an amendment to the pending amendment?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is an amendment to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. There is an amendment pending. question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good].

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I am in sympathy with the purpose of the gentleman from Iowa, but not at all in accord with him in the remedy proposed. I thoroughly agree that the Powder Trust is deserving of all that he has stated about it, and yet I am not willing to do that which I think would be a mistake on the part of the Government. I believe that we ought to make part of our powder. I do not believe that we ought to make all of our powder, and I do not believe that for two reasons. The first reason is that I want to have private manufacturers making powder, in order that we may have some intelligent method whereby we can compare the cost of Government manufacture with the cost of purchasing the powder, and that we would not have if we made all of our powder. Secondly, I do not believe that it is a wise policy to undertake to rely upon Government-made powder for our entire supply in time of war. I might add a third reason. The inventive genius of men engaged in making powder ought not to be restricted simply to those within the Government employ.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. SHERLEY. Certainly.
Mr. GOOD. The gentleman from Kentucky does not mean to say that we are appropriating money now in time of war, or that this rule would necessarily have to be followed in time of

Mr. SHERLEY. No; but I do mean to say this, that particularly as to cannon powder and to a less degree in smallarms powder, such as is required by the regulations of the Government, there is absolutely no demand for it from outside sources. The demand is purely a governmental demand. If you take away that governmental demand, the private manufacturers will not engage in the manufacture of that kind of powder. And I want to say this, in justice to the Du Pont people-from whom I hold no brief, as I need not tell this House, because heretofore I was instrumental in putting a limitation on the price of powder, and in a few minutes I will offer another limitation—the ability to create a powder factory, the ability to make a high standard of powder, such as is required, and the cheapness of cost at which it has been made, have been largely the result of the discoveries and economies instituted by the Du Pont people and given to the United States, to be taken advantage of by the Government when it established its own powder factory. Now we are making cannon powder for 55 cents a pound and are paying 60 cents. I am inclined to think that that difference of 5 cents represents no more than a fair profit to an outside manufacturer.

As to small-arms powder, the situation is not the same. are making small-arms powder for 65 cents, and that, I may say in passing, includes all overhead charges of every kind figuring also the value of the money of the Government at 3 per cent interest. We are paying 75 cents for small-arms powder. The same percentage of advance in price to the manufacturer of small-arms powder that exists as to cannon powder would make the proper price 70 cents plus, as I recall it not quite 71 cents; and I should be very glad to see a limitation placed in this bill prohibiting the paying of more than 71 cents for small-arms powder. But I do not believe that it is right or wise simply to say that the Government shall not buy powder from outside sources, which is what this 10 per cent limitation would practically mean.

There is another thing in this connection. I agree with the gentleman in his proposition that we ought not to help trusts to exist. But as the gentleman has pointed out, there has been a suit brought dissolving this trust. Whether the decree of the court will be effective time alone can disclose, but certainly there has been a decree entered ordering a dissolution and the maintenance as independent concerns of various factories that went into the consolidation. Now, with our inability to make the powder that we ought to have and to establish the reserve that we ought to have, it does not seem to me to be wise to have the Government go exclusively into the powder manufacturing business. I want to second the gentleman in every particular necessary in order to prevent the Government being held up as to the price of its powder.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. SHERLEY. I ask five minutes more. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that he may proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERLEY. I expect and have a right to expect that the administrative branch of this Government will enforce the law against trusts and monopolies; and inasmuch as in this instance the court has agreed with their view to the extent of entering a decree, I do not believe we ought simply to punish ourselves by excluding the only concern which at present makes this kind of powder, thus depriving ourselves of the benefit that comes from having their inventive genius and their cost with which to compare our own.

Mr. PEPPER. Conceding all that the gentleman says as to the desirability of private manufacture, does not the gentleman think the Government could manufacture more than 25 per cent of its powder with advantage to all parties?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes; I say so, and if the gentleman is familiar with the history of the whole affair, he knows that from the Committee on Appropriations there came a provision, just a few years ago, creating this powder factory. He knows that it is only recently that they have been in a position to manufacture even the powder that they are now manufacturing. I think it is a proper thing for the Government to manufacture a larger per cent of its powder than 25 per cent, but that is not the question presented here.

Mr. PEPPER. Is it not also true that the testimony in the hearing was that the present manufacturing plant of the Government is only working one-third of its capacity at the present time, and has been for some time?

Mr. SHERLEY. If by capacity you mean working three shifts of men 24 hours a day. The testimony is that they are working one-third of a 24-hour three-shift day.

Now, they unquestionably could increase, and I would like to see them increase to the extent of their power, although it ought to be said in fairness that the proposition presented by . the Powder Trust to the Government at first was on a sliding scale, and that the price dropped according to the quantity, and the present price of 60 cents was obtained by giving a sufficient quantity to come within the terms of that proposition. But the proposition presented to this House is not the gentleman's. The proposition here is not simply to limit the powder, but to limit ammunition that shall be purchased to 10 per cent. I do not think that is a wise proposition, and while I want to see the Government protected, I do not want to see it punish itself in a desire to punish the Powder Trust.

Mr. PEPPER. According to the testimony, as far as ammunition is concerned, we are not purchasing much more than 10 per cent now, but we are purchasing more powder.

Mr. SHERLEY. I can not answer the gentleman as to that. Mr. PEPPER. We are purchasing about 12 per cent of the ammunition.

Mr. SHERLEY. I think it would run to considerably more than 12 per cent on all kinds of ammunition.

Mr. PEPPER. As to small arms.

Mr. SHERLEY. It may not as to small arms, but the gentleman must remember that the bill only relates to certain kinds

Mr. PEPPER. The hearings cover all kinds of ammunition. Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, that is all I desire to say to the committee. The amendment in its present form ought not to be agreed to.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I have been one of the advocates of this policy of having the Government engage in certain lines of manufacture as a salutary check upon combinations of private manufacturers. Congress has adopted that policy with reference to the construction of battleships, and we have managed our affairs so that the Government is in a position, so far as battleship construction is concerned, as to interpose a check against combinations of private individuals engaged in such construction.

The same policy has been adopted with reference to the manufacture of powder. I have been under the impression that that policy has been fully as successful as it has with reference to the construction of battleships. My observation in the House—and for years I have listened to the debates on this question-is that a splendid start has been made by the Government. As the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] says, a few years ago this policy was commenced and more money was appropriated as years went by, and when in the wisdom of the House it decides that the Government should manufacture a higher percentage of the powder it uses than it now does the method of procedure is plain. It has been marked out, and there is no trouble in going about it in a proper way. The futility of the method proposed here was made apparent a few years ago by the passage in the naval bill of a provision which was designed to prevent the Government from purchasing any powder from a trust. I think substantially that was the language. The Government officials were of the opinion then that the concern from which it purchased the powder was such a combination that it might fairly be called a trust. There was no denial of the fact, at least, that the various powder-manufacturing concerns were at that time under one ownership and control; so that there was no question as to the duty of the Government officers when it came to the purchase of the powder. But it developed the next year that in the face of that limitation the Government officials had purchased the usual quantity of powder from this concern. They admitted that they had done so, and said there was nothing else for them to do, that they could not at that time with the facilities at their disposal manufacture enough powder for the use of the Government, and were compelled to go to the only manufacturers from whom they could purchase what they wanted. They were placed in that attitude by the hasty action of Congress on an approin that attitude by the hasty action of congress on an appropriation bill. They were charged on the one hand with the duty of not purchasing powder of this trust, and on the other hand they were charged with the duty of purchasing necessary powder for the Government. They were between the devil and the deep sea; they had either to refuse to buy powder for battle-ships or violate this legislative limitation.

Now, I sympathize with what the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Goop] is trying to accomplish. He wants, as I want, and as we have tried for years to put into effect, to put the Government in a position to purchase such powder as it must purchase from private parties of a proper quality and at proper prices.

Mr. GOOD. The gentleman mistakes my attitude entirely. do not believe, after what we have seen of the case of the Powder Trust, that we can trust that kind of people to manufacture our ammunition for war; that it only costs us about 43 cents to manufacture powder, and the Government ought to manufacture its own military powder, because nobody uses military powder but the Government, and it ought to manufacture it.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Then the gentleman's amendment does not disclose what he wants to bring about.

Mr. GOOD. It certainly does.
Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.
The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I have offered simply does this: It provides that the Government can procure all of the powder that it is intending to procure, but that of that powder it can purchase only 10 per cent of the quantity, and must manufacture at its arsenal only 90 per cent.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Then the gentleman is simply doing what was done on the naval appropriation bill a year or two ago, and he will find the result achieved will be precisely the same. Instead of permitting the Government to purchase 10 per cent, as the gentleman's amendment does, this limitation of which I speak prevented the Government from purchasing at all. That meant that the Government must supply all of its own powder. The gentleman's proposition is that the Government must supply 90 per cent of its own powder. The Government can not do either of those things at this time. The gentleman must remember now that we are dealing with the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. GOOD. Does the gentleman know how much powder we can manufacture at our arsenal at the present time?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Yes. I am safe in saying the Government can not manufacture all the powder it needs for the ensuing year and continue to make the powder we are making for naval purposes.

Mr. GOOD. But the gentleman does not understand that we are manufacturing one-fourth of the powder that the Army needs, and that we are only running our mill at one-third of its

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I think I am well within the facts when I say that with all of the facilities the Government has at this time, running to the top of its capacity, 24 hours a the Government would not be able to manufacture the powder it needs for the ensuing year for which we are now appropriating.

Mr. SHERLEY. It is now manufacturing a little over 25 per cent, and that is a third of its utmost capacity as the plant now exists, so that it could manufacture not to exceed 76 per cent.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. That was demonstrated absolutely when the Government officers and agents had to admit that, in the face of a legislative enactment which was put on an appropriation bill, with the intention of preventing them frem purchasing powder from any trust, they were compelled to purchase it because they could not make it, and there was nobody else to purchase it from.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. Does the gentleman think that after they put this provision on the naval bill they could have found powder factories where they could have purchased it without going to the trust?

without going to the trust?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. No; that is the reason they went to the people with whom they had been dealing, because they were unable to buy anywhere else.

Mr. BUTLER. Only one concern makes it.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. They were permitted to buy it under an extraordinary condition, and I suppose they took this to be an extraordinary condition.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I suppose it was their duty to buy powder. As a matter of fact, I think it is true that all of that particular class of powder made for the Government is made in a factory in my district.

Mr. MADDEN. It was stated by the gentleman from Iowa that the Government powder factories were running only one-third of their capacity, and that meant 8 hours out of 24. Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Yes. Mr. MADDEN. And that the cost of powder was 43 cents a pound.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Yes. Mr. MADDEN, That is what the gentleman from Iowa said, Mr. SHERLEY. That is what he said, though I do not think that is a fact.

Mr. MADDEN. That is what I refer to. I want to ask the gentleman from New Jersey if the Government powder factories work full 24 hours, whether that would not increase the cost, because of the fact that they would be obliged to pay one and one-half times the wage for the extra 16 hours that they are obliged to pay for the 8 hours they now work?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I do not think so. The gentleman may be correct about that, but I do not think the Government pays overtime.

Mr. MADDEN. If it does not, of course that is different. The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey has again expired.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. With all due respect to the gentleman from Iowa, I do not think his is the way to get at this matter. In the first place, he is not dealing with powder. He is embarrassing the officers of the Government when they go to purchase small-arms ammunition. If he desires to broaden the field of the activities of the Government with reference to the manufacture of powder, he knows how to go about it.
Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. GOOD. I will suggest it will embarrass the big corporation in New Jersey, but it will not embarrass the Government in the least.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I will not share in the embarrassment of the big corporation in New Jersey. As I stated to the committee, I think the smokeless powder referred to in the naval bill is all manufactured in a factory in my district. think so, but I do not pretend to be accurate about that. They have a tremendous big factory up there; that is, they had the last time I was in that vicinity, but they have a habit of disappearing occasionally, and carrying sections of the landscape along with them; and that is a thing, too, that gentlemen who figure upon the cost of Government operation do not take into consideration. We have not had many explosions, and yet explosions of powder plants are of common occurrence in the district which I represent. Now what we all want to do, I imagine, is to try to be fair. I have done a little trust bursting and trust hunting myself, as members of the committee can testify, but I have always thought I was fair, and I think we ought to try to be fair on this proposition. We build a certain number of battle-ships. We find out what it costs to build a battleship and the time in which they can be constructed, and we manage to get the battleships that have been built by private concerns at a price reasonably approximate to what we know to be the true price. We have also compelled them to deliver their ships in a much shorter space of time than they used to; in other words, we have established a healthy competitive condition between the Government and the private ship constructors. We are in a great measure doing the same thing with reference to the purchase of powder. We have some very efficient plants which are growing more efficient all the time and which are being extended from time to time. We know what it costs, although there is a great divergence of opinion as to what it actually costs the Government on account of the difficulty of getting at the overhead charges, and also because true estimates can not be made until the Government has had these plants in operation for a considerable length of time, so that the damage caused by the explosions can be taken into consideration and charged up against the general cost, but we know in a general way what it costs to actually manufacture, and we have a board of officers who know what the cost of manufacturing is, and, as I am informed, that board of officers absolutely fixes the price at which the powder contracts are made.

Now, it does not seem to me there can be much gouging of the Government so long as that system prevails. of officers, who know what the cost of manufacturing powder is, go to the private concerns from whom we purchase this powder and say the Government will purchase so many pounds of powder at this price or that price, and that has always been accepted.

Mr. SIMS. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Certainly. Mr. SIMS. Suppose the amendment was at 75 per cent instead of 90 per cent, what would the gentleman say as to that?
Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I am trying to say, and the burden of my remarks has been that the gentleman from Iowa can not accomplish the purpose he seeks to accomplish by this kind of a limitation.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. GOOD. I think the gentleman wants to be fair. I would like to ask him this question: Suppose an amendment was placed in this paragraph which provided that only 90 per cent of the powder used in this ammunition, or not exceeding 10 per cent of the powder used in this ammunition, should be powder manufactured by private concerns, does not the gentleman see what would happen—that these concerns would hold up then the manufacturer of ammunition, and the manufacturer of ammunition would come back and say, "We are compelled; our hands are tied"—and it would cost the Government three or four times as much to produce this ammunition as it would cost under this provision?

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. I do not know that I follow the gentleman's argument very clearly; but I believe that if his limitation did everything he desired it to do, it would prevent the Government from buying 90 per cent of its powder, and when it was tried before it prevented them from buying any powder; that is, in effect, the gentleman's provision now

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to close debate on this

Mr. AMES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for a minute in which to ask a question of the gentleman from Iowa.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. AMES. The gentleman from Iowa held up a book. it contain the proceedings in equity against the Powder Trust?

Mr. GOOD. It is an equitable proceeding.

Mr. AMES. You stated that your facts came from that book, Mr. GOOD. I stated that I got my facts from the records in the case. In order that I may not be misunderstood I will say that the book contains the case of the United States of America, petitioner, against E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. et al., defendants.

Mr. AMES. The gentleman from Iowa gives the committee to understand that there was some connection between the Powder Trust and the small-arms manufacturers. Is there one scintilla of evidence in that case to show that there is the slightest connection between the two?

Mr. GOOD. If I said that I got everything I knew about the subject from that book, I misstated the case. The information I received is that the line of demarcation between the Powder Trust and the manufacture of ammunition is not very clearly defined. Mr. AMES.

Will you put in such information in your remarks?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia moves that the debate on this amendment be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I would suggest the absence of a quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] There are 72 Members present, not a quorum. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

The committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee having found itself without a quorum, he had directed the roll to be called, whereupon 253 Members, a quorum, had answered to their names, and he reported the following absentees:

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS,

Mr. Hartman, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of James Bookhamer, Fifty-seventh Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS). The vote is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good].
Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend page 45, line 23, by inserting, after the word "dollars," a colon instead of a period, and add the words "Provided, That not to exceed 10 per cent thereof shall be expended in the purchase of ammunition."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. GOOD. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 32, noes 102.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The Clerk read as follows:

Change the period after the word "dollars," line 23, page 45, to a colon and add "Provided, That not to exceed 25 per cent thereof shall be expended in the purchase of ammunition."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to close all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto.

The CHAIRMAN. A vote was heretofore taken to close debate on the paragraph.

Mr. HAY. No; it was on the amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY] moves that all debate on the paragraph be closed.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, debate not having commenced on this amendment, is it in order to close debate on it? The rule is very plain, Mr. Chairman, that debate on an amendment can not be closed until debate has commenced in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SHERLEY. On the paragraph; not on the amendment. Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman to move to close debate on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Illinois is whether a motion to close debate at this times is in order, the debate not having begun. The opinion of the Chair is that the motion to close debate at this time is out of order.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the debate has been had on the paragraph, and that the rule does not require that the debate must be had on every amendment in order to move to close debate.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Do I understand the motion to be that debate shall close on this amendment and all other amendments pertaining to this paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. That is what the Chair understands the motion to be.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then, I wish to make this further inquiry: I have an amendment which is entirely foreign to the one that has been discussed so fully-an amendment which I wish to submit in due course. If the point of order is decided favorably by the Chair, that would prevent my offering this motion?

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, if the Chair will permit, I call attention to this further fact, that if the inquiry of the gentleman from Illinois be decided as the Chair indicated, then it might be impossible in committee to cut off debate, because all motions to strike out the last word, after amendments had been discussed, would be subject to debate for five minutes, and in each instance you could continue the debate. But when the paragraph has been discussed, then it is in order to move that the paragraph and all amendments thereto be not debatable.

Mr. MANN. Does the Chair care to hear further from me on this subject?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman from Kentucky is entirely mistaken about the effect of the ruling of the Chair. It is not at all that debate can not be closed upon the paragraph or the amedments thereto, but the only amendment that is offered to the paragraph now is the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa, and under the rules he is entitled to the floor for five minutes' debate on that amendment. When he has had the floor upon that amendment it is in order to move to close debate upon the paragraph and all amendments thereto.

Now, of course it is true that debate has already been had on an amendment that has been disposed of, but the rule is that-

The committee may, by the vote of a majority of the Members present, at any time after the five-minute debate has begun upon proposed amendments to any section or paragraph of a bill, close all debate upon such section or paragraph.

I think a fair construction of the rule is that where debate has not been closed-

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will not entertain the motion to close debate at this time.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I have offered limits the amount which the Government can expend under this authorization to 25 per cent of the $250,000 for the purchase of Since I made the statement a few minutes ago with regard to the Du Pont Powder Trust several Members have come into the Chamber, and I trust, therefore, I may be pardoned if I restate some of the facts that appeared in the Powder Trust litigation.

We find ourselves in this position: Last year we appropriated about $4,000,000 for ammunition. Most of it went directly or indirectly to the pockets of the Du Pont powder people.

In 1903 the E. I. du Pont Powder Co. of New Jersey was organized with an authorized capital stock of $50,000,000. Only $1,500 in cash was paid into the treasury of that corporation. Notwithstanding this, that monopoly, which has manufactured all of the Government powder for a hundred years, has paid in six and one-half years $11,000,000 of dividends and has set aside $12,000,000 to the surplus. I submit to the Members of this House that that is just a little too big a profit to give to this kind of an organization.

We find ourselves in this position: The Government of the United States has prosecuted this trust. The United States Circuit Court for the District of Delaware has ordered a dissolution of the trust. The President of the United States and the Attorney General are doing all in their power to put the trust out of business, to dissolve it. We are doing all in our power to continue it, namely, to give it these good contracts for Government powder. My proposition is that the Government can only expend 25 per cent of this appropriation for the purchase of powder, so that the other 75 per cent must go for the manufacture of powder by the Government. But gentlemen say, "Ah, we can not manufacture powder as cheaply as we can buy The lowest price for which the Government was ever able to obtain powder was 60 cents a pound. It is costing the Gov-ernment to manufacture powder to-day but a trifle over 43 cents a pound. We are manufacturing one-fourth of the powder we use

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I can not yield. I have not the time. Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman does not want the statement to go forth that it is costing 43 cents when it is costing 55 cents, including overhead charges.

Mr. GOOD. The overhead charges include the pay of the officers of the Army, and they would be paid whether they were working in the powder factories or some other place. [Applause.

Mr. SHERLEY. The overhead charges include something besides that.

Mr. GOOD. They include depreciation. The 55 cents includes interest on the investment. It includes a great many things. But exclusive of overhead charges, the cost to the Government is only 43 cents and a fraction. Mr. HAY. I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in five minutes, the five minutes to be occupied by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr.

MOORE L. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia moves that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in five minutes.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Good) there were-ayes 58, noes 43.

Mr. GOOD. I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. HAY and Mr. Good.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were 80 ayes and 42 noes.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend page 45, line 22, by striking out the word "two" and inserting the word "three."

The CHAIRMAN. Is that an amendment to the amendment? Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No; it is an amendment to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not in order now to offer an independent amendment. The gentleman may use his five minutes now and offer the amendment later.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I have been waiting two or three days to offer this amendment; but, unfortunately, owing to the conditions prevailing, it is now impossible to get more than five minutes. Yet the proposition is entirely independent of the Powder Trust question under dis-

My amendment proposes to increase the appropriation for ordnance stores and ammunition, the manufacture and purchase of ammunition materials for small arms for a reserve supply, and so forth, from $250,000, as in the bill, to $350,000, the amount recommended by the Chief of Ordnance, Gen. Crozier.

The reason for this is that, while the Chief of Ordnance has been endeavoring for years past to lay by a surplus of small-arms ammunition and has indicated to the committee that he has attained a sufficient surplus to carry him along for several years, it still appears, notwithstanding a cut in the estimate of $150,000, that he recommended $100,000 more than the committee has allowed, and that the committee has cut down the actual recommendation of the department so that it will affect not only the surplus of small-arms ammunition, but will result in throwing out of employment, perhaps, 100 hands now engaged in this work at the Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia. This is the phase of the question that I want to discuss during my five minutes

The Government of the United States in this instance does actually manufacture ammunition cheaper than it is made by private manufacturers. The figures show-and I commend this to those gentlemen who approve of the Government entering into the business of manufacturing—that the actual cost price, with overhead charges included, for the manufacture of rifle ball cartridges at the Frankford Arsenal, where most of them are made, is $26.95 per thousand, as against $35.50, the average cost indicated in bids submitted by private individuals.

Mr. AMES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I can not; I have only five minutes. While I realize that there is much discussion in this House and a great difference of opinion as to whether the Government should enter into the business of manufacturing in competition with private manufacturers, here is an instance where the Government actually does that business, under all the laws and restrictions that are imposed by Government control, and does it very much cheaper than it is done by private manufactories. There may be a reason for this, but the facts are as I give them.

The point I now want to bring out to this House is that in spite of the fact that the Chief of Ordnance has recommended that this work be continued at a cost of $350,000 for the ensuing year, the committee, pursuing its course of economy, has cut down the final estimate $100,000, bringing it to $250,000, which, I am informed, will necessitate the discharge from the Frankford Arsenal at Philadelphia of at least 100 hands. is what I want to bring to the attention of the House. Where are these men to go when the work is taken away from them, when this new policy of economy is fully in force, and they are thrown out upon the streets to seek employment elsewhere?

Will the Government obtain ammunition cheaper by this process? Will it not be better for the Government to continue this system, keep these American workmen employed making the goods cheaper than they can be made at private manufactories?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Good) there were 52 ayes and 56 noes.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.
Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Good].

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were 54 ayes and 65 noes.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Now, Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment that I send to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 45, line 22, by striking out the word "two" and inserting the word "three."

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Moore of Pennsylvania) there were-ayes 35, noes 63.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 23, page 45, after the word "dollars," add:
"Provided, That not to exceed 60 per cent thereof shall be expended in the purchase of ammunition."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment. The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Small-arms target practice: Ammunition, targets, and other accessories for small-arms and machine-gun target practice and instruction; marksmen's medals, prize arms, and insignia for all arms of the service; and ammunition, targets, target material, and other accessories may be issued for small-arms target practice and instruction at the educational institutions and State soldiers' and sailors' orphans' homes, to which issues of small arms are lawfully made, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prascribe, provided the total value of the stores so issued to the educational institutions does not exceed $30,000, $800,000.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendments, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 9, strike out the word "eight" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seven."
Line 10, page 46, after the word "hundred," insert the words "and forty."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I do this in accordance with the communication received from the Chief of Ordnance stating that that amount can be stricken from this appropriation on account of the reduction in the number of Cavalry regiments.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.
Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which is similar to the one I offered a few moments ago.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 10, after the word "dollars," add: "Provided, That no part of the appropriation shall be paid for small-arms powder at a price exceeding 71 cents a pound."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 9, page 46, after the word "dollars," strike out the word eight" and insert in lieu thereof the word "nine."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, last year there was appropriated to this item $1,000,000. The War Department in its estimate recommended that $900,000 be appropriated this year. The committee has cut the appropriation to $800,000, and by the amendment just agreed to has cut it to $740,000, a reduction of $260,000. For the reason that I do not desire to see the workmen thrown out of the arsenals of the country, I ask that this amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Moore of Pennsylvania) there were—ayes 27, noes 71.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the close of line 10, page 46, after the word "dollars," insert the following:

"Provided, That of the amount expended in the procurement of ammunition not to exceed 25 per cent thereof shall be expended in the purchase of ammunition."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

Manufacture of arms: For manufacturing, repairing, procuring, and issuing arms at the national armories, $600,000.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 13, strike out the words "six hundred thousand" and insert in lieu thereof the words "seven hundred and fifty thousand."

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, if this amendment does not prevail it will result in a number of men who are now engaged in Government service being turned out, and at the same time the economy is ill-advised, because we need a supply of arms as a reserve for the use of the Army.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state that there is now a reserve of these guns on hand of 598,000 new service rifles, and the balance, 350,000, of Krag-Jörgensen, so that we have an ample reserve on hand. With this appropriation now car-ried in the bill there will be sufficient to continue to make the reserve as much as #t ought to be. I hope the amendment will be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PRINCE) there were-ayes 40, noes 71.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk rend as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Add at the close of line 13 the following:

"That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for any department or bureau of the United States to sell any arms of any kind, manufactured or acquired by such department or bureau for naval or military purposes, except as hereinafter provided: And provided further. That whenever any arms of any kind intended for naval or military purposes shall be condemned by any department or bureau of the United States, or shall become unfit for official use by such department or bureau, they shall be so broken or otherwise mutilated as to render them harmless as instruments of warfare or violence, and only when so broken or mutilated shall they be sold or disposed of by any such department or bureau."

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. It is not a limitation on expenditures, but a limitation of authority, and is an affirmative direction. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordnance stores and supplies: For overhauling, cleaning, repairing, and preserving ordnance and ordnance stores in the hands of troops and at the arsenals, posts, and depots; for purchase and manufacture of ordnance stores to fill requisitions of troops; for Infantry, Cavairy, and Artillery equipments, including horse equipments for Cavairy and Artillery, $700,000.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk rend as follows:

Add, after the word "dollars," in line 20, page 46, the following: "Provided, That of the amount expended in procuring ammunition not to exceed 25 per cent thereof shall be expended in the purchase of ammunition."

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

Automatic machine rifles: For the purchase, manufacture, and test of avoidable until the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, $100,000.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment: On page 47, line 14, strike out the word "one" and insert the word "two," so that it will read "two hundred thousand dollars." Now, the purpose—

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend line 14, page 47, by striking out the word "one" and inserting the word "two."

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, the reason I offer this amend-ment is as stated in the inquiries that I asked for recently of the War Department.

The supply of the automatic rifles is at present inadequate. appropriations for its increase ought not to be reduced. A new a better weapon has just been adopted, but the estimates of $100,000 who provide a sufficient number of rifles. It is necessary to h $200,000 to provide for that amount by gradual acquisition.

It may be true that we have enough ordinary rifles, but for these automatic machine rifles, which are of a new type and of a very improved character, we ought not to reduce the appropriation from what it was in the last Army bill, and I trust and hope that the committee will vote the amendment to make it

Mr. BUTLER. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. PRINCE.

Mr. BUTLER. When did the Army adopt the rifle which it is now using?

Mr. PRINCE.

This is an automatic machine gun.
I thought the gentleman called it a rifle.
It is an automatic machine rifle. Mr. BUTLER.

Mr. PRINCE.

Will the gentleman yield? Mr. GARRETT.

Mr. PRINCE. Certainly. Mr. GARRETT. Do I m Do I understand the gentleman read from a letter submitted to him personally that was not submitted to the committee?

Mr. PRINCE. No. sir. We thrashed this out the other day. Was the gentleman here?

Mr. GARRETT. I asked if the gentleman was reading from a letter that had been submitted to him that had not been submitted to the committee? Mr. PRINCE. Let me state it again; it has been stated once by me before in answer to a question by my colleague from Illinois [Mr. FOSTER]. This from which I have read was never presented to the committee; the chairman of the committee has no knowledge whatever with regard to it any more than I have knowledge with reference to the reduction of the Cavalry from 15 regiments to 10, but it is perfectly proper to bring that reduction in as the chairman did and of which I make no com-After this bill was prepared I wanted to know, as the ranking Member of the minority side, if there were any cuts here that ought not to be made, and I asked the proper department to give me information along that line. This is a part of the information that I got which never has been submitted to the committee nor to any other Member, so far as I know.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Will my colleague yield?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes.

Mr. SLAYDEN. May I ask him if the item he desires to have increased was submitted in the estimates?

Mr. PRINCE. Oh, yes; I think it was submitted in the estimates

Mr. SLAYDEN. What is your amendment? I could not

Mr. PRINCE. I want to make the appropriation for automatic machine rifles the same as it was one year ago, namely, $200,000, instead of $100,000. The letter was gone over by the committee, but the committee took another view, and I am taking this one.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, the appropriation last year was $200,000, and the estimate this year was for $200,000, and the committee cut it in two.

Mr. SLAYDEN. What is the object, please?

Mr. HAY. I am going now to read from page 658. I asked the Chief of Ordnance:

How many of these guns will you accumulate for the purpose of the use of the Army?

He said:

We expect to need, altogether, of guns of this general class, 1,626. Of those 1,626, we have aircady 1,176. So the shortage to be provided for at the present time is 450. Of these 450 I am asking this year for enough money to provide 150.

It appears on page 659 that they have 270 guns for the Regular Army now, and the other guns are in reserve, and we thought 75 guns for next year would be enough, and, therefore, we cut the appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Field artillery for Organized Militia: For the purpose of procuring field artillery material for the Organized Militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, without cost to the said States, Territories, or the District of Columbia, but to remain the property of the United States and to be accounted for in the manner now prescribed by law, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, under such regulations as he may prescribe, on the requisitions of the governers of the several States and Territories or the commanding general of the Militia of the Histrict of Columbia, to issue said artillery material to the Organized Militia; and the sum of $770,000 is hereby appropriated and made immediately available and to remain available until the end of the fiscal year 1914, for the procurement and issue of the articles constituting the same: Provided, That hereafter when authorized transfers or sales of ordnance or ordnance stores are made to another bureau of the War Department, or to another executive department of the Government, payment therefor shall be made by the proper disbursing officer of the bureau, office, or department concerned. When the transaction is between two bureaus of the War Department, the price to be charged shall be the cost price of the stores, including the cost of inspection. When the transaction is between the Ordnance Department and another executive department of the Government, the price to be charged shall include the cost price of the stores and the costs of inspection and transportation.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman— The Clerk rend as follows:

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. MANN. I reserve a point of order.

Mr. KAHN. I was going to offer an amendment.

Mr. MANN. It is subject to a point of order.

Mr. HAY. It is immediately available. Mr. MANN. That is what I wanted to know. Mr. MANN. That is what I wanted to know Mr. HAY. I can explain to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. What is the reason for carrying every year a provision here making this appropriation immediately available? can understand the reason for carrying it over so as to make it available for the second fiscal year.

Mr. HAY. I will say to the gentleman that Gen. Crozier stated to the committee that he wanted to have that made immediately available for two years—

Because these articles are of rather slower manufacture than anything I have mentioned to you thus far. The gun and the carriage make a considerable structure, and the capacities of the plants are not very great; and as far as the manufacture at the Rock Island Arsenal is concerned, where a good many of the carriages and limbers and caissons would be made, I would like to have the manufacture continuous, just as I mentioned with the automatic rifles.

And he goes on further and says it would be much cheaper to do it in that way than to begin and have to stop.

Mr. MANN. That is his point of view, but that gives no information, unfortunately.

Mr. HAY. I think it does give information.

Mr. MANN. I can understand why you sometimes want to make an appropriation immediately available. I can not understand why you want to make every year the same appropriation immediately available. They have an appropriation for the current fiscal year for this amount that runs until the end of the next fiscal year. They have that now in their hands to expend. but they have not expended it yet. Why should they commence now making immediately available an appropriation which will not run for more than two years?

Mr. HAY Because, as I understand the purpose of it, it is to permit them to continue with the manufacture without any

Mr. MANN. They do not let any contract on this, do they?
Mr. HAY. No; they are manufactured at the Rock Island
Arsenal, as I understand it.

Mr. MANN. They have money enough under the current appropriation to run until the 30th of next June. That appropriation is made available until the end of the next fiscal year after this Now, there is no excuse in a department insisting every year that some appropriation shall run for more than two years when they do not have to make a contract.

Mr. HAY. I can only state the reason given by the Chief of Ordnance, which seems to be a sufficient one.

Mr. MANN. I shall not insist on the point of order, but unless the Chief of Ordnance next year gives a better reason for that, and I am here, I shall take it out on the point of order.

The gentleman can take it out now if he wants

Mr. MANN. No. I am saying this for the benefit of the Chief of Ordnance. If he will reason, he will not do it. I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by striking out, on page 48, line 3, the words "seven hundred and seventy thousand" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "one million." The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 48, line 3, strike out the words "seven hundred and seventy thousand" and insert the words "one million."

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, the estimate before the committee for the purposes set forth in this item was $1,500,000. The committee cut it to the figure that was carried in the Army appropriation bill last year, but the evidence before the committee shows that in field artillery our Army is woefully deficient. It is the one great point of weakness in our military force. The Chief of Ordnance, who is a very conservative officer, says that field artillery is also the one war material that it takes a longer time to manufacture than any other used for military purposes, and that at the present rate of manufacture it will take 13 years to furnish the Army, including the Organized Militia, with the proper number of field pieces to which it is entitled under its present organization.

This item refers especially to the field pieces that are to be furnished to the Organized Militia. In the hearings, at page 663, volume 2, Gen. Crozier said:

The subject of field artillery is the most pressing one we have. In regard to all of the other items of which I have spoken to you this morning and yesterday, although we have not all we need of some of them, we are not very badly off; that is to say, we are going along reasonably, and we are reasonably near to a proper supply; but with respect to field artillery and field-artillery ammunition, we are not reasonably near to a proper supply. I have been saying that for several years past. We are not going fast enough in this matter. In everything else I think we are going fast enough.

Now, that is a fair statement from a fair officer, and in view of the fact that it will take so many years to manufacture these guns for the Organized Militia upon the basis of the amount of the appropriation provided in this bill, I hope that an increase in the item will be made in order that the field guns may be turned out more expeditiously, so that the Organized Militia may be properly equipped.

Mr. HAY, Mr. Chairman, this item appeared for the first time in the bill last year, and it was then stated and agreed that an appropriation of $770,000 was enough to begin this work with. The committee thought that there was no reason for going beyond that sum this year, particularly as it appears from the statement of Gen. Crozier that there were not enough batteries of the Organized Militia to use the guns if we made them. That statement will be found on page 668 of the hearings. Gen. Crozier there says:

A good many of the States have batteries organized on paper already, but they are only on paper, and just how many such batteries there are I do not know.

We did not think it necessary to provide guns for batteries that were only on paper.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment, to be inserted after the word "transportation," on line 19, page 48.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the close of line 19, page 48, insert the following: "Ammunition for Field Artillery for the Organized Militia: For procuring reserve ammunition for Field Artillery guns of the militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, $500,000."

Mr. HAY. I make a point of order on that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman reserve the point of order?
Mr. HAY. I will reserve the point of order.
Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, the evidence adduced before the committee showed that there is practically no ammunition for serving the Field Artillery of the Organized Militia. The department itself says that it can manufacture only about 300 rounds of ammunition a day. That would furnish approximately one shot for every gun to which the Field Artillery of the Organized Militia is entitled. In other words, if the factory of the Government is to run right straight along, it could provide only one shot a day for each one of the field pieces to which the Organized Militia is entitled. The members of the committee can readily understand how long it is going to take to get together an amount of reserve ammunition for the field guns of the Organized Militia that will make those organizations effective in time of war.

I sincerely hope that the gentleman from Virginia will not make a point of order on the paragraph, but will allow the department to begin the manufacture of this powder on an adequate scale, in order that the Organized Militia of this country may be placed in a position to go into action if ever the country should become involved in war.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia withdraw his point of order?

Mr. HAY. I make the point of order.
The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 2. That hereafter all enlistments in the Army shall be made for the term of five years, and for all enlistments hereafter accomplished five years shall be counted as an enlistment period in computing continuous-service pay: Provided, That, in the absence of express authority hereafter given by Congress, the uniforms of officers and enlisted men of the Army shall hereafter be and remain as prescribed by War Department orders in force on the 25th day of May, 1911, except for such changes as can be made in the uniforms of enlisted men without loss or additional expense to the Government.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, I will make a point of order against that entire paragraph, but I reserve it, so that we can discuss it.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman had better make his point of order.

Mr. PRINCE. Very well, I make the point of order.

Mr. HAY. The same question was discussed the other day. Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph consists of two parts. A point of order is made against the entire paragraph. One part of the paragraph is:

Provided, That, in the absence of express authority hereafter given by Congress, the uniforms of officers and enlisted men of the Army shall hereafter be and remain as prescribed by War Department orders in force on the 25th day of May, 1911, except for such changes as can be made in the uniforms of enlisted men without loss or additional expense to the Government.

That of itself would certainly be subject to a point of order. There is no pretense that it is a reduction of expenditure. Even if the Chair could hold the first part of the paragraph, in reference to enlistments, in order, it does not seem to me that that would carry with it another provision which is out of order. I believe the uniform ruling is that where a paragraph contains a provision which is out of order, then a point of order to the entire paragraph is good.

Of course it is quite true that if the Chair thinks the first part of the paragraph is in order, that could be brought in by amendment if the entire paragraph should go out.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I have only to say that this provision, by preventing changes in the uniforms of officers and enlisted men, will result in a saving of cost. Every time a change is made in the uniforms of enlisted men, the Government necessarily is put to an expense, because the parts of the uniform which are rejected become obsolete, and are a loss by reason thereof. Therefore this proviso does tend to reduce and will reduce expenses, and if it does, I assume that it is in

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the Chair is a great deal wiser in reference to uniforms than the rest of us if he can tell what In reference to uniforms than the rest of us if he can tell what the effect of a change of uniform will be in advance of that change. I not only can imagine, but I know that in the past some changes of uniform have been made which saved money to the Government. There have been a number of cases where a decided change was made in the interest of economy. It is morely a problematical matter whether a change of wife. purely a problematical matter whether a change of uniform is going to be an expense to the Government or a saving to the Government.

Mr. KAHN. If the gentleman will yield, the last change made in the uniform was in the interest of economy. It did cut down the expense of the various articles of clothing that made up the uniform of the enlisted men. If this proviso does anything it prevents the department from making further economies on the uniforms of enlisted men.

Mr. MANN. I will say frankly to the gentleman that, so far as I am concerned, I would have no objection to a proper provision upon this subject; but here is the result: In this bill is a provision for a supply corps and for the coordination of other branches of the service, both of which will require changes of uniform to carry out the provision, if it shall be enacted into law. Before those provisions could be put into effect and before new uniforms could be provided for these new branches of the service, it would require the War Department to come to Congress and ask permission to do it. Now, some gentlemen may believe it is an offhand matter to get legislation; that when the Secretary wants to have a new uniform he telephones the Speaker or the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs that he would like to have some legislation enacted before night; but we know that that is not the way things are done in this Capitol.

Mr. GARNER. If there was such a pressing necessity for it we could enact it before night.

Mr. MANN. Yes; if everybody was absent and nobody objected. Now, the result will not only be an expense to the Government in preventing the proper making of uniforms, or the right to change to a uniform which will cost less, but will probably prevent uniforms being provided at all in some cases.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I believe that this legisla-tion will effect a saving in the matter of uniforms supplied to the men by the Government. With each change of uniform a great deal of material is condemned and abandoned, just as in each change of equipment for horses, or for any other paraphernalia of the Army. It involves loss because a certain amount of stuff is condemned and abandoned. But this amendment, which is particularly desired by the officers of the Army, at least all with whom I have spoken, will effect a saving for Frequent changes of uniform for the officers devolve upon them a considerable expense that they do not like to incur. For years I have heard them complain of the fact that there were frequent and unnecessary changes in uniform, and many of them have said that they hoped Congress would enact some legislation to prevent it. It is legislation in the interest of the officers to obviate frequent changes of uniform. I think it is economical and wise, and I believe it is in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will reserve his decision on this point.

Mr. HAY. I will ask the Chair if he is prepared to rule upon the five-year-term portion of the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Is any discussion desired upon that portion of the paragraph? Mr. TILSON. Yes. Mr. HAY. Go ahead.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, as was stated by me the other day, when a point of order was pending against the amendment proposing a reduction of the Cavalry, it seems to me that it must appear on the face of the paragraph in the bill that it makes a retrenchment in expenditure, and that it must not be a matter for proof or argument. Section 2 of Rule XXI. forbidding legislation on an appropriation, excepts from the prohibition of that rule:

Such as being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of amounts of money covered by the bill.

The proposed paragraph does not purport to reduce numbers or compensation of anyone; nor does it purport to reduce any item or amount carried in the bill. Then if the paragraph be in order it must be under the proviso which reads as follows:

That it shall be in order further to amend such bill upon the report of the committee or any joint commission authorized by law, or the House members of any such commission having jurisdiction of the subject matter of such amendment, which amendment being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench expenditures.

This proviso authorizes only amendments to the bill to be in order upon the report of the committee, and it is questionable whether or not it authorizes a committee to report in the bill itself matter otherwise obnoxious to the rules.

Even if the Chair should hold that under the proviso the committee may report in the bill itself such matter as it would be in order to report by way of amendment, still it must ap-pear from the paragraph itself without extraneous aid or assistance that it results in a retrenchment in expenditures. must appear on the face of the bill itself that it will work that result. If it is a matter of debate, if it is a matter of argument, if it requires evidence to prove it, then it does not appear from the bill itself that it would work the retrenchment, and would not be in order.

It seems to me that if the Holman rule is to be preserved, if it is to serve a beneficent purpose, it must, for illustration, enable the House, whenever it desires to reduce a salary, even though it has been fixed by law, the reduction being apparent on the face of the bill; but if each time an amendment is proposed we have to go into the realm of debate, argument, and evidence, then it seems to me it will so involve us in fog and uncertainty that it will be necessary to dispense with the good features of the rule in order to escape from inextricable confusion. Upon the ground, Mr. Chairman, that it does not appear on the face of the paragraph that it will make a retrenchment in expenditures and in view of the actual contention that it would not do so if enacted into law, I contend that it is not

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, section 2, as my colleague stated, consists of a main proposition and a proviso. Now, take the main proposition and see whether it falls under the provision of the Holman rule. The Holman rule says:

Such as being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench penditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers expenditures by the roof the United States.

First, by reduction of the number. The Army remains the same; there is no reduction in the number of men and none in the commissioned force of the Army, so far as section 2 is concerned, and none will result from it.

Reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States.

Reduction of the commissioned officers, none; reduction of the enlisted men, none. Why do I say "none"? Because the enlisted man gets the same pay that he gets now. He serves for five years at the same rate of pay that he gets now. Following as a sequence of his five years' enlistment, it is contended by one side that he will remain a permanent part of the Army. His time will be nearer toward that when he retires with 30 years' service. If he serves 5 years, or a portion of that time in a foreign service, it is double time—it is 10 years. Three 5-year enlistments might give him 30 years of service. So the chances are decidedly in favor of the man getting onto the retired list earlier than he would with a shorter enlistment. The number that will get upon the retired list will be largely increased over the number that would be retired under the three-year enlistment.

Now, whether that is true or not may be a question of argument, but on the Cavalry proposition I contended the same number of enlisted men remained, but the chairman said that where we now have 15 regiments we will have 10. That, on its face, was a reduction.

That looked plausible, and the chairman ruled, basing his ruling upon that. But there is nothing in this section that shows that a single solitary enlisted man will be reduced in compen-There is nothing that shows that the authorized strength of the Army will be reduced, commissioned officer or noncommissioned officer. It seems to me that portion of it is subject to a point of order, because it does not fall within the meaning of the Holman rule.

Suppose the chairman should be inclined to hold that that was a debatable question, that it might reduce expenditures, and that that was a question that the House might determine in its wisdom, and should leave it to the determination of the House. Can it be possible that, having objected to the entire paragraph, the portion beginning with the proviso, which is a part of the section which is out of order, which does not fall within the provision of the Holman rule, can make the other in order? I think it has been well presented by my colleague, the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann], that this portion is subject to a point of order; and if a part of the paragraph, is subject to a point of order; then the whole the paragraph is subject to a point of order, then the whole paragraph goes out. I submit that this section does not fall within the provisions of the Holman rule, and I confidently expect a decision from the Chair that section 2 as a whole is subject to a point of order.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to repeat what I have already said about the proviso. I understand the position of the gentleman from Illinois is that section 2, referring to the five-year enlistment, would not operate to save anything in expenditures. It seems to me manifest on its face that a five-year enlistment must necessarily be cheaper to the Government than a three-year enlistment, because under the law, with which the Chairman is familiar, there is a provision for a bonus of three months' pay for reenlistment.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAY. Yes. Mr. PRINCE. If it is a matter of argument that it falls within the Holman rule-

Mr. HAY. But it is not a matter of argument. I am simply stating the facts.

Mr. PRINCE. The gentleman says it appears on the face of it without argument?

Mr. HAY. It does, yes, I say manifestly, taken in connection with the law providing for continuous-service pay and a bonus for reenlistment, that a long term must cost the Government less than a short term. There is no room for speculation about it at all. Under the law a man who enlists for three years, if he reenlists at the end of that time is paid a bonus of $45. If he reenlists his pay is increased by reason of continuous service. So that I say on its face, without any speculation, taking it in connection with the law providing for enlist-ments in the Army, it must necessarily operate to reduce ex-Therefore it is in order. penses.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will dispose of this at the next session of the committee.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, before we rise I would like to have some agreement with the gentleman from Illinois about the time which we will devote to this paragraph in the event the Chair holds it to be in order. I understand him to agree that we would take two hours and a half, one hour and a quarter to be controlled by himself and one hour and a quarter to be controlled by myself.

Mr. MANN. Suppose the gentleman makes this agreement, that if the Chair holds the paragraph in order, or holds in order any amendment which may be offered in case the Chair holds the paragraph out of order, that then the debate upon the paragraph or the amendment and all amendments thereto be limited to two hours and a half.

That is right. Mr. HAY.

Mr. PRINCE. That is satisfactory.
Mr. HAY. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that in the event the Chair holds the paragraph in order, or if the paragraph be held out of order and the Chair holds any amendment I may offer to be in order, that all debate upon that paragraph or on that amendment and all amendments thereto be limited to two hours and a half, one hour and a quarter to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE] and one hour and a quarter to be controlled by myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that in the contingency indicated by him debate shall be limited to two hours and a half, one-half of that time to be controlled by himself and one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 18956, the Army appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles, when the Speaker

H. R. 16676. An act to authorize the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway to construct a bascule bridge across the Calumet River at South Chicago;

second Street, in said city; H. R. 14484. An act to amend an act approved February 24, 1911, authorizing J. W. Vance and others to construct and maintain a dam and tunnel on the Big Bend of the James River in Stone County, Mo., to create electric power; and H. J. Res. 194. Joint resolution granting the temporary use of certain lands in the Presidio of San Francisco and Fort Mason (Cal.) Military Reservations to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Co.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 4109. An act to restore the name of Oregon Avenue, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bills:

H. R. 16693. An act to extend the time for the completion of the municipal bridge at St. Louis, Mo.;

H. R. 16677. An act to authorize Butler and Stoddard Counties of Missouri to construct a bridge across the St. Francis River at Hodges Ferry, Mo.; and

H. R. 17232. An act to authorize Taney County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the White River at Branson, Mo.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent, the Committee on Appropriations was discharged from the further consideration of the bill S. 295, an act to adjust claims of certain settlers in Sherman County, Oreg., and the same was referred to the Committee on Claims.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned to meet to-morrow, Wednesday, February 14, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Attorney General submitting estimate of appropriation for salary of district judges for Arizona and New Mexico (H. Doc. No. 537) Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, transmitting part 2 of the annual report of the Commissioner of Lighthouses for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911 (H. Doc. No. 538); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of Nantucket Sound, Mass. (H. Doc. No. 536); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. JONES (for Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas), from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1043) to correct the military record of James Anderson, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 354) thereon.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 4846) to authorize the Northern Pacific Railway Co. to construct a bridge across the canal connecting the waters of Puget Sound with Lake Washington at Seattle, in the State of Washington, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 356) thereon.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the amendment submitted by himself on the 30th ultimo, proposing to appropriate $15,000 for the necessary expenses incurred and compensation for services rendered under the direction of the Secretary of State in the examination and preparation of cases involving the use, distribution, or diversion of waters and other questions or matters of difference covered by the treaty of January 11, 1909, between the United States and Great Britain, etc., intended to be proposed to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, reported it with an amendment, and moved that it be printed, and, with the accompanying letter from the Secretary of State, referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

ASSISTANT APPRAISER AT PORT OF BOSTON.

Mr. LODGE. I report back favorably, from the Committee on Finance, with an amendment the bill (S. 275) authorizing the appointment of an assistant appraiser at the port of Boston, and I submit a report (No. 352) thereon. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment of the committee was, in line 7, before the word "rank," to strike out the word "relative."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRISTOW. I ask that the bill be read again. I did not understand it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read as amended.

The Secretary read the bill as amended, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the special examiner of drugs, medicines, and chemicals in the district of Boston and Charlestown, Mass., shall, in addition to his duties as special examiner, for which he shall be appointed with special reference to his qualifications, perform the duties and hold the rank of an assistant appraiser.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to make the special examiner of drugs, medicines, and chemicals an assistant appraiser at the port of Boston."

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the report of the committee be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the report submitted this day was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. Lodge, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following report, to accompany Senate bill 275, authorizing the appointment of an assistant appraiser at the port of Boston, with the following amendment: In line 7 omit the word "relative."

This measure has the approval of the Treasury Department with the amendment suggested, and the Committee on Finance therefore recommend that the bill do pass as thus amended.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, July 17, 1911.

Hon. Boies Penrose, United States Senate.

My Dear Serator: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 6th ultimo, inclosing a copy of the bill (S. 275) authorizing the appointment of an assistant appraiser at the port of Boston, in which you ask my opinion in regard to its merits. In reply thereto I have to inform you that the above-mentioned bill has my approval. It is suggested, however, that the word "relative," in the seventh line of the bill, be omitted.

Respectfully, Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary.

CUSTOMS BUILDING AT NEWBURYPORT, MASS.

Mr. LODGE. I report back favorably from the Committee on Finance, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, the bill (S. 278) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to give to the city of Newburyport, Mass., the United States customs building in that city and the land upon which it stands, and I submit a report (No. 353) thereon. It is a small bill, and I ask for its present consideration also.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary. The Committee on Finance report to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be transferred, as a gift to the city of Newburyport, Mass., the United States customs building in that city and the southwesterly 110 feet of the land on which it stands, and, by quitclaim deed, to relinquish and convey the title thereof to the said city of Newburyport; and the Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized, in his discretion, to sell and convey the remainder of said site (being the portion northeast of said southwesterly 110 feet of land to be given to the said city and extending from thence to the new harbor line of the Merrimac River) in such manner and upon such terms as he may deem to be to the best interests of the United States and to deposit the proceeds of such sale in the Treasury as a miscellaneous receipt.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I should like to hear from the author of the bill something about the reason why we should make a donation of this land.

Mr. LODGE. The customhouse at Newburyport has been abandoned by the Government. It is not occupied by Government any longer. The office has been abolished. T is only a deputy for the port of Boston. The building is closed.

It is a building that was constructed about 100 years ago. It is a very interesting building historically and a very hand-some building architecturally. The land is the only portion of value, and the land is reserved to the Government to sell. The Government will sell the land; but it was very much desired by the city that the building should not be destroyed, for which the Government could get little or nothing except for the old material.

The matter was referred to the Secretary of the Treasury. who recommended that the arrangement be made which is provided for in the bill. In fact, the bill was drafted at the request of the committee by the Secretary of the Treasury. It is simply for the preservation of the old building.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, August 10, 1911.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON FINANCE,
United States Senate.

Sin: I have the konor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 6th ultimo, requesting my opinion of the merits of S. 278, "au-thorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to give to the city of Newbury-port, in Massachusetts, the United States Customs Bullding in that city and the land upon which it stands."

From the information before the department it appears that this building is not needed for the accommodation of the public service at Newburyport. The post office is in rented quarters because, as the department understands, it is not practicable to properly accommodate it in the present public building; nor can this building be so arranged as to fittingly house the postal service.

The customs receipts for the fiscal year 1910 amounted to only about $700, and during the same period the expenses of operating the building (custodian's force, fuel, lights, and water, and miscellaneous items for the care of the customs house) were about $700. The collector of customs resigned because his compensation for the year amounted to only $21. Now, the customs business at this point is so small that it has been placed in the hands of a deputy collector, who reports through the collector of customs at Boston, and it is stated that it would be much better to rent suitable quarters for his office than to keep this Government building in operation. It is understood that when the new Federal building is constructed on the site contracted for in Newburyport, space will be provided therein for all Federal officials stationed there. It is the judgment of this department that this old building should cease to be used for Government business.

The bill in question is sufficient for the purpose intended, but in view of the fact that under existing legislation the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell and convey the building in question and the site thereof—which site extends a considerable distance in the rear of the building—it is believed that it would be better if the bill were to declare the gift of the building and the southwesterly 110 feet of the land on which it stands to the city of Newburyport, Mass., and authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to convey the title thereto to the said city and, also, to sell

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPOSED PENSION LEGISLATION.

Mr. McCUMBER. From the Committee on Pensions I report back the bill (H. R. 1) granting a service pension to certain defined veterans of the Civil War and the War with Mexico, amended by a substitute, and I submit a report (No. 355)

I think it is proper to state in connection with this report that the Committee on Pensions substituted for House bill No. 1 the provisions of Senate bill 4320, modified by subdividing the years into periods of six months, and so modified I report it in place of House bill No. 1.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. McCUMBER. Undoubtedly there will be considerable demand for copies of this bill. I therefore ask unanimous consent that 10,000 extra copies of the bill itself may be printed. I shall not ask for the printing of any additional copies of the report at the present time, but may be compelled to do so later on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent that 10,000 additional copies of the bill shall be printed. Is there objection? The Chair hears

Mr. CURTIS. I ask consent that I may be permitted to hand in a report on behalf of the minority of the committee some time during the day. (S. Rept. 355, pt. 2.) The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave will be granted

Mr. McCUMBER. I will suggest that it would be proper and satisfactory to the Senate that both the majority report and the views of the minority be printed in one document.

Mr. CURTIS. That is very satisfactory.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That order will be made.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH OF SUTTON, W. VA.

Mr. CRAWFORD, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 5230) for the relief of the Baptist Church of Sutton, W. Va., reported the following resolution (S. Res. 217), and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 5230) entitled "A bill for the relief of the Baptist Church of Sutton, W. Va.," now pending in the Senate be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; and the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

REGULATION OF IMMIGRATION.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the bill (S. 3175) to regulate the immigration of aliens to and the residence of aliens in the United States, being Order of Business 190 on the calendar, be recommitted to the Committee on Immigration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill is recommitted to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. LODGE. I now report from the Committee on Immigration the bill (S. 3175) to regulate the immigration of aliens to and the residence of aliens in the United States. I make the report with some additional amendments agreed to by the committee, and for the convenience of the Senate when the bill is taken up I ask that the bill retain the place on the calendar of the bill heretofore reported by me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, that order

ASSISTANT CLERK TO THE COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Mr. BRIGGS. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back with an amendment Senate resolution 173, submitted by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] December 20, 1911, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment was to strike out after the word "Senate" the words "until otherwise provided by law," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ an assistant clerk, at a salary of $1,800 per annum, said salary to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

MESSENGER TO COMMITTEE ON CUBAN RELATIONS.

Mr. BRIGGS, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred Senate resolution 208, submitted by Mr. Page on the 5th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved. That the Committee on Cuban Relations is hereby authorized to employ a messenger, at a salary of $1,200 per annum, to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON MINES AND MINING.

Mr. BRIGGS. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred Senate resolution 211, submitted by the Senator from Washington [Mr. Poindexter] on the 7th instant, to report it favorably with an amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment was, in line 5, after the word "had," to insert the words "during the present session of Congress," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Mines and Mining, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized during the Sixty-second Congress to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to employ stenographers from time to time to report such hearings as may be had during the present session of Congress in connection with any subject that may be pending before said committee, and to have the testimony and proceedings of such hearings printed for the use of the committee. The expenses of such hearings shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and said committee and subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. BRIGGS. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred Senate resolution 213, submitted by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Overman] on the 8th instant, to report it favorably with amendments, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendments were, in line 4, after the word "stenographers," to insert the words "from time to time," and in line 5, after the word "had," to insert "during the present session of Congress," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Woman Suffrage, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized, during the Sixty-second Congress, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to employ stenographers from time to time to report such hearings as may be had during the present session of Congress in connection with any subject that may be pending before said committee, and to have the testimony and proceedings of such hearings printed for the use of the committee. The expense of such hearings shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and said committee and subcommittees thereof may sit during the sessions of the Senate.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JONES:

A bill (S. 5272) appropriating $75,000 for the protection of Valdez, Alaska, from glacial floods; to the Committee on Commerce.

Ordered, That leave be granted for the withdrawal from the fles of the Senate of the memorial submitted in the name of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Perth Amboy, in the State of New Jersey, reia-tive to the pending arbitration treaties, said memorial having been sub-mitted to the Senate on January 30 of the present session.

RAILROADS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HEYBURN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 218), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be directed to advise the Senate of the character, extent, and assessed valuation of the property owned by each of the railroad companies, including street railway companies, operating in the District of Columbia, and the amount of taxes paid by each of said companies during the last calendar year.

SHERMAN ANTITRUST LAW.

Mr. RAYNER. Mr. President, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read. The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 219), as follows:

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 219), as follows:

Whereas the Supreme Court of the United States in several decisions that it has lately rendered construing the law known as the Sherman antitrust law has defined what constitutes a combination in restraint of trade, and as a result of its interpretation each case hereafter arising under said law will depend upon the facts that surround it, so that it may occur that the various Federal circuits might arrive at different conclusions in relation to the same state of facts, thus creating doubt and uncertainty as to what constitutes a violation of the law; and Whereas the said decisions of the Supreme Court have shown the necessity of adopting a positive and certain standard by which the violation of the law can be definitely ascertained by the courts, so that legitimate business enterprise and competition shall not suffer at the hands of combinations whose purpose it is to restrain trade and monopolize the business interests of the country: Now be it

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee of the Senate be, and it is hereby, directed to report to the Senate what changes in the law, if any, it can recommend, so that by supplemental legislation the existing statute can be strengthened so that it may be clearly defined what acts shall constitute a violation of the law, and what further provisions, if any, are necessary to protect fair competition in interstate trade and commerce and prevent combinations in restraint thereof from monopolizing the business interests of the country: Provided, That no expense shall be incurred in carrying out the terms of this resolution, the intent hereof being to obtain a report of the committee as to what changes and improvements in the existing law may be deemed advisable to effect the purposes and objects herein indicated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, that is a very complicated resolution to come to a determination upon from one reading. I should like to have it go over and be printed.

Mr. RAYNER. Will the Senator permit me to make a statement?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.
Mr. RAYNER. Mr. President, there is nothing complicated about the resolution. Of course, read in the way it has been, I suppose the Senator from Massachusetts really did not catch the drift of the resolution. It is a very simple proposition. It is merely a direction to the Judiciary Committee, without any is merely a direction to the Judiciary Committee, without any expense, to inquire into this fact. The resolution reads:

That the Judiciary Committee of the Senate be, and it is hereby, directed to report to the Senate what changes in the law, if any, it can recommend, so that by supplemental legislation the existing statute can be strengthened so that it may be clearly defined what acts shall constitute a violation of the law, and what further provisions, if any, are necessary to protect fair competition in interstate trade and commerce and prevent combinations in restraint thereof from monopolizing the business interests of the country: Provided, That no expense shall be incurred in carrying out the terms of this resolution, the intent hereof being to obtain a report of the committee as to what changes and improvements in the existing law may be deemed advisable to effect the purposes and objects herein indicated.

It will be observed that there is to be no expense attending

It will be observed that there is to be no expense attending the investigation. The Judiciary Committee now has before it quite a number of bills upon this subject, and instead of acting upon those bills separately this resolution is merely to enable the Judiciary Committee to examine this question and to report what changes, if any, it deems proper to advise in reference to the subject matter of the resolution. It merely provides for an inquiry by the Judiciary Committee. I can not see why any objection should lie against the resolution, which asks the Judiciary Committee, without expense, to inquire into a fact and to then report the results of its investigation to the Senate.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, I will say that the Committee on Interstate Commerce has been engaged for over two months in investigating this very subject. It has taken something like 3,000 pages of testimony, and is now engaged in making the very investigation which is provided for by the resolution. I do not see why the resolution should be referred to another committee when it is the proper province of the Interstate Commerce Committee to consider this question.

Mr. RAYNER. Mr. President, I am aware of that fact. The Committee on Interstate Commerce is examining facts. It is not proposed that the Judiciary Committee shall examine any facts at all, but under this resolution that is the proper committee to report what changes in the law, if any, are necessary. That is a question which does not come within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Committee. Bills in reference to this matter are before the Judiciary Committee now, and, it being a question of law, it is properly referable to the Judiciary

Mr. RAYNER. If the Senator will allow me, I wish to say that the Sherman law itself came from the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. LODGE. I know that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and, under the rule, the resolution will lie over for one day.

DRAINAGE OF THE UPPER YAZOO DELTA (S. DOC. NO. 307)

Mr. WILLIAMS. I present an address on the Drainage of the Upper Yazoo Delta, by C. G. Elliott, chief of drainage investigations, United States Department of Agriculture, delivered before the semiannual meeting of the Delta Publicity and Improvement Association, December 6, 1911, at Clarksdale, Miss. Accompanying the address is a map of the Yazoo Delta country. I move that the address and accompanying map be printed as a Senate document.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask the Senator from Mississippi what is the map and his exact request in regard to it?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is a map of the Yazoo Delta country, where this drainage project is proposed to apply. Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator ask that it be printed as a public document or that it be printed in the RECORD? Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask that it be printed as a Senate docu-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the order is made.

SENATOR FROM WISCONSIN.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I gave notice yesterday that on February 20 I would call up the question of the election of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Stephenson]. I was re-quested by telephone last night by a member of the committee to change the date to February 21, because of the necessary absence on the 20th of that Member. I have no objection to changing the date to the 21st of February.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I understood the Senator from Idaho to state last night that the testimony in this case had been delivered at the offices of the various Senators. inquired when I reached my office, and was informed that no copies of the testimony had been delivered there.

Mr. HEYBURN. I sent them right over to the Senator last night immediately upon being informed of that fact.

Mr. BRISTOW. I inquired as to why they had not been sent, and I was advised that the index had not been completed; that the copies would be first sent, and that the index would

Mr. HEYBURN. I sent the index to the Senator; the digest index accompanied the testimony. They have been sent out to each Senator, and last evening, upon being requested by the Senator from Kansas to furnish him copies, I sent copies of the testimony with the digest index by personal messenger to his committee.

Mr. BRISTOW. I understood the Senator made the statement yesterday that this testimony had been delivered to the ment yesterday that this testimony had been derivered to the various Senators some three or four weeks ago.

Mr. HEYBURN. I instructed it to be delivered.

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not know whether or not it is the Senator's purpose to bring this question to a definite conclusion so early as next Wednesday, but I want to look into the matter with some care. I do not in any way desire to delay the ultimate decision, but I do not want it to be pressed until I can have some time to inform myself as to the evidence which was before the subcommittee.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I sincerely hope the Senator from Kansas will find time between now and the 21st instant to make his examination, because it is a matter of justice to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Stephenson] that this question should be disposed of. That will give the Senator a week. The digest index is very complete and is in itself probably as full a consideration of the testimony as the Senator would make under any circumstances.

Mr. BRISTOW. I realize that the time named is a week off, and that if Senators had nothing else to do within the week they might familiarize themselves more or less with the testimony; but I desire to say now that while I will not in any way seek to unduly delay the decision upon the resolution, I shall insist that time be given to those of us who want to look into the testimony to have an opportunity to do so.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I had taken into considera-

Mr. LEA. Mr. President—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. HEYBURN. Yes. Mr. LEA. Do I understand the Senator to state that he will ask for a vote on the 21st instant?

Mr. HEYBURN. I said I should ask for the consideration of the matter at that time, and when we are through with considering it we will vote.

Mr. LEA. That we are to vote on that legislative day?

Mr. HEYBURN. Yes. Mr. LEA. Mr. President, yesterday I stated that the report of the minority members of the committee had been delayed on account of the absence from the city of one Senator who is to join in that report. We hope to be able to file the report to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not understand that the Senator from Idaho had made a request for a vote on a particular day. The Senator had given notice that he would call the matter up.

Mr. LEA. I asked the Senator the question, and I so understood him.

Mr. HEYBURN. I gave notice that I would ask to take the matter up for consideration. The Senate at that time, of course, will express its wish in regard to the question, but it should be disposed of at an early date. I am entirely out of sympathy with the method of procedure that has obtained in one other case, at least, dragging out a question involving the title of a Member of this body indefinitely; and, so far as the rules of the Senate will permit, this being a question of the highest privilege, I intend to press it for determination, and I shall not voluntarily yield to any appeals that will result in stringing it out.

Mr. LEA. I heartily concur in the suggestion that an early decision of this question be had; but I do ask that no date be set for voting on it until the minority members of the committee shall have had an opportunity to present to the Senate their report.

THE CALENDAR.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed. The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

The bill (S. 2518) to provide for raising the Volunteer forces of the United States in time of actual or threatened war was announced as first in order.

Mr. WARREN. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over. The bill (8, 2925) providing for a Confederate naval monument in the Vicksburg National Military Park was announced as next in order

Mr. HEYBURN. I ask that that bill go over.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I give notice that the next time the calendar is taken up and the request is made by the Senator from Idaho that this bill go over, I shall then move that the bill be considered notwithstanding any objection. I do not want to do so to-day, because I did not give notice to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, a question of order. When we are proceeding under Rule VIII, I understand that we deal only with unobjected cases?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Oh, no; the Senator is mistaken about that. The Chair would suggest that the Senator from Mississippi has the right under the rule to move to proceed to the consideration of a bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I so understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over at the request of the Senator from Idaho.

The concurrent resolution (S. C. Res. 4) instructing the Attorney General of the United States to prosecute the Standard Oil Co. and the American Tobacco Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. POMERENE. I ask that the resolution may go over.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The concurrent resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 290) to authorize the appointment of dental surgeons in the United States Navy was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRISTOW. I ask that the bill may go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over. The bill (S. 4314) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will inquire of the Senator from North Dakota if he desires pension bills on the calendar to go over?

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask that they may go over to-day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pension bills on the calendar will be passed over as they are reached.

The bill (S. 2493) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to make an examination of certain claims of the State of Missouri was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that bill go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over. The resolution (S. Res. 176) requesting the President to make certain inquiries of the Governments of Great Britain and France touching the arbitration of justiclable controversies or disputes was announced as next in order.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will go over. The next two bills on the calendar, Senate bills 4723 and 4624, being pension bills, will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3175) to regulate the immigration of aliens to and the residence of aliens in the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. LODGE. Let that bill go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over. The bill (S. 2243) to correct the military record of John L. O'Mara and grant him an honorable discharge was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that bill go over.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, let the bill be again read. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be again read. The Secretary again read the bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I object to the consideration of that bill. Let it go over.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, that is a very important bill, and I see that a number of members of the Finance Committee are absent. I therefore ask that it may go over.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

DISPOSAL OF INDIAN TOWN-SITE LANDS.

The bill (S. 256) affecting the sale and disposal of public or Indian lands in town sites, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been heretofore read. The amendments reported by the committee will be stated.

The Secretary. The amendments reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs were, on page 1, line 5, after the word "acres," to strike out the words "out of" and to insert " for"; "in line 7, after the word "withdrawn," to insert the words "for town-site purposes"; and on page 2, line 8, before the words "per centum," to strike out "twenty-five" and to insert "twenty," so as to make the bill read:

"twenty," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be set apart and reserved for school, park, and other purposes not more than 10 acres for each quarter section of public or Indian lands which may have been heretofore reserved and withdrawn for town-site purposes and not disposed of or which may hereafter be reserved and withdrawn for town-site purposes under any law of the United States authorizing such withdrawal, unless the provisions of such laws shall be repugnant hereto, and patents shall be issued for the lands so set apart and reserved for school, park, and other public purposes to the municipality legally charged with the care and custody of lands donated for such purposes. The purchased price of all town lots sold under the supervision of said Secretary in town sites reserved and withdrawn as above mentioned shall be paid at such times and in such installments as he may direct, and he shall cause not more than 20 per cent of the net proceeds arising from such sales to be set apart and expended under his direction in the construction of schoolhouses or other public buildings or municipal improvements in the town site in which such lots are located.

The amendments were agreed to

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I do not wish to object at this stage of the proceedings unless I find that I am correct in my understanding; but from the reading of the bill I should say that it seems to embody the exact provision the Senate objected to and condemned the other day in a bill reported by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GAMBLE], with reference to taking a portion of the proceeds of the sales of Indian lands and donating them to the town sites for public buildings, schoolhouses, and so forth, and also withdrawing 10 acres of such lands and devoting them to such public purpose Am I correct in that understanding? I think the Senator from Utah reported the bill, and possibly he can give me the information desired.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I was not present when that was done, and I know nothing about it.

Mr. BACON. Does the Senator mean he was not present when that bill was acted upon?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If I was present, it escaped my atten-

I have no recollection of it.

Mr. BACON. I do not think I am mistaken in my recollection of that bill as corresponding with the provisions of this bill, except that this seems to be a general bill, and that was a particular one. This relates generally to such matters, while the provisions of the bill to which I refer related to the withdrawal and sale of certain lands in South Dakota.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Gamble] is not present to tell me whether or not I am correct; but, as I recall, the provisions of that bill authorized the laying out of certain town sites, and devoted a certain percentage of the proceeds of such sales—I think it was nearly 20 per cent—to the erection of public buildings, schoolhouses, and so forth, and they also set apart 10 acres of the land for a public park. That was distinctly objected to and condemned by the Senate. After the bill had been defeated the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Gamble] moved a reconsideration. He again offered the bill with those features eliminated, and the bill was then passed.

As I understand, this is a general bill to accomplish the exact purpose which was then condemned in that particular case.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. As I said to the Senator from Georgia, my attention had not been called to the bill of which he speaks. But I know Congress has from time to time passed laws of this character having special application to particular Indian reservations. That has been done several times. The proposed bill simply puts in the form of a general law what Congress has been in the habit of doing from time to time in special cases.

Mr. GAMBLE. I will state that this bill was drawn by the Interior Department and was submitted as a general proposition, and was favorably reported by the committee. The same legislation has been had, especially during the last three or four years, and has been embodied in the particular bills opening different reservations.

I happened to be out for a moment, but I think the statement made by the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Bacon] is substantially correct. This same provision was in the bill for the opening of the Standing Rock Indian Reservation. Subsequently I struck this provision out of it, and this bill was reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs as a general meas-I believe it is wise and wholesome legislation.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if this bill is—— Mr. GAMBLE. While I do not want to make any suggestion to the Senator from Utah, I think the bill might be passed over for the present, if it is going to provoke discussion.

Mr. BORAH. That is the suggestion I was about to make. I have some data which has been sent to me by parties in our part of the country who are interested in such legislation and which I should like to have here if the bill is going to be discussed at any length. I should prefer, therefore, that the matter go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over on objection.

BONDED INDEBTEDNESS OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The bill (S. 4762) to amend an act approved February 6, 1905, entitled "An act to amend an act approved July 1, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 8, 1902, entitled 'An act temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes,' and to amend an act approved March 2, 1903, entitled 'An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands,' and to provide for the more efficient administration of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purwas announced as next in order on the calendar.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will go over. The next two bills on the calendar, Senate bill 5193 and Senate bill 5194, are pension bills and will be passed over.

SENATOR FROM WISCONSIN.

The next business on the calendar was Report No. 349, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, relative to the charges preferred by the Legislature of Wisconsin against Isaac STEPHENSON, a Senator from that State.

Mr. HEYBURN. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will go over.

ALICE V. HOUGHTON.

The bill (S. 5137) for the relief of Alice V. Houghton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to Alice V. Houghton $3,500, for injuries received while employed in the Bureau of the Census, Washington, D. C., January 31, 1911. Mr. BACON. I do not mean to be understood as antagonizing the bill at all, but I would like very much to know something about the facts in the case.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I suggest that the report of the Committee on Claims be read. It is a short report and fully ex-. plains the facts.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will have to ask that the bill go over. I want to offer amendments to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over. The Calendar of General Orders, under Rule VIII, is completed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire that there may be a brief executive session. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 12 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 3 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, February 15, 1912, at 2 o'clock p. m.

NOMINATION.

Executive nomination received by the Senate February 14, 1912.

POSTMASTER.

MISSOURI.

W. C. Plains to be postmaster at Fayette, Mo., in place of John M. Eaton. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1911.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 14, 1912. PROMOTION IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Fred M. Perkins to be a lieutenant.

POSTMASTERS.

GEORGIA.

William J. Grist, Blakely.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Wednesday, February 14, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the fol-

Our Father in heaven, Author of our being and the Bestower of every gift, we lift up our hearts in gratitude to Thee for all Thy favors, and we most fervently pray that Thy spirit may so completely possess us that it may crowd out of our being all evil desires and sinful propensities; that we may hallow Thy name in all that we undertake this day; that no regrets shall follow in its wake to disturb our peace. And we will ascribe all praise to Thee through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 8853. An act for the relief of John L. Baird.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 2512. An act for the relief of the Snare & Triest Co.; S. 838. An act for the relief of David R. B. Winniford; and S. J. Res. 71. Joint resolution authorizing the State of Montana to take timber from Deerlodge National Forest for certain pur-

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills and joint resolution of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below

S. 2512. An act for the relief of the Snare & Triest Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 838. An act for the relief of David R. B. Winniford; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. J. Res. 71. Joint resolution authorizing the State of Montana to take timber from Deerlodge National Forest for certain purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8853. An act for the relief of John L. Baird; and H. R. 14055. An act to provide for the sale of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following joint resolution

H. J. Res. 194. Joint resolution granting the temporary use of certain lands in the Presidio of San Francisco and Fort Mason Cal.) Military Reservations to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Co.;

H. R. 16676. An act to authorize the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Co. to construct a bascule bridge across the

Calumet River at South Chicago, Ill.;

H. R. 14484. An act to amend an act approved February 24, 1911, authorizing J. W. Vance and others to construct and maintain a dam and tunnel on the Big Bend of the James River, in Stone County, Mo., to create electric power; and

H. R. 16675. An act to authorize the city of Chicago to construct a bascule bridge across the Calumet River at Ninety-second Street in said city.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERLEY, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 20111) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, which was read the first and second times, and, with the accompanying report (No. 322), was ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I do not make the point of order that the report can not be presented to-day, Calendar Wednesday, but I desire to reserve all points of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois reserves all points of order on the bill which is ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. This is Calendar Wednesday, and the unfinished business is the bill H. R. 16571, the fur-seal bill.

PRESERVATION OF FUR SEALS, ETC.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, at the request of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, which met this morning to consider the matter, I now ask unanimous consent that when the House goes into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the fur-seal bill that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Kendall] have 50 minutes for general debate; that then the bill be taken up under the 5-minute rule, and a vote had on the bill and all amendments at

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent, pending going into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, that when the House goes into committee the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KENDALL] shall have 50 minutes and then the bill shall be debated under the 5-minute rule until 3 o'clock, when the committee shall rise and report to the House. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understood the gentleman was going to make a request to vote on the bill at 3.30. I understand there is to be a Democratic caucus in the House at 4.30-

Mr. SULZER. Yes. Mr. MANN. Whether it is the gentleman's intention to move Mr. MANN. Whether it is the gentleman's intention that the House adjourn after this bill is disposed of? Mr. SULZER. That is my intention.

The SPEAKER. Was the request 3 or 3.30? Mr. KENDALL. We will have no roll call at all.

Mr. KENDALL. We will have no roll call.
Mr. SULZER. Very well; make it 3.30.
The SPEAKER. Which hour does the gentleman make it?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 16571) to give effect to the convention between the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia for the preservation and protection of the fur seals and sea otter which frequent the waters of the North Pacific Ocean, concluded at Washington July 7, 1911, with Mr. Davis of West Virginia in the chair.

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Chairman— The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KENDALL] is recognized for 50 minutes.

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Chairman, I propose to yield my time, but I want to suggest to the gentleman from New York the propriety of having the amendments which will be considered offered now, so that they may be pending.

Mr. SULZER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. KENDALL. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] has an amendment to this bill which he desires to present, and I ask that he offer it now, so that it may be considered as pending.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will do it in a few moments. Mr. KENDALL. House bill 20047 is the amendment which will be offered.

I now yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GOODWIN]

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, I believe it has been agreed by the majority of the committee that this bill, after all, is subject to amendment. Therefore I shall not occupy any time of the committee in reply to that contention. The bill as originally drafted suggested that we might have a domestic or a national control over the seals on the Pribilof Islands.

That fact was predicated upon the treaty itself, article 10, which gives the right of the United States to a closed season, during the life of the treaty, of 15 years. Back of that a memorandum was attached to the treaty, drawn by John Hay and Henry W. Elliott and approved by three distinguished Senators at the other end of the Capitol, was so sent to the Senate February 8, 1911, when it was first ratified there, February 15, 1911, the terms being kept secret till Japan and Russia came into agreement with them July 7 last, and it accompanied the treaty when the high contracting parties signed it. Therefore argument to the effect that the bill could not be amended so as to incorporate domestic control over an international agreement would in the least be far-fetched, and I am glad the majority has withdrawn its specious contention to that feature of the

Mr. Chairman, there is a respectable number of the membership of that committee who are in the minority and not in accord with the majority in reference to a closed season. to call the attention of the committee to the report of the chairman as set forth on page 4. I want to be as diplomatic and parliamentary as possible, but I desire to say that this report is first predicated upon a fiction and not upon a fact; that it is predicated upon a myth and not on a true history of this great Alaşkan seal life; that it is predicated, Mr. Chairman, upon a legend and not on historical data and facts that have come before our committee. If the majority is able to show that this report is predicated upon the truth and upon the facts, it should prevail; and if not, then this report by its own cumbersome weight should fall to the ground.

In this debate, Mr. Chairman, let us have no sidestepping whatsoever. Let us toe the mark, and if we establish that the premise is false then the conclusion is bound to be untrue. I desire to call the committee's attention to page 4 of the report as brought in by the chairman [Mr. Sulzer], but before reading from the report I desire to say that there are two theories entertained by the committee. The majority say that whereas it is an historical fact that that great seal life was practically exterminated between 1817 and 1834, that that fact was due even to the killing of females upon the rookeries or breeding grounds. It is not contended by any faction that pelagic sealing was known to the world until 1886. There can be no contention as to that. Now they seek to make a parallel case between the destruction and the practical extinction of that great natural life on the Pribilof Islands in the early part of the nineteenth century and its present depleted condition, as set forth by recent history and the census of those returns on the Pribliof Islands. We contend that the depletion of the herd in the early part of the nineteenth century was not due to the killing of females to any extent whatsoever, either upon the rookeries or out upon the hilltops of the islands. The breeding grounds were sacred to those people. They had a due and reverential awe and regard for the breeding grounds. They never even trod upon the breeding grounds, and when they were compelled to go near them they put on a different pair of shoes. So sacred were the breeding grounds and superstition of the natives that they even put out the fires when the smoke blew in that direction. They had a reverential regard and a superstition, I say, as to the sacredness of the breeding grounds and the breeding females.

I would like to ask the chairman, or any member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, or any member of the Committee of the Whole House, upon what he or any Member may predicate a statement that the destruction of that great herd in the early part of the nineteenth century was due to the killing of females? I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] and the distinguished chairman of our committee, who for 20 years has graced and adorned this floor, upon what authority, so far as the hearings are concerned, does he base the statement that that great fur-seal life was exterminated in the early part of the nineteenth century by the killing of females? I would ask any one of them to put his finger on a line of testimony to that effect, and I pause for an answer.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will answer in my own time.
Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Doubtless they will predicate their answer upon a statement made by Mr. Lembkey, under whose personal and direct supervision that seal life has become almost extinct during the past few years so far as land killing is concerned.

Now, when Mr. Lembkey was before our committee—and I will not take time to refer to all of this testimony, page by page—he said that Mr. Elliott, the much-despised Elliott, as they would have you to believe, in his great monograph, the greatest history that has ever been written upon that wonder-ful life in the northern Pacific, had stated certain controverted facts; but when he had concluded Mr. Elliott took the floor and pointed out the fact that the references Mr. Lembkey had made to his writings were not the words of Elliott, but the words of an old legend, which the old bishop upon the island had said was untrue, and Elliott himself said that the legend and the writings to that effect were full of errors and inaccuracies. [Applause.]

Let me read what Mr. Elliott said, as shown on page 121 of the hearings. He said:

I introduced Veniaminov in my monograph as the only authority that I can find. I quote him literally, but I say that his figures and his conclusions are altogether erroneous. I give him credit for being sincere and earnest, but I say, in this review of his work, that these figures and statements of Bishop Veniaminov are absolutely valueless.

Those are the statements that Mr. Elliott makes in the way of a footnote, also on page 143 of his monograph, to that legend. What else have we in the hearings with reference to the killing of the females? Why, the old bishop, whose name is almost unpronounceable to an English-speaking man, was interviewed by Prof. Elliott. He was born on the island in 1806, his father having moved there from Kodiak in 1804. His father was an associate with Pribliof, who discovered those islands in 1786, and he had remained constantly there from 1804 until his death, in 1856, on St. Paul Island.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman mean to state that the man he mentions was Mr. Elliott's father?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Oh, no. I mean the father of the old bishop that Mr. Elliott interviewed. He was born at Kodiak and his father was a contemporary of Pribilof and was with Pribilof when the latter discovered those islands which bear his name.

What did he say? I will challenge the gentlemen on that side of the contention to show one statement that any female seal had ever been killed knowingly or purposely at any time upon the rookeries or breeding grounds. He does state in one place only that at some time the nubiles—that is, the female seals that had no pups, those that had not yet bred, and some, perhaps, that had bred and gone among the young males or bachelors perhaps before going out to the high seas about the 1st of November—in strolling from the breeding grounds and rookeries had got out among bachelors and the earlings of both sexes, and in the driving were sometimes killed-a few only. But the old bishop goes on and says they never had killed them on the rookeries or breeding grounds.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Yes.
Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. I understand the gentleman used the word "males" and then the word "bachelors." What is the distinction between the two?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. It is this: A young male does not propagate until he is 6 years old, whereas the females do at the age of 2. Those we call "bachelors" are between 2 years of age and the age at which they propagate.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Where does the gentleman get the information that the male does not propagate until 6 years

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Oh, that is information that almost everybody knows. It is a matter of common agreement.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. I just wished to know where the gentleman got his data. Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, I can not put my finger on all this data here, as to the absolute denial of the proposition I have made, owing to the restriction of time, but I will ask the opposition to put their finger upon one line of reliable testimony sustaining their contention.

But that is not all, Mr. Chairman. So great had become the extinction of that seal life in the latter part of the last century that the Imperial Russian Government became desirous to know the cause of that great depletion, because it was a silent partner of the old Russian-American Co., and had guaranteed its bonds.

So they sent out a special agent, a confidential agent, who, after being on those islands for seven or eight months, made a report to the effect that this great destruction had been caused not by the killing of females, but by the killing of young males, leaving only the old males and the cows to propagate. Let me read that report. It is found in the Congressional Record, volume 36, part 2, Fifty-seventh Congress, second session, beginning at page 1602. This report was confirmed one year thereafter by three directors of that autocratic company that had been given the privilege to bring if it chose practically to its been given the privilege to bring, if it chose, practically to its extinction that great life in the North Pacific Ocean. I will quote from the report of the directors. I want to say that the Ways and Means Committee in that year—June 2, 1902, Mr. Tawney, a member of that committee, brought in this report, Report No. 2303. Therefore it must be official. I read from page 1602 of the volume of the Congressional Record referred to:

In his report, No. 41, of the 25th of February, 1820, Mr. Yanovsky, in giving an account of his inspection of the operations of killing seals on the islands of St. Paul and St. George, observes that "every year the young bachelor seals are killed and that only the cows, 'sekatch,' and half 'sekatch' are left to propagate the species. It follows that only the old seals are left, while if any of the bachelors remain alive in the autumn they are sure to be killed the next spring. The consequence is that the number of seals obtained diminishes every year, and it is certain that the species will in time become extinct."

[Applause.]

[Applause.]

Another astonishing feature of the majority report is a gross absurdity, ridiculous in the extreme, and reads as follows (see

With the return of Pribilof to the islands in 1787 and the arrival of the other vessels which followed in his wake, the killing of seals on land became the chief industry. From 1787 to 1799 as many as six rival companies established stations upon these two small islands, imported native workmen from Unalaska and elsewhere, and vied with each other in securing all the skins they could encourage the natives to deliver to them. In the killing no attention was paid to age or sex, but everything in the way of animal life having a marketable skin was killed. These islands were not then a Government reservation, and no restriction or regulation whatever was placed upon the killing of any animal found thereon. What number of skins was taken by these rival companies prior to 1800 will never be known, but it is supposed to be in the neighborhood of several millions. When in 1799 they were either expelled or consolidated into the Russian American Co., killing of seals continued in the same ruthless manner. Between 1801 and 1804 the company had accumulated in warehouses about 800,000 sealskins, over 700,000 of which spoiled from lack of care in curing and had to be destroyed. In 1805 such unmistakable evidences of scarcity of seal life were found by a visiting court official that he took it upon himself to stop the slaughter entirely and to send nearly all the native hunters away from the islands.

The taking of 800,000 skins in four years is a continuation of

The taking of 800,000 skins in four years is a continuation of this myth upon which the report is predicated, and this was fully exposed by Prof. Elliott in the hearings of the committee, and is not a historical statement made by him, but is taken from the work of Bishop Veniaminov, and often repeated by Tech-namov, who was hired by the old Russian American Co. to write a history of the company i., 1862 so as to make the most vivid impression of the enormous number of seals that were on the islands, and so forth.

Bishop Shaishnikkov quietly and quickly made the following exposé of this legend (see p. 97, Hearings on H. R. 16571, Jan.

4, 1912):

expose of this legend (see p. 97, Hearings on H. R. 16571, Jan. 4, 1912):

The old company in making parchment skins was never able to ship all of its catch in any one season from the islands as the catch is shipped now. It found that waiting in a ship around the islands after October was dangerous, and severe loss had attended the practice. So in this way there were always many thousands of skins "made" and making on the islands, stored in the warehouse. Yes; I know that Technamov, in his history of the company, says that between 1801 and 1804 the old company had accumulated 800,000, many of which were spoiled, cut, and thrown into the sea, and all that. But my father has said that no skins were ever wasted in this way. He had repeatedly heard the full story of the work done by the employees prior to his arrival on the island in 1804; the most that they could take with the men they had was not to exceed 40,000 parchment skins on St. Paul; four such seasons would only show 160,000 skins, even if they were all allowed to lay in the warehouse at Kodlak. That is a mistake—a big one—and I do not understand where he gets the facts; he does not print them. In all the time of their occupation (about 14 years) with 400 workmen between them, against the 45 or 50 which the company retained, even then the employees never could get more than 120,000 to 150,000 skins made up in any one season, and they never left anything behind them.

There were usually 25,000 or 30,000 skins holding over on the islands in the serais there and perhaps as many more in the serais at Kodlak or Sutwik. It was not possible to have any more in stock at any one time on account of the bulk of such a number of bales for safe stowage, to guard against injury. But 800,000 skins accumulated at Sitka or Kodlak! Why, it would take six or eight big warehouses. No; it's an error—a great one—and it is a strange one to get in such a book, but Technamov was only a hired man. He wrote the book for the company's use to help them to renew their charter at St. P mistakes.

"Oh, yes: I know that Veniaminov has first said this, but see he also says that 'up to 1817 I have no knowledge to rely upon'" (showing the page in the Zapierkie). I myself think that this statement, qualified as it is here by Veniaminov, must have been one of those legends of the wanton waste and excessive slaughter which had been more or less impressed by repetition as the truth and so used by the bishop. Technamov unquestionably took it from the Zapierkie, for he never found any such evidence in the company's lists or books.

The minority of the committee thought it bad enough for Lembkey to constantly misquote Prof. Elliott, putting in his mouth these myths which, he declares in his work, to be wholly erroneous and full of inaccuracies, and so stated by him before our committee in reply to Lembkey, who sat there and did not open his mouth when thus exposed.

What then, Mr. Chairman, must have been our great surprise when the conimittee files a report in the House repeating these legends as matters of fact, and upon these myths constructs a report which, if followed, would leave that great seal life at the mercy of these land butchers. This report of the committee, based not upon fact, but upon fiction, I submit is absolutely indefensible.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we come down to the crux of this whole miserable business of shielding those seal contractors—of serving those private interests which were looting the fur-seal herd

Just as the dope fiends and bogus food jobbers got behind a "scientific board of advisors," with Dr. Ira Remsen at its head, so did those seal butchers get behind a "fur-seal advisory board," with Dr. David Starr Jordan at its head.

Whenever citizens like Prof. Elliott, Dr. Hornaday, or Dr. Charles Sprague Smith, or Dr. William O. Stillman would protest and demand attention and replies that the Departments of State and Commerce and Labor could not answer, but to confess the injustice complained of, then those high officials took shelter behind a "scientific board of advisors."

This high court of reference and advice for the Departments of State and Commerce and Labor was introduced, name by name, with florid eulogium by one of the officials of the Bureau of Fisheries, Dr. Evermann, to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, on the 4th instant, and set up on pinnacles and duly decorated with medals and diplomas, as follows, to wit:

decorated with medals and diplomas, as follows, to wit:

The advisory board, fur-seal service, consists of the following:
Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, who was chairman of the International Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, appointed in pursuance of the treaty of February 29, 1892, and whose published report in four volumes is the most comprehensive, thorough, and valuable treatise that has ever been published on all matters pertaining to the fur seal and the seal islands. Dr. Jordan is the most distinguished and best known naturalist in the world.

Dr. Leonhard Stejneger, head curator of biology, United States National Museum, for two years resident on the Russian seal islands, member of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, as a member of which he visited and studied all the fur-seal rookeries of Alaska, Russia, and Japan. His report on the Russian seal islands is the most critical and thoughtful that has been written.

Dr. C. Hart Merriam, until recently chief of the Biological Survey, member of the Fur Seal Commission of 1890, and the greatest living authority on mammals.

Dr. Frederic A. Lucas, Director of the American Museum of Natural History, member of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, and one of the keenest, most discerning, and best known naturalists.

Dr. Charles H. Townsend, director of the New York Aquarium, for many years naturalist on the fisheries steamer Albatross, member of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, and one of the keenest, most discerning, and best known naturalists.

Dr. Charles H. Townsend, director of the New York Aquarium, for many years naturalist on the fisheries steamer Albatross, member of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, and distinguished as a naturalist and field investigator. Dr. Townsend made a special study extending over many years of our fur seals and pelagic sealing.

Hon. Edwin W. Sims, United States attorney for the northern district of Illinois, in 1906, when Solicitor for the Department of Commerce an Since Dr. David Starr Jordan is the president of this board and proclaimed to the committee as "the greatest living authority on fur seals," it is in order to say that no one gives him that credit save those seal contractors whom he has shielded and his official subordinate. His whole record in this fur-seal business is one of the veriest nonsense. He "discovered" nothing true or sensible as to these seals that Prof. Elliott had not published with full detail 26 years before Jordan ever saw a fur seal, and Elliott's biology of that life in 1872-1874 stands to-day absolutely unshaken by all subsequent investigation as published by the Government in 1874, 1884, and 1890.

Dr. Jordan's "joint agreement on conclusions of fact," officially made with the British agents in the State Department November 16, 1897, has been the shield behind which the land November 16, 1897, has been the shield behind which the land and sea butchers have retired when attacked and has been quoted as the reason why they should not be interfered with by the high officialism of Washington and the Ottowan Government whenever good citizens complained of them and demanded the abatement of their work.

I call the attention of this House to that mischievous and improper "joint agreement" which Dr. Jordan has given, to the butchers' delight, and which has secured them in their work from early interruption until Hornaday and Elliott stirred up from any interruption until Hornaday and Elliott stirred up Senator Dixon's great Committee on Conservation of National Resources in 1910 to the end that Secretary Nagel was pre-vented from renewing their contract May 1, 1910, and their elimination from all consideration in the premises thereafter.

In the Congressional Record of February 2, 1903, as referred to above, is an expose of this wretched "joint agreement," but I will not delay the House by reading it.

Now, the author of all this self-confessed folly, David Starr Jordan, was presented to the Committee on Foreign Affairs as the highest authority for the plea of those naturalists and officials who claim that they can improve upon the natural law which governs the reproduction of the wild seals.

But Dr. Jordan's "expert" work has not been confined to the fur seals. He has just completed as of the fur seals.

fur seals. He has just completed another job of "scientific regulation," which collapsed the very moment he presented it to the Government. He has been busy as the chief commissioner of our State Department during the last three years in preparing a code of international fishery regulations for the boundary waters between Canada and the United Look, Mr. Chairman, at the following record of this last fisheries "expert" work of Jordan. It throws a clear light on him as a "fur-seal expert" of such "high authority." It exposes the utter nonsense of that claim.

On the 23d of November, 1909, Dr. Jordan submitted to the President a code of international regulations to control the fisheries that were conducted in the boundary waters between Canada and the United States for the protection and preservation of the food fishes therein.

This code thus given to the President had been the joint work of Dr. Prince, of Canada, and Dr. Jordan during the past two years, under authority of the convention of April 11, 1908, between the United States and Great Britain.

On the 2d of February, 1910, the President sent his Jordan fisheries code to the Senate and House so that due legislation should be enacted to carry the Jordan-Prince regulations into effect. In the meantime the State Department's press agent was busy praising this "successful work of Dr. Jordan, the great authority on fishes"—and seals.

Did the Senate approve and indorse that draft of an act which accompanied the President's message? Did the House? No. Why? Because this work of Dr. Jordan, when first exposed to intelligent criticism by our own people, was found to be absolutely worthless. Was absolutely wrong in its order and grotesque in its conclusions. On the 16th of February, 1910, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations unanimously rejected the same and ordered it returned to the State Department for amendment. That ends the joh, for the Canadians say they can not amend it, and if they could they would not. It is too awfully botched.

Think of it, gentlemen of the House; think of it, Mr. Chairman; three plain Saginaw Bay fishermen appeared before the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations Wednesday afternoon, February 16, 1910, to protest against that section of this proposed Jordan code which related to regulation of their industry in Lake Huron. They had no attorney, no books, no briefs, but just a pail of water in which were a dozen live herring brought from Saginaw Bay with them. They had a section of a net or seine, as used by them in the lake fishing, and a tin dipper; that is all they had to demonstrate

Mr. Chairman, in 30 short minutes they had proved the utter worthlessness of Jordan's regulations for their business and retired. The Senators, in executive session, unanimously voted to send the whole code back to the State Department for revision. It is there yet, Mr. Chairman, and will never come back to Congress.

Since Secretary Nagel authorized his subordinates to appear before the House committee and presented Dr. Jordan as a fit and full authority for his desire to kill seals under the terms of this law which we are about to enact to safeguard the seal treaty, I want the House to listen to this:

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 28, 1910. Hon. Benjamin S. Cable, Acting Secretary Commerce and Labor,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: In the course of a studied and deliberate address, which was delivered at Berkeley, Cal., on April 15 last to the Unitarian Club, Dr. David Starr Jordan drew a picture of President Taft. He portrayed Mr. Taft as one who served private interests at the public cost unless strictly enjoined by law from doing so. (See San Francisco Call, issue of Apr. 6, 1910.)

In the course of a studied and deliberate article prepared by you and your associates, in reply to the charges of the Camp Fire Club of America, you quote Dr. David Starr Jordan as your chief authority for killing seals—practically all of the young males as they can be secured on the seal islands of Alaska.

If. Dr. Jordan is correct in his portrait of the President, as above cited, then, of course, he is equally correct in his advice as to the care of the fur-seal herd. But, with all respect, permit me to say that both truth and common sense are wholly lacking in his conclusions.

In the light of the above, what say you, on reflection, as to Dr. Jordan's sanity or common sense?

Very truly, yours,

Henry W. Elliotz.

[From the San Francisco Call, Apr. 16, 1910.]

ANDS TAFT AS INTERESTS' FRIEND-DR. JORDAN, OF STANFORD UNI-VERSITY, SCORES PRESIDENT AND LAUDS ROOSEVELT-CHANGES SUG-GESTED IN FIELD OF POLITICS IN LECTURE AT THE UNITARIAN CLUB.

BERKELEY, April 15.

In a lecture on "Taking politics out of politics," by Dr. David Starr Jordan, at the Unitarian Club last night, the speaker defended the policies of former President Roosevelt and declared that the Roosevelt idea "is to hold every resource for the people unless there is a specific law under which it must be given up."

"The Taft idea," he said, "is to allow the moneyed interests to gain everything unless there is a specific law to forbid."

In line with the Roosevelt idea that nothing should be wasted that can be saved, Dr. Jordan advocated the employment of scientific experts in every department of public work instead of those who are only politically interested in the duties they perform. He continued:

"Our politics are and have been in the past sordid. It is the duty of the present age to lift politics from the slough of corporate greed. It is the proper attitude of the Government to be doing something all the time, to be solving some problem."

Now, Mr. Chairman, if David Starr Jordan has been able to correctly define and locate the unfitness of President Taft for that high office which he holds, then, of course, he can tell us what is fit and proper for us to do in the matter of conducting the business of killing our seals.

But, Mr. Chairman, is he? Do you think Secretary Nagel really knows that Jordan is the best adviser he can get? If Dr. Jordan is an authority on seals or fishes and on Presidents, then Nagel knows best. But I want this House to clearly view the status of Dr. Jordan as a safe and proper authority for any matter which may be submitted to him for advice.

In concluding, Mr. Chairman, this résumé of that "expert" advice I desire to call the attention of the House to the fact that this man Jordan has been brought before the Committee on Foreign Affairs by the officials of this administration as the highest authority for their work on the islands, when he is the same Jordan whom they have dismissed for this work on the lake fisheries treaty and again for the most potent reason that he has libeled the President. Comment is utterly idle; it is too, too awfully bad!

Touching this "scientific" work of Dr. Jordan and his associates in caring for our fur-seal herd—"protecting it"—I desire to have this editorial classic put before the House:

[From Brooklyn (N. Y.) Standard Union, Sunday, Aug. 13, 1911.] IN MEMORIAM-THE FUR SEALS.

[From Brooklyn (N. Y.) Standard Union, Sunday, Aug. 13, 1911.]

IN MEMORIAM—THE FUR SEALS.

Remarks concerning the killing of the Alaska fur seals must be, so far as this year is concerned, not only ex post facto but ex post mortem. The official executioner, Fish Commissioner Bowers, through whom Sccretary Nagel carries on the work of destruction told the Townsend committee the other day that the butchery ceased July 31, though he had no idea what the mortality would be. Although the scene of the slaughter is so far away, a touch of local interest has been given to the subject in the last few days by the introduction of ex-Director Lucas of the Institute, now of the American Museum, who, it came out before the committee, had assented to an arrangement, which, if confirmed by his associates on the advisory fur-seal board, would have adjusted the situation, for the time at least, to the satisfaction of all parties and given the seals another lease of life and the chance to live. Whatever Dr. Lucas might say, either as an expert or a citizen, as to the merits of this persistent and much-involved controversy, would have great weight not only in Brooklyn, his home, but throughout the whole community. In this modus vivendi President Jordan, of Leland Stanford University, another member of the board, concurred, but for some unknown reason the other members refused to sign, and so the massacre of 1911 proceeded unimpeded.

The seals being dead, to begin with, and the session "petering out," with the Townsend committee's work unfinished, nothing further can be expected until the next session of Congress. Enough has, however, already been developed to make the prosecution of the inquiry to the end imperative. Bitter personalities have been exchanged, and it is difficult to believe that the cause of all the hard words and bad blood is merely technical and expert differences of theory as to the best way of restoring the depleted and decimated herds. Plain common sense, however, and all experience must be "shown," to use th

The pending treaty, which is now before Congress for that legislation which is necessary to put into effect its terms, is one of mutual concession and joint control, whereby four great powers, Japan, Russia, Great Britain, and the United States, agree for a term of years, and presumably into the indefinite future, to join hands and protect from its complete extermination the fur-seal life which is now surviving in the North Pacific Ocean and Bering Sea.

When we took possession of these rookeries and hauling grounds, or the sealing grounds of Alaska, from the hands of Russia, in 1867, the undisputable record and survey made by the Government in 1872 and 1874 declares the fact that at that time immense herds, aggregating more than 4,700,000 seals, were in existence on those islands. It is a matter of record and officially admitted that to-day less than 100,000 of them survive, and but for the terms which the high contracting powers to this convention have agreed upon that small nucleus would quickly disappear.

This convention has expressed itself and agreed to prohibit pelagic sealing at the hands of its subjects and our citizens for the next 15 years in all of the waters of the North Pacific Ocean above the thirtieth parallel of north latitude, the Bering Sea, the Sea of Japan, and the Okotsk Sea, prohibiting the entry of crews and boats to all ports in those waters other than those having clearances, and to any and all vessels engaged in the business of pelagic sealing and sea-otter hunting making contraband any and all sea-otter or fur-seal skins.

It becomes of the highest importance now, to that restoration of this wonderful marine life whether we act so as to effect the terms of that treaty or not. It becomes highly important for us to understand exactly and briefly what our Government has done since taking possession of this herd and why this loot and ruin and this destruction of that valuable public property has been so well-nigh completed up to date. When our people first acquired Russian America, in 1867, probably not a half dozen of our entire population knew of the existence of that fur-seal herd on those islands; but by 1868 a number of American whaling captains and their crews, and all old employees of the Russian America Co., made a bee line for those islands and went to work on them. They sealed during that summer and fall without any interference on the part of the Federal Govtook an immense number of skinsernment. They 368,000—and only stopped then for lack of salt; and it is creditably reported that when they were through that they did not miss any seals on the hauling grounds, that there was no evidence of their having killed a seal, so many still remained. The news of the slaughter of that immense number of seals quickly traveled to Washington, and Congress, in 1869, put a joint resolution through declaring those islands a public reservation and forbidding trespass and the killing of the seals. 1870 Congress enacted a law whereby for 20 years the exclusive right of taking a certain number—100,000 a year—was given to a corporation, and for that right they were to pay annual taxes, royalties, and rental; and this lease was to run for 20 years, and at its expiration the act enabled its renewal if, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury, it was desirable.

All official reports coming down from the islands spoke of the fine condition of the herds, and, if anything, declared that they were increasing, although 100,000 seals were taken each and every year by the lessees. In 1883-84 the first cloud foretelling the destruction of that herd appeared on the horizon in the form of the sails of the pelagic, or open sea, seal hunter's fleet. It seems that by that time certain quick-witted men sailing out from Victoria, Vancouver Island, San Francisco, Sound, had discovered the fact that this herd-mighty herd passed on a migrating tour in a circuit from those islands south to the coast of California each year, leaving the islands in the latter part of November, and appearing off the coast of California in January and February following; then turning north and working its way back into the Bering Sea so as to arrive in May and June—a great watery circuit of 5,000 miles of migration. These men found that by timing themselves and keeping in the wake of this herd as it progressed up, they could cap-ture the seals as they slept in the water or fed. By 1890 a ture the seals as they slept in the water or fed. By 1890 a fleet of 120 sails, carrying at least 24 to 30 men to the vessel, each a hunter—little vessels they were, 60 to 90 tons, each one schooner rigged, all with canoes, 10 or 12 on deck, and each manned by a couple of hunters—hung on the flanks of this herd from early in December until they reached the Bering Sea, and then they harrassed them the rest of the season around the islands. This aroused the first fur-seal dispute and controversy in 1887 with our Government and Great Britain, This aroused the first fur-seal dispute and conwhich has continued every year since without any amelioration or relief and at the terrible cost of nearly everything that we had at stake, until this convention was ratified last July in What are the reasons for this long-drawn-out and abortive work and negotiation and treaty making and complete failure to accomplish any good results for the preservation of that fur-seal life? There was one great controlling reason. It was the greed of private interests, and the power of those private interests to control the officialdom of our Government so that they were never really interfered with, from 1890 until that day when John Hay and a few of his associates in the State Department agreed to a plan which would eliminate those private interests forever, and which plan is now before you—as this convention which we are to put into effect is known as the Hay-Elliott convention of mutual concession and joint control that was in negotiation at the close of 1905, when it was drawn up in that year and sent by Mr. Hay for the signature and agreement by the British Ambassador. Mr.

Hay fell ill on the 15th of March, left the department that day never to return and resume his duties there, and his successor refused to take up this unfinished work-which could have been finished within a few weeks after it was placed in his hands, October, 1905, at the behest of those private interests whom Mr. Hay has denied. The treaty is here, and it is not necessary to go into the story of how it was completed and brought here; but now it is important that we prevent any repetition in the next 15 years of that killing on the land and in the sea which has wrought this terrible ruin to that fine public prop-

How are we going to bring this about? There is only one way that a wild life, entirely beyond our control over which we have no knowledge of its coming or of its going as it elects to come and go, which we can not confine to certain fields, or even protect from its natural enemies while at sea, where it is nearly half of the time of its existence. There is only one way to restore that life, and that is to throw around it that protection which will keep our own hands from interfering with the natural law which governs its reproduction and its best form of existence.

Before I shall discuss the proper legislation required in this bill, it is well to call attention to the fact that the power of the pelagic sealer to ruin the fur-seal herd was first recognized in 1886 by our Government. To make a long story short, Mr. Bayard, at that time Secretary of State, had a consultation with the Cabinet, and the President decided to abandon the assertion of control over the waters of the Bering Sea and the North Pacific Ocean; he determined upon a plan of international agreement between Great Britain, Russia, and all the maritime powers and ourselves, whereby the fur seal should not be molested during the breeding season in the open sea or on the land. Mr. Bayard made very good progress until tripped up by that unfortunate Murchison letter scandal, the political aftermath of which threatened the defeat of Mr. Cleve-This, of course, ruined Mr. Bayard's influence, and the then British ambassador was compelled to leave Washington, and his negotiations came to a sudden and inglorious ending. The Harrison administration succeeded March 4, 1889. Mr. Blaine at once reversed the action of Mr. Bayard. He renewed the orders for seizure of Canadian sealers on the open waters of Bering Sea, which Mr. Bayard had revoked. The revenue cutters overhauled and took possession of six or seven Canadian schooners in Bering Sea, put prize crews of one man on each vessel, and sent them to Sitka. The Canadians went out of Bering Sea all right. But what did they do? They steamed straight into Victoria, prize crews and all. This seizure raised an awful howl in Ottawa, which quickly reached London. Very soon afterwards Mr. Blaine was served with a note from Lord Salisbury and a warning from Great Britain that no further seizures would be permitted. Mr. Blaine then made an offer to submit the question to arbitration, as in state letter of December 17, 1890. This unfortunate letter, with this mistaken idea of Mr. Blaine's of, first, jurisdiction over the open waters of Bering Sea and, second, the property right in the body of a wild animal, was the cause of his undoing. It seems that from then up to the present hour, except for the interference of John Hay, nothing but botch work and failure have characterized every step taken by the agents of the Government in this matter of the fur seals.

When Benjamin Harrison and the two Fosters-John W. and Charles—turned over their respective portfolios of the State and Treasury Departments to Grover Cleveland and his Cabinet March 4, 1893, they informed him that they had made up an impregnable case for the fur seal and were going over to Paris before the Bering Sea tribunal to rout the British in advance. They had spent three years of investigation into the subject, at the public cost, and now the public were to reap the rich reward for its patience in this investigation.

Secretary Gresham, Mr. John W. Foster's successor as Secretary of State, was incredulous, but said that since President Harrison had placed Mr. Foster in charge of every detail of this business, in view of his astuteness and the ability of this man, Mr. Gresham would not interfere. He gave this Foster-Phelps management all the rope he could, and could do nothing else, as there was no time then for any change. At the time Judge Gresham was made Secretary of State the new Secretary of the Treasury was Mr. John G. Carlisle, and they both said that this case as prepared by Mr. Phelps, J. C. Carter, F. R. Coudert, and a whole swarm of lesser lawyers was a deliberate mistake; but he declared that no obstacle should be placed in the path of these bad managers of a good cause; and so Mr. Gresham made regulations for the preservation of the first seal herd, which Messrs. Foster and Phelps secured at Paris August 16, 1893, as the award of that tribunal after a full and perfect trial. He allowed them to frame this act putting the agreement of that tribunal into effect, and that act was framed by ex-President Harrison with the most anxious solicitation, and it is a model legal bill. But after it was faithfully enforced during 1894 and the utter failure of those regulations to protect the seals was demonstrated, at the close of that season it left the seals completely at the mercy of the pelagic sealers.

These sealing regulations, secured at Paris, for this herd were first published in August, 1893.

Secretary Gresham, Speaker Reed, and Mr. Dingley secured the passage, February 25, 1896, by the House, of a measure prepared by them, and is the only measure left for us which would have worked the first seal reform.

Death struck Secretary Gresham down suddenly, and before he could render his assistance to the passage of the Dingley bill (H. R. 3206) in the Senate. His successor, Richard Olney, was unequal to the task and the pelagic sealers went on their way rejoicing. Private interests flattered him into the belief that he could negotiate for the proper preservation of this herd without the use of this bill of Mr. Dingley's. His negotiations were a failure. Before Mr. Olney refired he managed to get a joint commission of American and Canadian "experts" sent up to the Pribilof Islands during the sumsent up to the Pribilof Islands during the summer of 1896, or in the latter part of that summer. headed by Dr. David Starr Jordan, who was selected by Charles S. Hamlin, who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and to whom Mr. Carlisle gave the whole management in so far as the Treasury Department was concerned, and Prof. Darcey Thompson, for the British. It landed on the islands during the middle of July, 1896; put in about four weeks there. Neither Dr. Jordan nor Prof. Thompson had ever seen a live fur seal before, and, in fact, had never been on a seal island. The result of their brief examination—they left September 8was that Dr. Jordan announced to the public the fact that the fur seal was not a seal at all. He was able to tell positively that this was a fact, and yet he had never visited the islands before; and he further said he had discovered the chief natural factor preventing the increase in the herd, and that was the self-trampling to death of the young pups by their parents: that it was a positive fact that they became so crowded on the rookeries that the pups were trampled to death, and that it would be a mercy and proper thing to kill off the young males! He also announced his theory that the young females could be branded, and that this would eliminate the pelagic sealer from the question! He completed that botch work with a letter to United States Senator Perkins, which that gentleman read to the open Senate February 28, 1807, declaring that the British agent agreed with him "on all questions of policy as well as on matters of fact." (See Congressional Record, Feb. 28, 1897. pp. 26-29.) That was his amazing record; but that record is rendered into thin air when summing up the results. First, Dr. Jordan himself, in his final report of 1898, admitted that he was wrong in his theory of the trampling to death of the pups, but not wrong in his theory of branding the pups or of its practicability. He admitted that he was wrong in having any sensible agreement with the British agent. But the Canadians made an agreement with him. (See pp. 1602 et seq., in-corporated in Congressional Record, Feb. 2, 1903, headed "Exhibit B.") It was easy to make such a claim of agreement as that over this business. And then he tells us that there never were more than three times as many seals on the breeding grounds in any prior year, or of finer form and number, than he saw in 1896, and then he saw only 545,000, counting bulls, cows, and pups!

Never were more than three times as many, he says. worse than all that, that there was no such thing as injury by driving or killing on those islands. (See pp. CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as cited.) He said that it does not hurt them any to drive them; that it was best to get all the males killed off each year. Therefore he would have no limit to the killing actually fixed in advance by the Treasury Department; that that power to fix it should be left in the hands of the agent on the grounds, and when that agent was appointed by these controlling private killing interests. But he closes this record of error with the statement that there was no danger of the extermination of the herd. it! This great scientist, who was introduced to the Committee on Foreign Affairs with the modest notice that he was "the greatest living authority on the fur seals" by the officialdom of the Bureau of Fisheries. This great scientist. facing that work of slaughter on the islands and on the sea, declaring that with this "seal-life candle thus burning at both ends" there was no danger of its going out. This great scientist said that. Nothing is gained, gentlemen, in the long run by any nation or individual attempting to conceal any abuses or wrongdoing. It is true that the Canadians and Americans alike are responsible for the damage done since 1886.

The articles of this convention enable us at once to cure the abuses of both land and sea killing, and that is why it is best to have a close time on the islands during the life of that convention, whereby all killing of fur seals for commercial purposes is to be suspended during the next 15 years. The agent of the Bureau of Fisheries, in his effort to discredit the argument of Mr. Elliott in favor of this restoration, declares that he, Mr. Elliott, had been on all sides of this question, and read from a report of a committee-in 1888-of this House where Mr. Elliott had in response to a question said that he did not think there was any harm being done by the methods then in progress, of killing seals on the islands, to the rest of the herd. Mr. Elliott at that time had not been on the islands since he had written his report of 1874. In 1890 Mr. Elliott again visited the islands at the official request of the Secretary of the Treasury, and, after the lapse of over 16 years from his first visit, he found then that he had been mistaken in his theory of 1874, which was quoted by Dr. Everman from his report of 1874. He manfully acknowledged his error in 1890 and apologized for it to the department, and it is there that he gets on the right side. So while it is literally true that he was on all sides, yet he left the wrong side in 1890 and remained on the right side ever since. (See report of Henry W. Elliott on The Present Condition of the Fur Seal, submitted Nov. 17, 1890, to the Secretary of the Treasury, pp. 5-15, inclusive; H. Doc. No. 175, 54th Cong., 1st sess.) Mr. Elliott brought out very distinctly the full effect of the land killing as well as the full effect of the pelagic killing. He showed, however, that if there had been no pelagic killing and that if the present conditions of the land killing were observed, the extermination of this life was absolutely inevitable. To illustrate the truth of this statement he went back to the Russian period of decline and restoration—from 1804 to 1834 of decline and from 1834 to 1857 of restoration. He showed that the conduct and progress of that work of killing seals on the islands in 1890 was almost a perfect replica of the work of the Russian régime from 1804 to 1834. But he also showed that the Russian method of working was radically different from that of the American as to the method of driving the seals and the methods of curing the skins.

Under the Russian order the seals were driven on small daily drives all through the season, from June to November, at that time when the herds were on the islands. The Russians took all of the 1, 2, and 3 year old males. They only rejected the short or very small ones. The Americans last summer drove only in July; there were not seals enough to drive later. The Russian method of curing the great bulk of the skins was by "air drying" and not by "salting." That caused them to be able to handle only a very limited number daily. Air drying in that climate of the Pribilof Islands is very slow work as compared with salting. Under the American order the exclusive use of salt was quickly made, and the very difficult question of curing the skins was at once solved. Their method was to so drive in the early part of June as to take 100,000 skins, and then get the whole catch properly cured by August, so that they could be ready for sale in the London market by October, in order to be able to be sold at the regular auction annually held there, which is attended by all the buyers of the world, in the early part of December. Therefore the Americans were able to drive in three or four weeks and cure the skins of as many seals as the Russians would have taken in five months. Now, since they were taxed as much for a fine skin as for a poor skin, and as the finest skins were the hides of 3 and 4 year old males-8 to 13 pound skinsthe American began at once the practice which the Russian had abandoned in 1834, which is known as "culling" all the best young male seals in the herd and taking no others. A practice of infinite harm to the herd, and a practice that was in existence in 1872 and 1874, when Mr. Elliott first reported it. But it seems that this practice of culling out the males, the fine young males, was not unknown to the Russians, because in 1820 some of them seem to have been convinced that the practice of "culling" was injurious, and that this was the cause of the herd being destroyed; and this was at a time when no such a thing as pelagic sealing was known or even dreamed of, and which did not come into existence until 1886, as a feature of the slightest importance to the destruction of that life. It seems that way back in 1819 the Russians became alarmed at the inability of their agents to get the required number of skins wanted; and when asked to get more skins that agent reported that if he did he would destroy the herd. It seems that they sent a special commissioner from the board of directors in St. Petersburg to make an examination into this question, as to the reason why such a short supply should exist on the islands. It seems that this investigator remained there during the summer of 1819, and that he made a report, after looking into every detail of the business and what he saw. Let me epitomize what he said:

It is due to the fact that so far has this practice of culling the best males for slaughter gone that if any of the young breeders are not killed by autumn they are sure to be killed by the following spring.

Think of it! He penned those words on January 18, 1820, right in Sitka, after spending the summer and autumn on St. Paul Island, closely observing the condition of affairs; and yet this Dr. Jordan, who was introduced to your Committee on Foreign Affairs as the "greatest living authority" on this life, denies that. But the negation is futile; the facts remain. (See Congressional Record, p. 1602, Feb. 2, 1903, above cited.)

Yanovsky closed his report to the St. Petersburg Board of Directors by urging them to stop all killing for a term of years, and then, when resumed, it was to be more careful, and that the herd would be exterminated if this reform was not instituted. That is, the reform of not "culling" the herds. This board did not agree with him, just as Dr. Jordan does not agree with Mr. Elliott. They continued this slaughter. What was the result? In 1834 there were only "8,118 fresh, young," live seals on the hauling grounds of St. Paul Island—this by actual count and as published by Veniaminov in St. Petersburg, 1842. This is said, in volume 2, page 506, of the work above cited:

But instead of curing 12,200, only 4,052 were taken, leaving in 1835 for commercial purposes only 8,118 fresh young seals remaining there altogether.

At the close of 1834, and for a period of 10 years, practically all commercial killing was suspended there; but in 1844 the Russians were able to resume the killing and to safely take 10,000 young male seals; by 1857 they had gradually increased annually, so that they then took safely 50,000; and by 1867, when they were turned over to us, 75,000 were annually safely taken. That shows what had been done on the sealing islands when no such thing as pelagic sealing was known. That was left for us to face for the first time in 1884-1886. It has been said, and it was said the other day before our committee, that it was true that they did not have the pelagic sealers, but that the "Rus-sians killed females indiscriminately" and "drove them off of the rookeries." This was quoted by one of the bureau officials as being an authoritative extract from Elliott's monograph, published in 1884. But it seems that this monograph, from which that quotation was made and charged up to Mr. Elliott, includes Mr. Elliott's denial of the truth of this Russian author. All of this was carefully omitted by the bureau official, who attempted to place the statement in Mr. Elliott's mouth as a correct record of the Russian work. But Mr. Elliott brought the proof before the Committee on Foreign Affairs that the Russians did nothing of the sort. They contemplated the danger in just the same manner as we have done. They never went on the rookeries and drove the females off. The Russian drives were protracted through the whole season. This they were obliged to do, as they had to dry their pelts in their huts or barrabkies by smoking and slow fires. The Russian drives were made over and across the flanks of the breeding grounds, in going to and from the hauling grounds, just as our people do to-day and have been doing for the last 20 years, during August, September, October, and November. In doing this they would bring up a certain proportion of young females known as nubiles, or virgin females, which then were scattered out from the rookeries or breeding organization.

Mr. Elliott tells us that the proportion of this female life so driven up was unknown; and he could not, and no man could, precisely determine it from the present analysis, judging from the average female life during that period after breeding has closed and the harems broken up. He said that the Russian female catch never exceeded 20 per cent of the daily drives after the end of August, and prior to that date not over 5 per cent. That would make an average of 15 per cent killed during the Russian period of diminution, from 1817 to 1834, when the land killing, without any pelagic sealing, actually exterminated that herd. And yet Dr. Jordan and this bureau official want to continue this work during the life of the present convention, or during the next 15 years. I am entirely opposed to it.

Was this lesson of Russian destruction heeded by the McKinley administration? This Jordan-Thompson joint conclusion of agreement of facts was made and signed in State Department November 16, 1897. No. It failed to be seen by the officials; and in this amazing state paper Mr. Jordan declares that under the existing conditions the fur seals of Alaska are entirely safe from extermination. That they had reached in 1897 as low an ebb in number as they ever would, since the killing on the land had become unprofitable. In fact that an "equilibrium" had been obtained. (See articles 15 and 16, "Exhibit B," of "Joint statement of conclusions of fact," Nov. 16, 1897, pp. 1604 and 1605, in Congressional Record, Feb. 2, 1903.) The exact reverse of this joint conclusion as to the facts in the case is the truth; and yet those men stood before our committee and renewed the nonsense. When Mr. Elliott made his report in 1874 of the condition of affairs in Alaska, he said:

That the facts of the abundant supply were too plain for argument. He did not question them, because there were overwhelmingly more seals than desired by the killers there, but that these sources of supply could not last with such a strain as the killing and culling on the land. He urged the following action on the part of the Treasury Department:

It is therefore very important that the Government should have an agent on these rookeries, who should be a man of capacity and have a reasonable education, to observe and report the condition of the rookeries year by year.

No record whatever of this kind was written by any officer of the Treasury Department, who succeeded Mr. Elliott. And not until his report of the summer of 1890 was any reliable information to be had of what had taken place during all those 16 years of his absence. Of the 3,193,670 breeding fur seals and young on the rookeries in 1872, he found 959,455, or scarcely 1,000,000. It was easy for him to account for this, for the pelagic sealer had been at work. However, that was not all of the trouble. How about that loss of the young males on the hauling grounds? If the pelagic sealer was the cause for this ruin of the herd, why should that class of seals which he then killed, as he kills now, the fewest number be the one class so fearfully decimated? No answer has been given by any authority. But Mr. Elliott went up in 1890, as he with a strong prejudice against the pelagic sealer. prejudice could make no answer to these facts, as above stated. The fact is that this increased difficulty of getting the required number of skins caused them to take everything, no matter how small, so that in 1890 they were making such rapid development as to be able to destroy the whole life unless checked in the immediate future.

This whole fur-seal business since 1890 has been badly conducted by the executive agents of our Government, except for that brief interference by Mr. Gresham and Mr. Dingley in 1895, and the interference by John Hay in 1905—a brief interference which was cut short by his untimely death. This record is due entirely to the worthless, inexperienced, and worse than notoriously unfit agents. Their entire "negotiation," which is now spread over 20 years, has resulted in nothing that reflects any credit upon us. It has been an epoch of licensing an annual exhibition of the most indecent and barbarous killing of harmless animals, and the terrible work of slaughtering "mother seals in milk," leaving tens of thousands of the young to slowly starve to death annually since 1800 on the islands. It fairly beggars description.

This startling decline of the Alaskan herd and its contrast with the Russian loss also is best expressed in the following table:

The minority would stay the butcher's club and sheath the butcher's knife at the same time it stops the spear and the gun of the pelagic hunter. Where the greed and the avarice of man have interposed in all natural history to regulate all natural wild life, destruction and extermination and not its conservation have followed in the wake. For one I dissent from that absurd and illogical contention, and believe that way back in the councils of eternity the Great Creator ordained and decreed that natural selection and the survival of the fittest would balance and sustain all wild life and bring it to its complete and majestic fruition.

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Chairman, when this matter was presented to the attention of the House last week, the occasion was extremely hurried, and no fair opportunity was afforded, either for those who favor a closed season upon the Pribilof Islands or those who favor allowing the department a discretion as to the slaughter of seals there, to be heard. I am glad we have now this afternoon a more generous allotment of time in which this important question may be submitted to the House.

I am familiar with nothing more interesting in our literature than the history of the wild life in the North Pacific Ocean. In 1786 a venturesome Russian explorer by the name of Pribilof discovered the islands which now bear his name, and almost concurrently with that discovery it was ascertained that a herd of seals made their habitat upon those islands at certain periods of the year. We have no suggestion in literature or legend prior to that as to the origin or history of this seal herd.

In 1786 the Pribilof Islands, in virtue of the fact that their discoverer was a Russian, became Russian territory, and continued as such until the year 1867, when William H. Seward, with his marvelous prevision as a statesman, acquired that domain for the United States Government. There is no absolutely authentic record as to the number of fur seals that were on the Pribilof Islands in 1786, but the most reliable authorities which are available to us agree that they enumerated substantially 5,000,000 seals. And it ought to be remembered here now that the fur-seal herd on the Pribilof and adjacent islands constitute all the fur seals of that species known to exist in the world.

As I have said, in 1786 there were 5,000,000 seals on the Pribilof Islands. The Russian Government upon discovering that valuable asset began to slaughter the seals under a leasing system, the revenue derived being covered into the imperial treasury. They prosecuted that system until 1834, when it developed, upon examination, that this splendid herd, aggregating 5,000,000 of seals in 1786, had diminished to fewer than 60,000 in 1834, and the Russian Government apprehended immediately that if their program then being pursued should continue that wild life in the North Pacific Ocean would speedily become entirely extinguished. So in 1834, by an order which emanated from St. Petersburg, the slaughter of the fur seals was suspended by the Russian Government itself.

It is idle to insist that the diminution of that herd, as I have described it, was the proximate or incidental result of pelagic sealing. There was no pelagic sealing in the North Pacific Ocean or elsewhere prior to 1886. That is a modern practice that has exhibited its ugly manifestations in this commercial age.

As I say, in 1834 the Russian Government decreed a practical embargo on the butchery of fur seals except such as was necessary for the maintenance of the inhabitants of the islands.

Now, I ask the committee to consider the result of the Russian prohibition. The herd immediately began to rehabilitate itself following 1834, and up to 1867, when we acquired title to the islands and entered into occupancy, in pursuance of an almost absolutely closed season, that herd of seals had advanced from 60,000 in 1834 to 4,700,000 in 1872, the first year when any authentic or reliable census of the seals was taken.

These seals are of a peculiar species. They breed on the Pribilof Islands in June or July of each year, remain until November, and then with their young put out to sea. Their location has been traced month by month. They go south after leaving the Pribilof Islands, down by the Aleutian Islands opposite the southern extremity of the State of California, then circle back to the Pribilof Islands, arriving there every year at a date not varying 10 days from the date of their advent the year previous. They return annually to breed on these islands, and as soon as the pups become old enough they embark on this annual journey.

annual journey.

No scientist has discovered why they take this tour; it is a part of the wild life of that region. They are not controlled by domestic regulations as are domestic animals. Annually, from time immemorial, the herds have made that migration south and back up the California coast to the Pribilof Islands, As a Member near me suggests, it is the instinct of their wild life.

The immigration of this herd was first discovered by Henry W. Elliott, who has been assailed on the floor of this House and in the public prints as a faker and a fraud. He went there in 1872 as a representative of the Government of the United States to investigate and report in respect of that wild life. He found 4,700,000 splendid seals there on the Pribilof Islands. In 1870 the United States Government, imitating the Russian Government, entered into a leasing contract with the North Alaska Fur Co. by which seals were to be slaughtered and the revenue transferred to the Federal Treasury, to continue for 20 years. In 1890, at the expiration of that agreement, another was entered into with another company which expired in 1910. In the latter year the United States Government terminated contractual relations with these companies and entered upon the work of slaughtering the seals under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Department of Commerce and Labor.

Gentlemen advocate a limited killing as contrasted with a closed season. What has been demonstrated in connection with the fur seals? In 1872 they numbered 4,700,000, a splendid, magnificent herd, and in 1911, after 40 years of exploitation—and there is no more generous term that can be applied to it—in 1911, after our Government has exercised 40 years of control, there are now fewer than 120,000 seals on these islands in the North Pacific Ocean. These, gentlemen, are the facts, and they can not be refuted by deriding Henry W. Elliott.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I will ask if it is not true that the testimony of all of the witnesses at the hearings bears out the statement of the gentleman that there are not over 120,000 of that herd at the present time?

Mr. KENDALL. The testimony is uncontradicted. Henry W. Elliott was before the Committee on Foreign Affairs and made the statement that there was that number of seals there, and Mr. Lembkey, who is the Government agent there, said that the statement made by Prof. Elliott was substantially accurate—and when we speak of the Department of Commerce and Labor we mean Mr. Lembkey, because he is the Government agent there upon the islands. So in the last 40 years, starting with 4,700,000 seals, we find that they are now rapidly approaching extinction. What should we do? Do we want to preserve that wild life, or do we want to extinguish it entirely? We are all in favor of the committee bill to abolish pelagic That is a most fiendish and brutal resort of modern What we propose to do by way of amendment commercialism. is to prohibit the killing entirely for a limited season, so that this herd may have an opportunity to rehabilitate itself to the proportions it enjoyed in 1872.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. KENDALL. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL. What effect will that amendment have on the treaties entered into with Great Britain and Japan?

Mr. KENDALL. That is a very pertinent inquiry. I will say in response that this original bill was prepared by the Secretary of State, and as it was presented to the Committee on Foreign Affairs it included a provision for the domestic control of killing on the islands. So no treaty provision can be contravened by the amendment we propose.

Mr. CAMPBELL. As I understand, we are to give up 15 per cent of the receipts arising from our seal fishing.

Mr. KENDALL. Yes
Mr. CAMPBELL. Suppose we refuse to kill any of the herd; what effect will that have on the provisions of the treaty? Will it not justify Japan or England in withdrawing from the

Mr. KENDALL. Not in the slightest degree. The treaty is now effective. It went into operation on the 15th of last December, and it is the supreme law of the nations that are parties

Mr. CAMPBELL. The question is, Would they withdraw from the treaty if we refuse to go on with our seal fishing and give them their proportion of the revenue?

Mr. KENDALL. I have no apprehension on that score whatever, Mr. Chairman, for the reason that one of the provisions of the treaty itself contemplates that the United States Govern-ment may establish a close season. Mr. Chairman, the butchery and slaughter of that seal herd in the North Pacific Ocean have become an international scandal, and the whole civilized world is looking upon it with reproach and abhorrence.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENDALL. Yes.
Mr. DYER. The gentleman speaks of an international question in the slaughter of these seals. What time does he mean to cover by his statement by saying that there has been a great slaughter of seals up there?

Mr. KENDALL. I mean to cover, for the purposes of this discussion, the time from 1872 down to this moment.

Mr. DYER. Does the gentleman mean from the time the Government of the United States has had charge of it?

Mr. KENDALL. The Government of the United States has had charge since 1867.

Mr. DYER. Under contract with different companies.
Mr. KENDALL. Yes; but the Government of the United States absolutely controlled the contract.
Mr. DYER. The last two years the Government had direct control of the killing.

Mr. KENDALL. Yes. The gentleman is correct

Mr. DYER. I would like to ask the gentleman if he has any criticism to make of the Government's action during the last

Mr. KENDALL. If the gentleman will read the reports-

Mr. DYER. I have read them.

Mr. KENDALL. He will discover that the seal herd under Government supervision is disappearing, and that the quality of the sealskin itself is diminishing in the markets of the world.

Mr. DYER. There have been how many killed during the last two years?
Mr. KENDALL. We killed 12,000 last year and 13,000 the year before.

Mr. DYER. And equally that number was killed on the high

Mr. KENDALL. That, I think, is not true. The gentleman is laboring under a delusion which has been inculcated with some enthusiasm by different people around this Capitol. lagic sealing, which I admit to be cruel and reprehensible, is not responsible for the disappearance of the seal life in the North Pacific Ocean.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. KENDALL. For a question, but not for an observation. Mr. DYER. I will ask if the gentleman's statement is not controverted by every scientist and naturalist who testified before the committee?

Mr. KENDALL. No; if the gentleman had read the hearings he would not have asked a question of that character.

Mr. DYER. I have read the hearings.

Mr. KENDALL. I mean if the gentleman had read them with more understanding.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENDALL. For a question.
Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Did not the chairman of the committee last Wednesday, in discussing this proposition, give the figures of the seals killed both upon the sea and land since 1870?

Mr. KENDALL. The chairman gave a good many things here last Wednesday, some fact and some fiction.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. And did not the gentleman reflect the fact that 900,000 had been killed at sea since 1870 as against 2,200,000 killed on land?

Mr. KENDALL. Perhaps so.

Mr. NENDALL. Perhaps so.

Mr. DYER. If the gentleman will permit—

Mr. KENDALL. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have been much diverted by reading the report submitted by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] in support of his bill H. R. 20047. He says that Dr. Leonhard Stejneger, head curator of biology, United States National Museum, has spent a number of years on the Russian seal islands studying seal life, and concludes that there ought not to be a closed season. I have had curiosity enough to investigate as to how much time Dr. Stejneger has devoted to studying seal life on the islands, and that investigation reveals that this renowned scientist has spent all of 10 full days on the Pribilof Islands studying this complex and difficult scientific question. Dr. David Starr Jordan has been cited as an authority, and as an educator he is an authority; but Dr. David Starr Jordan in all the years which have elapsed since 1872 down to this moment, years in which this question has been the subject of vital debate, has spent but 73 days cruising about the Pribilof Islands. Henry W. Elliott went to the Pribilof Islands under appointment of the Treasury Department in 1872, remained there for 19 months studying this wild life. He prepared a chart showing where this herd was in January, where it was in February, where it was in March, where it was in April, where it was in May, and throughout the year. In the elapse of time his chart was adopted by the United States Government and published as a public document. Now, let me submit a circumstance, interesting as reflecting somewhat upon the nice sense of propriety which actuates Dr. David Starr Jordan. Dr. David Starr Jordan wrote a book. He appropriated this chart of Prof. Elliott's and incorporated it into his book as his own. Dr. William T. Hornaday, of New York, subsequently wrote a book. He saw Dr. Jordan's book containing this Elliott chart, and Dr. Hornaday reproduced that chart in his book crediting it to Dr. Jordan. About that time Prof. Elliott became alive to the situation and wrote a letter of protest to Dr. David Starr Jordan. Dr. Jordan was compelled to admit the plagiarism of the chart and that Dr. Elliott was the author of it and the discoverer of the facts it exhibits. [Applause.]

Now, further, Dr. Elliott during his sojourn upon the islands prepared a monograph on the seal question—the first and the most authentic contribution which has ever been made to the literature of that subject. These gentlemen—my good friend from Virginia and my equally good friend from New York—are determined to eliminate Dr. Elliott from this discussion. I admit that he is a troublesome fellow, for he is resolved upon the preservation of this herd, if possible. He went up there wrote this monograph, and the Director of the Census had it printed as a public document for distribution by the Government of the United States. And this is the character of man upon whose testimony we rely here to justify our demand that the season be closed entirely.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENDALL. For a question.

Mr. DYER. The gentleman refers to a monograph of Dr. Elliott. I would like to ask if the views which the gentleman expressed before the committee in its recent hearings were similar to those expressed in the monograph?

Mr. KENDALL. I think the views expressed by Dr. Elliott before the committee and those in the monograph are identical.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. KENDALL. Certainly. Mr. COX of Ohio. The statement has been made in this discussion that the killing off of a certain number of bulls each year will benefit rather than harm the herd. I think the committee would like to hear the gentleman on that point.

Mr. KENDALL. The gentleman from Ohio suggests a contention which is advanced by some estimable people who believe that the best way to preserve life is to destroy it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I would like to ask if Dr. Elliott has not admitted that he has changed his views since his original monograph was issued?

Mr. KENDALL. I am very much surprised that my colleague has accumulated so much misinformation. Dr. Elliott has never made any such admission as that.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. I understood, in reply to the question of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER], that there were not as many seals killed last year—in 1911—by the pelagic sealers as were killed by the United States. I would like to ask the gentleman if that was not his answer?

Mr. KENDALL. I said that the pelagic sealing had been hurtful to this herd. I never have controverted that. That it has been fatal I deny, because I claim that the killing on the land has been more largely responsible for the destruction of the herd.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Has the gentleman made investigation, and does he know that there were a little more than 2,300 seals killed last year by pelagic sealers than were killed by the United States, and that 85 per cent of the seals killed by pelagic sealers were females?

Mr. KENDALL. I do not know that.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Well, that is a fact.

Mr. KENDALL. I do not think there is any responsible authority who will assert that to be the fact, but I do not intend to yield simply for a controversy with the gentleman from Oklahoma. This quesion has become so acute that the imminence of total fur-seal destruction engaged the attention of the President of the United States, and in his message on March 15, 1910, he said:

The herds have been reduced to such an extent that the question of profit has become a mere incident, and the controlling question has become one of conservation.

The President of the United States scorned the argument made by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Floop] that this is a commercial enterprise in which the Government ought to engage, and says that the herd has become so reduced that the question of profit is subordinate to the question of conservation.

There will be an amendment proposed here by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] which is an improvement over the existing situation, I assume—an amendment limiting the killing on those islands. We propose to offer a substitute to that amendment establishing a complete closed season on those islands for a term of years, until the herd shall have an oppor-tunity to be restored to its original proportions. I agree it will cost us some money-that we will forego the revenue which we now derive—but in 10 years that herd will increase from practically 100,000 now to 3,000,000, and they will be the property of the United States Government. Then the Government may enter upon a seasonable and rational taking of sealskins for its own profit.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield at that juncture? Mr. KENDALL. I will. How much more time have I, Mr.

Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Eleven minutes. Mr. COX of Ohio. I will not detail I will not detain the gentleman long, but I would like, if possible, to have the gentleman add to the full measure of information. You are familiar with the fact that the opposition to your theory contends that a multiplicity in the number of bulls leads not only to the destruction of the bulls themselves but the destruction of the cows?

Mr. KENDALL. Yes.

Mr. COX of Ohio. I would respectfully ask the gentleman to go into that phase of the case a bit.

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Chairman, the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio is a very apt one. I have discovered that there is a class of men who believe that nature does not understand its own processes, and that the intelligence of man is more adequate to control the reproduction of wild life than the more adequate to control the reproduction of which hier than the Almighty himself, notwithstanding He established the regulations which prevail. A most interesting contribution to this subject is from Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborne, who is, according to my distinguished friend from New York, a biologist, a zoologist, a paleontologist, and a naturalist. He says in the first clause of his letter—and mark this, gentlemen, as the very absurdity of this proposition ought not to escape observationhe says that if a closed season is established on the Pribilof Islands it will result in the "complete extermination" of that herd. How that could possibly occur we leave to Dr. Osborne himself to explain to a benighted world.

Mr. BUTLER. There was a closed season once before the killing began. If so, how did this herd multiply?

Mr. KENDALL. They multiplied under a closed season until they were 5,000,000, when we came into control. After the first closed season the herd multiplied until there were 4,700,000 seals. But you would be regarded as unorthodox if you questioned the wisdom of these scientists.

Mr. BUTLER. I am in favor of a closed season for 20

Mr. KENDALL. I am glad the gentleman has good views on The natural condition of the fur seal is one of that subject. absolute noninterference by man. Whenever that program has been allowed to operate the fur seals have increased in number. Whenever we have intervened they have diminished in number. And there is only one inference to be drawn from that fact. Nature herself, by the principle of natural selection, provides most wisely for the reproduction of that species. I know that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] says that only one bull is required for 500 cows.

Mr. ROTHERMEL. May I ask the gentleman if fish destroy themselves in the ocean or in the rivers?

Mr. KENDALL. No. But it is the history of wild life that it never has been interfered with by man without peril to itself.

There are some strange terms in the vernacular that applies to the seal herd. The old males are called "bulls"; the females are called "cows"; whereas the progeny are called pups." [Laughter.]

Now, I appeal to this House, in view of our history upon this subject, in view of the immediate danger that this valuable seal life will become entirely extinct, that a proper sense of propriety and caution command us to close the season absolutely and suspend killing entirely for a limited term of years [Applause.]

I yield 10 minutes, Mr. Chairman, to the gentleman from Ohio

[Mr SHARP]

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, if there are other gentlemen who have not spoken on this subject and who desire to speak, I would be glad to yield to them my time. I spoke at considerable length on this subject one week ago to-day, and I am glad the majority of the committee have seen fit since then to make some reasonable concession, to the extent that they now agree to offer an amendment to the original bill which does limit the killing of seals entirely for at least the first year. To that extent the amendment is good. I am heartily in favor of the substitute that will be offered here to-day to the amendment, and I wish to raise my voice in indorsement of all that the brilliant gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Kendall] has just stated.

I wish to say, further, that I am firmly convinced that if the American people understood to-day—and I do not believe that 1 out of 100 does understand—that in addition to pelagic sealing, which has greatly destroyed the herd of seals during the past 30 or 40 years, the United States Government itself is engaged in slaughtering from 12,000 to 13,000 of these animals every year, they would disapprove that policy. It is not a partisan question. It is not a reflection in any sense of the word upon the integrity or the good faith of the policy pursued by the Government itself, but a challenge as to the wisdom of that policy which seeks to rehabilitate a herd of valuable seals by confessedly destroying at least 90 per cent of the entire number of male seals.

Since I had the pleasure of speaking upon this subject a week ago I have had some correspondence with Dr. William T. Hornaday, of the Zoological Gardens in New York City—probably one of the greatest zoologist in the United States—and I am going to occupy two or three minutes of my time in briefly reading an extract from a letter which he sends to me to-day.

In that letter he says:

It is urged that the alleged "surplus" of seals must be kept down by man's intervention, for the good of the herds. I undertake to say that this is the most novel, the most ingenious, and the most amazing theory—for it is only a theory—that ever yet has been propounded by scientific men regarding a wild-animal species. Who can match it with any other theory one-half as absurd? The broad common sense of all mankind will immediately reject it. It is a waste of time to discuss such a proposition.

In another letter, received the day before the one just read,

However, I may at least remind you that my views regarding the necessity for a long close season are already on record in the hearings of at least two Congressional committees—Senator Dixon's and Representative ROTHERMEL'S.

I will add that not only have my views remained unchanged, but it seems to me that the necessity for the 10-year close season that we demanded of Congress in 1910 is now greater than ever before.

At the head of that letter, which comes from the Campfire Club of America, I find this little sentence that, I think, is very apropos to this discussion, and if I only had time I would like to use it at length as the text of my remarks:

The wild life of to-day is not wholly ours to dispose of as we please. It has been given to us in trust. We must account for it to those who come after us and audit our records.

I understand that my friend and colleague from Ohio [Mr. Howland would like to occupy just one or two minutes of my time, and inasmuch as the whole time for our side closes in two minutes I desire to surrender the balance of my time to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, it was not my purpose to engage in this debate, and I should not ask the indulgence of the House if it had not been for a telegram which was received the other day and which has been circulated upon the floor here which seriously reflects upon Prof. Elliott, who is an honored constituent of mine. I therefore send to the Clerk's desk now and ask to have read in my time the following statement from Prof. Henry W. Elliott.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 8, 1912.

Hon. Paul Howland,

House of Representatives.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday, during the debate on the Sulzer fur-seal bill, H. R. 16571, the following telegram was exhibited to certain Members of the House, and references to a lobby against the bill "by pelagic sealers" were made in one or more speeches on the floor:

PALO ALTO, CAL., February 5, 1912.

Hon. WM. Sulzer,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

To incorporate a clause establishing in fur-seal bill a close season prohibiting killing of superfluous males would do no good to herd, but would kill treaty. No one knows this better than the pelagic sealers' lobby, which for 20 years has been led by Henry W. Elliott.

DAVID STARR JORDAN.

It is my duty to the Members of the House, as a good citizen, to present to them the following self-evident proof, that the sender of this telegram, above quoted, is not telling the truth—that he can not tell the truth either—in regard to seal life.

The following record which I have established in the premises declares me to be the most determined and persistent enemy that the pelagic sealer ever has had, or has to-day, and it also makes a crushing denial of the statement of the Hon. Mr. Flood, who emphatically said in his remarks that I "have been discredited by every committee of the House." This mistaken statement of Mr. Flood is marked by "applause."

his remarks that I "have been discredited by every committee of the House." This mistaken statement of Mr. Flood is marked by "applause."

Witness the following facts of record in Congress: In 1894, on December 11, Hon. Nelson Dingley, jr., sent to the Clerk's desk of the House a letter from me, and had it read there. In this letter I anticipated the cruel work of the pelagic sealer, under the license given him by the new and abortive rules of the Bering Seal Tribunal, and urged the enactment of legislation which would put him out of business forever.

Pursuant to my letter Mr. Dingley drew a bill, H. R. 8633, and I appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of the House and urged its passage. The lessees of the seal islands (D. O. Mills and United States Senator Elkins) bitterly opposed me. But the committee sustained me; the chairman, Hon. W. L. Wilson reported the bill (Rept. 1849), and the House passed it February 22 following. But lack of time in which to reach it in the Senate prior to sine die adjournment, March 4, 1895, defeated it.

Again, January 19, 1896, Gov. Dingley reintroduced this bill as H. R. 3206. Again I appeared and urged its passage in Ways and Means. Again the committee sustained me over the bitter opposition of the lessees and the pelagic sealers. The chairman, Hon. Nelson Dingley, jr., reported the bill (Rept. 491), and again it was passed in the House, February 28, 1896. It was defeated in the Senate after a favorable report on it had been made, March 4, 1896, by the Committee on Foreign Relations (by Senator Frye) and placed on the calendar, by the mistaken intervention, March 11, of Richard Olney, Secretary of State.

Again, in 1902, on February 18, I appeared before the Ways and on Foreign Relations (by Senator Frye) and placed on the calendar, by the mistaken intervention, March 11, of Richard Olney, Secretary of State.

Again, in 1902, on February 18, I appeared before the Ways and Means Committee, Hon. Sereno Panne, chairman, and urged the Dingley-Beidler bill, H. R. 13387. Again I was bitterly opposed by the lessees, and this "Scientist" Jordan joined them, and the pelagic-sealing Interest, too—all bound by a bond of common sympathy against me. Again this Ways and Means Committee sustained me, and Hon. J. A. Tawney reported the bill, June 2, 1902 (Rept. 2303). Again the House passed this bill for the third time at my request, under suspension of the rules after full debate, February 2, 1903. But this good bill was tricked to death in the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations after it had been favorably passed upon therein, February 18, 1903.

Again I appeared, in 1904, and urged the passage of the Dillingham bill in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and it was passed in the Senate, reported by Senator Foraker March 17, 1904, and by the House, April 3 following, reported by the Hon. Mr. Hitt, chairman.

This act of April 8, 1904 (the Dillingham bill), securing the power for John Hay to unite with me and frame up the Hay-Elliott fur-seal treaty plan of March 7, 1905 (and which is now at last before the House), was of my own initiation and promotion. It is true that I knew that I had the silent but effective approval of John Hay in the premises, who, as an official, could not promote legislation.

To complete this record of infinite credit thus given me by committees of this House, the chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor, before whom I have filed grave charges of official malfeasance in the killing of fur seals by officials of the Department of Commerce and Labor, can speak for my standing in his committee himself; no one else can.

In conclusion, it is proper for me to call the attention of the Members of this House to the fact that reported from the Ways and Means Committee by Hon. H. L. Dawes, chairman, and the act of April 5, 1890, was reported from the Ways and Means Committee by William McKinley, jr., chairman, and both passed for the express purpose as stated on the floor of the Senate and House at the time, of sending me to Alaska to investigate the condition of the seal herd on the Pribliof Islands.

In the clear light of these official records of this House, what warrant is there for the statement so loudly made on the floor that I have been "discredited by every committee of the House" before whom I have appeared?

appeared?
And also in that clear light does Dr. Jordan appear as a truthful man? A "scientist" must be truthful, or he is a faker.
I submit therefore that Dr. Jordan owes an abject apology to those Members of this House whom he has deceived—especially does he owe that apology to the gentleman from Virginia.

Very truly, yours,

HENRY W. ELLIOTT.

[By unanimous consent Mr. Howland was given leave to extend his remarks in the Record.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time for general debate has expired.

The Clerk will proceed to read the bill by sections.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no citizen of the United States, nor person owing duty of obedience to the laws or the treaties of the United States, nor any of their vessels, nor any vessel of the United States, nor any person belonging to or on board of such vessel, shall kill, capture, or pursue, at any time or in any manner whateven, any fur seal in the waters of the North Pacific Ocean north of the thirtieth parallel of north latitude and including the seas of Bering, Kamchatka, Okhotsk, and Japan; nor shall any such person or vessel kill, capture, or pursue sea otter in any of the waters mentioned beyond the distance of 3 miles from the shore line of the territory of the United States.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I can not agree with the statement of the chairman of the committee [Mr. Sulzer], who, in the discussion of this matter last Wednesday, said that those who are in favor of this amendment for a closed season are against pelagic killing. Neither can I agree with the gentleman from New York [Mr. Harrison], who spoke in advocacy of the amendment for a closed season, and who said that those on the committee who opposed that amendment for a closed season were in favor of no legislation at this session of Congress relative to land killing. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that every member of the Foreign Affairs Committee wants to legislate in the interest of the people in this matter and for the preservation of this herd of seals.

There were different ideas expressed in the committee relative to the preservation of this herd. For my part I favored, and every man on that committee favored, the stopping of pelagic killing, because they believed, as I believe, that it is the killing of seals in the open sea, or pelagic killing, that has brought more deterioration and diminution of the herd than anything else, because the evidence in the hearings reveals the fact that in the pelagic killing 60 or 65 per cent of the seals killed were females. It showed further that when a female seal was killed the unborn fetus was killed, too, and the nursing pup on the rookeries died; so that when a female seal was killed three. seals went out of the herd.

Gentlemen have referred in this discussion to the enormous increase of the herd from 1835 to 1867, reciting that it went up to as many as 5,000,000 seals in that time. Why did they not tell you that this herd has diminished since that time through pelagic killing of seals and not through the land killing of seals? The hearings revealed the fact that pelagic killing started in 1881, that it increased year by year since that time, and that in 1894 it reached the crux, when 65 cruisers plowed those waters engaged in pelagic killing and 60,000 seals were destroyed through pelagic killing, while only 18,000 seals were killed upon the land. There is the evidence in the hearing that the stopping of pelagic killing is essential and that the cessation of land killing is not essential to the preservation of the herd. [Applause.]

The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] was adopted by the Foreign Affairs Committee to be reported as a bill. It would not be offered at this time if it were not for the fact that a small minority of the Foreign Affairs Committee proposed to bring in this bill for a closed season. That is the only reason the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] offers the amendment. What does that amendment propose? It proposes a restriction and regulation of land killing. I am glad to say that every member on the Foreign Affairs Committee favors this bill stopping pelagic killing; but the bill agreed to by our committee by an overwhelming majority, and which is in the form of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood], is to the effect that there shall be no killing of seals upon land this year.

Next year there will be reserved a sufficient number of healthy male seals to serve the cows. In the hearings it was uncontradicted that one bull seal is sufficient to serve 30 cows or female seals. In view of that fact it looks to me to be unreasonable to try to stop land killing altogether for 10 or 15 years, thereby depriving the Government of a very large revenue. [Applause.] It is unnecessarily taking money from the pockets of the people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. I should like to have five minutes more.

Mr. FOSTER of Illinois. I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Mississippi be extended five min-

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that the time of the gentleman from Mississippi be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentlemen who favor the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin] for a closed season of 10 or 15 years, if it should be adopted what will be the outcome? I want to say to the committee that we purchased Alaska for $7,200,000. Within the time we have owned it we have received $11,000,000 revenue from the seal herds alone. We received last year practically half a million dollars.

By restriction and regulation of the killing of the male seals on the rookeries we can preserve the herds the same as if we stopped the killing altogether. If you have a closed season for 10 years, the United States Government will lose a revenue of $10,000,000.

I would like to go to the home of my distinguished friend from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin], and upon his poultry farm there see if he allowed 100 hens and 100 roosters to run together. Why, if such should be the case the people in his district would think him foolish, and would know that he knew nothing about chickens. [Laughter.]

I would like to go to the stock farm of my distinguished friend from Ohio [Mr. Sharp] and see if on that farm he kept 100 mares in the same lot with 100 stallions. Why, if such was the case he, too, would be placed in the foolish class by his constituents. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, it is the same proposition to reserve an equal number of bull seals with the female seals. We can by this amendment which is offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] restrict the regulation on the land to that extent that in 15 years we will have sufficient males for all purposes during the future years. We will preserve the herd and get millions of dollars of revenue from the herd. [Applause.] Mr. Chairman, the life of a seal is approximately 12 years. Should you adopt the amendment for a close season for 15 years every seal now in the herd and that will be born in the next 3 years will be dead and the Government will lose a large revenue that it is entitled to receive.

[Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, this is a bill providing for the necessary legislation to give effect to the treaty entered into last summer between the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia, the primary object of which is to stop pelagic sealing, or the killing of seals at sea, for a period of 15 years. It is contended by everyone that the pelagic sealers kill as many or more seals than are killed on the Pribilof Islands, and that the majority of them are female seals. Whatever figures may be taken as to the number of the seals now comprising the seal herd, it is admitted that the number now is very small compared with what it was previously. Everyone admits that pelagic sealing tends to further decrease the number of the herd, and no objection has been raised on the floor of the House or elsewhere to a cessation of this killing. That being true this bill should pass.

It is urged by some that land killing should also be stopped. Under the law passed in 1910 the killing of seals on land, which is the only kind allowed, is done by Government agents and under regulations of the Department of Commerce and Labor, the law forbidding the killing of any seal under 1 year of age or of any female seal. The Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor have held a number of hearings at which it has been charged that the Government agents during the past two years, while the matter has been in the hands of the Department of Commerce and Labor, have killed seals under 1 year of age and female seals con-trary to the law and to the regulations of the department, and it has further been urged at these hearings that killing on land should be stopped at least for several years.

Practically all of the time of the hearings before this committee has been given to one Henry W. Elliott, who, a number of years ago, was Treasury agent on the Pribilof or seal Islands, and some of the time to Mr. W. T. Hornaday, ex-chairman of the committee on game-protection legislation of the Camp Fire Club of America and at present in charge of the Bronx Zoological Garden. Mr. Elliott disagreed almost entirely with the furseal advisory board, which is composed of the following zoologists and scientists, who were appointed during the last administration of the Department of Commerce and Labor: Dr. David Starr Jordan, president Leland Stanford University; Dr. Leonhard Steinegar, head curator of biology, National Museum; Dr. C. Hart Merriam, late Chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, Department of Agriculture; Dr. Frederick A. Lucas, director of the American Museum of Natural History; Dr. Charles H. Townsend, director of the New York Aquarium; Edwin W. Sims, of Chicago; and Frank H. Hitchcock, Post-master General. Mr. Hornaday has never been on the seal islands and has never seen the fur-seal herd, but has seen two fur seals at the New York Aquarium and in the Bureau of Fisheries in this city that were brought here two years ago. The committee of the Camp Fire Club, which has taken upon itself to criticize the opinions and views of the fur-seal boardall of them, with the exception, perhaps, of the last two, scientific men and zoologists of national reputation, who have visited the fur-seal islands and studied the matter at first hand, some of them several times—is composed of nine New York lawyers, two Wall Street brokers, and one professor, all of whom, like Mr. Hornaday, have never been on the seal islands, and have never seen the fur-seal herd, though, perhaps, one or two of them have seen the two captive fur seals that Mr. Hornaday has seen.

.The Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor has heard one side of this controversy, composed of two questions-first, whether the present Government officials in the Department of Commerce and Labor have violated the law and the regulations of the department, and second, whether or not the killing of seals on land should be stopped. The committee has not heard the agent in charge of the islands, who has been in Washington for several months, or the Chief of the Division of Alaskan Fisheries, who has immediate care and full knowledge of these matters. At the last meeting of the committee it was voted that before a final report should be made the members of the fur-seal advisory board, upon whose advice the Department of Commerce and Labor has acted, should be given an opportunity and should be invited to be heard before the committee.

The bill now before the House, so far as it goes, is approved by everyone, and it should not in any way be amended or modified with respect to matters that have been since last May and will continue to be the subject of the most thorough and searching inquiry and investigation by a committee of the House, namely, the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor. When the committee has reported, and after hearing both sides of this question, it will then be time for the House to decide whether the existing law should be changed. [Applause.]

[The time of Mr. Madden having expired, by unanimous consent it was extended five minutes.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the House to some statements made by the witnesses in the hearings be-fore the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor, which will be found on pages 294, 295,

Mr. Cable is Assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor:

Mr. Cable. Mr. Hornaday, upon whose advice did the Camp Fire Club act in this matter of sending out this letter to the public?

Dr. Hornaday. Well, I might say upon my advice, but I do not wish to take too much credit to myself in saying so. The committee consisted of 15 members, and the committee was unanimous in considering that the sending out of that document was necessary.

Mr. Cable. Will you give the names of the committee and their occurations?

Mr. CABLE. Will you give the names of the committee and their occupations?

Dr. Horndan. I will, with great pleasure. I will first give you the names of the gentlemen who signed the statement that is published in this pamphlet. First appears my name as chairman; then A. S. Houghton, secretary, attorney at law; next, Mr. Julius H. Seymour, who is here as counsel, attorney at law; Mr. Bayard Dominick, jr., treasurer, broker; Mr. Robert B. Lawrence, attorney; Mr. George W. Burleigh, attorney; Leonidas Dennis, attorney; Joseph C. Howe, attorney; Charles D. Cleveland, attorney; Oscar A. Campbell, attorney; Marshall McLean, attorney; E. W. Sanborn, professor; and Stanley D. McGraw, broker.

Mr. Cable. Do you know whether or not these various members of the advisory board have ever visited the seal islands, the Pribilof Islands?

Dr. Hornaday. Yes; I am informed that several of them have.

Mr. Cable. What is the general reputation of the zoologists that you have just mentioned who are members of this board, such as Dr. Lucas, Dr. Townsend, Dr. Stejneger, and Dr. Merriam?

Dr. Hornaday. They are men of good standing in the scientific world. I could go further than that and say they are men of high standing, speaking generally.

Mr. Cable. Now, Doctor, have you visited the Pribilof Islands yourself?
Dr. HORNADAY. No, sir.
Mr. CARLE. You never have?
Dr. HORNADAY, No.

Mr. Cable. Have you ever seen a fur-seal herd?
Dr. Hornaday. No.
Mr. Cable. A live herd?
Dr. Hornaday. Never.
Mr. Cable. Have you ever seen a live fur seal?
Dr. Hornaday. Yes.
Mr. Cable. Where?
Dr. Hornaday. At the New York Aquarium and at the aquarium at the Fish Commission in this city.
Mr. Cable. About when did you see them?
Dr. Hornaday. A year ago last spring was the first time.
Mr. Cable. Have you ever attended one of the sales of the fur-seal skin in London?

Mr. Cable. Do you know whether any of this committee of the Camp Fire Club have visited the Pribilof Islands?
Dr. Hornaday. Not one.
Mr. Cable. None of them has seen a seal herd?
Dr. Hornaday. No, sir.
Mr. Cable. Have any of them ever seen a live seal?
Dr. Hornaday. Oh, yes.
Mr. Cable. Where have they seen them?
Dr. Hornaday. I could not say. I am not sufficiently acquainted with their comings and goings to know where they have seen them, but these men have hunted in the arctic regions, in Labrador, along the coast of Alaska, and in southern California, and they have undoubtedy seen a great many seals.
Mr. Bowers. Fur seals.
Dr. Hornaday. No; I will not say they have seen many fur seals. I do not regard it as at all necessary that a man should be familiar with the anatomy of a fur seal and with the skin weights of fur seal, I will go so far as to say, to know something about the political history of the matter and what is necessary to save them from annihilation by fur-seal poachers.

fur-seal poachers

Mr. CLINE. Mr. Speaker, in the limited time that I have at my command I want to make an observation bearing upon the statement of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin] with reference to the division of the majority members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. It never has been contended by the majority members or by the committee itself that this bill could not be amended. It was a matter of policy among the members of the committee that the original bill ought first to deal with the international question.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. CLINE. No; not now—and consequently that there ought to be a bill introduced limiting and controlling the number of seals to be taken as a mere domestic proposition; but it has never been contended that this bill was not subject to amendment. It was merely a matter of policy, Mr. Chairman, and I agree with the chairman of this committee on that policy because from the indefinite information that we have with reference to this seal question we may want to legislate next year on the domestic proposition, and we may want to legislate the next year on that proposition again. But we do want to settle the question of pelagic sealing for the entire 15 years, as provided for under the treaty, without reference to any other proposition. That was the policy of the committee, not that the bill could not be amended. The distinguished gentleman from Arkansas issues a sweeping invitation to any member of this committee to show from any authority that the depreciation of the herd in the early part of the nineteenth century was due to the killing of the females.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Upon the rookeries to any ap-

Mr. CLINE. It was the killing that depleted the herd, no matter whether it was upon the rookeries or upon the open sea. I am going to quote from the monograph of Dr. Elliott on page 114 of the hearings, for whom the distinguished gentleman holds authority to appear here; and it can not be said now, Mr. Chairman, that Dr. Elliott made a misrepresentation of the facts when he was representing the American Government in that business and offered to the American people a statement of fact that he expected the American Government to rely upon as being true. He said:

From this time up to 1822 taking fur seals progressed on both islands without economy, as if there was a race in killing for the most skins. Cows were taken in a drive and killed and were also driven from the rookerles to places where they were slaughtered.

That was on the islands and in the rookeries, and that is the statement of Dr. Elliott. I am not so sure that credence ought not to be given to everything that Dr. Elliott says, but these distinguished gentlemen who are anchoring their defense on this proposition in Dr. Elliott's testimony are in no position to criticize what he says in his book, which he issued, and which afterwards became a state paper.

My distinguished friend from Iowa [Mr. Kendall], for whom

I have as high regard as any Member of this House, takes occasion to differ with the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin]. The distinguished gentleman says that pelagic sealing is not responsible for the depreciation of seal life. Not a single man has testified before that committee who has not said that pelagic sealing was destructive of seal life, and every man who presumed to have any knowledge upon that subject said that in the killing of seals in the ocean 85 per cent of the females were killed. Why? Because the males were back upon the land at that particular period. And they not only killed 85 per cent of the females, but every time they killed a female they killed three seals. They killed the seal that the mother was carrying, they took away the sustenance of the pup upon the island, and they also killed the mother.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time may be extended for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana may be extended for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CLINE. Now, Mr. Chairman, one other proposition. There is not a man in this House but who wants every female seal on the Pribilof Islands protected—not one—any intimation with reference to the majority of this committee to the contrary notwithstanding. What we propose to do is to regulate and protect every female seal on the islands. Why, my friend says pelagic sealing was not the cause of the depletion of the herd, but it was the killing on the islands. What difference does it make, gentlemen, where the female seal is killed? What difference does it make in the result?

The difference is three to one as against the killing in the open sea, because when you kill in the open sea you kill three instead of one. Now, Mr. Chairman, my distinguished friend from Iowa [Mr. Kendall] says that Dr. David Starr Jordan was only upon the islands 60 days, and some other gentleman here testified that another scientist was only upon the islands for 10 days, but he forgets this fact that Mr. Lembkey, who has been in the employ of the Government, has been on the islands for 10 years, winter and summer, and had the opportunity to investigate and from observation form a proper conclusion with reference to the protection of this seal herd and agrees with the report of the committee, Mr. Floop's amendment, that it is the proper course to pursue. On the contrary, the theory advanced by other members of this committee is not supported by a single man, except Mr. Elliott. Mr. Elliott was invited by the committee and by the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas to bring in the scientists

Mr. KENDALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLINE. Yes. Mr. KENDALL. Did not Mr. Elliott there present to the chairman of the committee the names of six distinguished scientists and ask that they be summoned before the committee?

Mr. CLINE. I do not know, but I was saying—

Mr. KENDALL. Then the gentleman ought not to make a statement without being advised.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. CLINE. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia. Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I want to state I undertook to find out from the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin] yesterday who those gentlemen were and he did not know.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. CLINE. I yield. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I will ask the gentleman from Virginia and the gentleman from Indiana, if I did not myself at least half a dozen times and the last time insist that these hearings might be opened again to give these gentlemen, whose names were given to me by Dr. Elliott, a chance to appear before the committee and the request was denied.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The gentleman did not know who they were and we did not know who they were, and if the gentleman had known who they were he would not be maintaining their cause here to-day.

Mr. CLINE. I am going to read from the hearings, on page

Mr. Elliott. Do you want me to prepare a list and submit it? Mr. Goodwin. Yes; and put it in the record. Mr. Elliott. Yes; that would be the best plan.

And that was in January of this year. This was Mr. Elliott's response in regard to eminent scientists who were able to support him in his contention.

Mr. TOWNER. Will the gentleman permit a question? Mr. CLINE. Yes.

Mr. TOWNER. Is it not true that at no time has Mr. Elliott, or any Member of the House speaking for him, ever given to the committee the names of a single man—scientist—except Dr. Elliott himself?

Mr. CLINE. There has not been a period during the hearings on this subject but what Dr. Elliott could have come before the committee and put in his corroborative testimony of different scientists of the country if he had any to offer.

Mr. KENDALL. Did not Mr. Elliott furnish the names in open committee meeting of six scientists to the chairman of the committee and request the chairman to subpoena those witnesses before the committee in its hearings? Is not that Mr. GOODWIN. And did not-Mr. CLINE. One at a time, gentlemen.

Mr. KENDALL. Is not that true? Mr. CLINE. I am unable to answer that question; but the distinguished chairman of the committee may, and I will yield to the chairman to answer that.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, perhaps I can answer this question. I was the one who took down the names that Dr. Elliott mentioned, and there were five or six of them, if I remember. But I learned afterwards that these gentlemen did not agree

Mr. KENDALL. Why did you have them before the committee, then?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that his time be extended for five minutes.

Mr. CLINE. Two minutes will be sufficient.

Mr. KENDALL. Two minutes in order to give the gentleman from New York [Mr. Sulzer] an opportunity to answer. The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, all through this matter I want to say that I have been very courteous to Mr. Elliott. I have indulged him in every way. Mr. Elliott looks at this proposition from one angle. He says he wants to preserve wild animal life in this country, and to that end I am with him. I have been working along those lines ever since I was a boy, and I am going to work along those lines as long as I live. That is the reason I have been so kind and courteous to Mr. Elliott. gave him all the time before the committee he wanted, not only for himself, but for every friend he could summon from every part of this country to testify before the committee. He produced not a witness

Mr. CLINE. I think that answers the question. [Laughter.]
Mr. SULZER. Evidently he could not produce a witness.
Mr. KENDALL. Will you answer the question now? Did he not furnish the names of six witnesses and ask you to subpoena them?

Mr. SULZER. As chairman of the committee I have no power to subpœna witnesses. That power lies with the committee. I have here testimony from some of these gentlemen. I am going to read it when I get a chance. It does not corroborate Mr. Elliott.

Mr. CLINE. You do that in your own time. Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I think the time of the gentleman from Indiana ought to be extended. It has all been consumed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Sulzer].

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana may be extended two minutes

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana be extended for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana be extended for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CLINE. I understand I get a guaranty with that that I have the five minutes. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, I want to direct the attention of the Chair to the fact that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Townsend] is a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is aware of that fact, and will recognize him at the proper time.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KENDALL] Mr. SULZER. should have yielded time from the 50 minutes he had at the

Mr. Chairman, this one fact stands out very apparent in this discussion, and that is that Dr. Elliott has never presented the testimony of a single individual, although he has had the opportunity for days and weeks in which to do so. On the contrary, the position of the committee, as evidenced by the amendment that it offers to this bill, is supported by whom? It is supported by Mr. Earl, by Mr. Smith, and by Mr. Evermann, gentlemen who have been upon the islands and have visited this herd, and know what its habits are, and have formed their opinion from observation and coming in contact with the actual facts as they exist. It is further supported by David Starr Jordan, by Leonhard Steineger, F. A. Lucas, George A. Clark, and Joseph Stanley Browne, and other gen-tlemen whose reputations have never been attacked in any court or by any person. Are these men to be discredited simply because they believed in the proposition that to limit the number of males in the herd is for the best interests of all concerned and the best interests of the Government?

Why, it is considered in the evidence, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, that when a male seal becomes 7 years old he is absolutely worthless so far as his commercial value is concerned; and yet these gentlemen want to increase the number of male seals on the islands, that have no commercial value whatever, when the American Government could obtain a revenue for the purpose of discharging its obligations to these three different powers that have entered into a compact with it. mere assertion of what the result would be, unaccompanied with the opinions of distinguished men who are authority upon this question, ought not to be taken very seriously. Each member of the committee is in favor of measures that will protect every female seal upon the island.
Mr. TOWNSEND rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will call the attention of the committee to the fact that there is no amendment pending at the present time.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] was whimsical and interesting in his argument that the testimony of Dr. Hornaday should not be received with respect, because Dr. Hornaday has never visited the Pribilof Islands. As a corollary, Mr. Chairman, we should cease our studies of Mars, because none of our astronomers have ever visited Mars. [Applause.] We should cease trying to determine how the architects of the Pyramids or of the palace of Persepolis worked, because none of us has the honor of the acquaintance of those architects. [Applause.]

Dr. Hornaday is the best-known zoologist and biologist in America. He is opposed in the association, a part of whose operation he is in charge of, the Zoological Park in the Bronx, by Mr. Osborne and a certain Madison Grant. It occurred to me during the deliberations of our committee to send for that useful volume, Who's Who in America; and when our distinguished chairman was informing us that the Madison Grant and Mr. Osborne's testimony could be taken as opposed to Dr. Hornaday's, we looked over Who's Who in America, and we found that Mr. Osborne is distinguished solely as a paleontologist, and Mr. Madison Grant is chiefly distinguished because he is a member of the Knickerbocker Club, of Fifth Avenue, New York. [Applause.]

Mr. SULZER. That is terrible. [Laughter.]
Mr. TOWNSEND. As opposed to the testimony of Mr. Madison Grant, of the Knickerbocker Club, of New York, and Mr. Osborne, some time or frequently of the Deserts of the Sahara, we had the testimony of Dr. Hornaday, as I say, the most distinguished zoologist in this country. It has been charged here in debate recently that Prof. Elliott had no corroborative testimony to his testimony before the committee. In a rather disorderly way, unfortunately, that question was discussed. I will say—and if I am not accurately right I will ask the distinguished chairman of our committee to correct me—upon one occasion Dr. Elliott, being asked by another member of the committee to do so, did name six scientists who were willing to come before the committee and testify in behalf of the Elliott Upon a later occasion two members of the committee distinctly asked the chairman if he would not postpone, or have postponed, the report of this matter to the House until Dr. Elliott could be thus corroborated.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from New Jersey yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New Jersey yield to the gentleman from New York? Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. SULZER. I would like to ask the gentleman from New Jersey if he can tell us the names of the scientists to whom he

Mr. TOWNSEND. No; I have not the names. Some one took the names down. It is not the part or the duty of every member of the committee to take stenographic notes of affairs of this kind. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] took them down at the time.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. TOWNSEND. No; I refuse to yield at this time.
Mr. BARTHOLDT. Just for a minute. It is not true, as has been stated here by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Ken-DALL], who, I believe, made the statement inadvertently, it is not true that Dr. Elliott asked that these men be sent for, but he was asked the question by the chairman of the committee, or some member of the committee, as to whether he could name any other scientists in the United States who would corroborate him.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will say to the gentleman from Missouri that something very much more important than the request of a witness was asked. Three members of the committee asked it, and we were refused.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. He did not request the committee to send for these men

Mr. TOWNSEND. Does the gentleman from Missouri insist that it is more important that the wishes of a witness should be complied with than that the expressed wishes of three members of the committee should be complied with?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I will answer the question. Prof. Elliott had more time before the committee than any other witness. If he was really as much interested in this subject as his friends here on the floor try to make the House believe, then it was his business to try and secure corroborative evidence. But he did not produce one single witness. The only witness on that side of the question was himself.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What the gentleman from Missouri has said may be interesting as applied to something that has nothing to do with this case, but-

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the time of the gentleman be extended two minutes, in order that I may have an opportunity to ask him a question.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. Chairman, I observe that the chairman of the committee asked for five minutes for people on his

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the time of the gentleman be extended five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Sulzer] asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Townsend] be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Now I will hear the gentleman's question with pleasure.

Mr. SULZER. The gentleman from New Jersey and myself are old friends, and I know he would not do his committee an injustice. I would like the gentleman, who has given a great deal of time and consideration to this fur-seal proposition ever since he has been a Member of Congress, to tell us if he knows of any man in the United States who corroborates Mr. Elliott in favor of a closed season except Dr. Hornaday-and the latter only favors it for a period of 10 years?

Mr. TOWNSEND. In answer to that, Mr. Chairman, I will say that I would be much better equipped to answer the chairman's question if the chairman had granted the request of three members of the committee to subpæna six men to testify.

[Applause.]

Mr. SULZER. That request was never made to the committee until the hearings were closed and the evidence printed.
Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. Chairman, in the limited time that I have I can not yield further.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. SULZER. The gentleman has been conducting an investigation before another committee. What of that?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I can not yield further. I want to say that a week ago to-day the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee eloquently portrayed the unhappy lot of the seals upon the high seas. All he said was true, and nothing that he said could have been better expressed. Unfortunately, his inclination or his time did not permit him to picture the unhappy lot of the seals upon the Pribilof Islands, and that is something that this committee should be earnestly engaged in learning about. [Applause.]

For every two seals that have been killed upon the high seas in the last 25 or 30 years, five seals have been killed upon the Pribliof Islands. They say that pelagic sealing is responsible for the depletion and almost complete extinction of the herd. In the bringing about of this horrible condition of this herd, for which the Department of Commerce and Labor is responsible. sible, two and one-half times as many seals have been killed upon the land as have been killed upon the sea.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Did not the gentleman from New York [Mr. Harrison], in his speech one week ago to-day, give a table of all the seals killed, both upon land and upon the sea, from 1870 until 1911, inclusive, showing that 900,000 seals have been killed upon the sea as against 2,200,000 seals killed upon the islands?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I thank the gentleman for that corroboration.

Now, in the minute that I have left, let me depict, without the eloquence of our distinguished chairman, the unhappy lot of the seals upon the land. Early in the morning, during the very brief time of the killing on the islands, the drivers go down to the edge of the sea, wearing long coats that make them look like ghosts, and slowly move up the young male seals, and among them some young females, toward the killing grounds. These killing grounds are at various distances from the seashore, some of the salting houses being two miles and a half from the shore. They drive them up there in order to make them carry their own skins up to the place where they are to be deprived of them. As this driving proceeds other natives stand on either side and form this unhappy procession to the slaughter into rather narrow columns of three, four, or five seals. When they get to a convenient place to remove the skins and take them to the salting houses men stand there with clubs.

The seal is an animal of tremendous physical endurance, but unfortunately it has a very thin skull, almost like a sheet of ivory; and as this overworked, overheated, unnaturally driven herd are going up there to the killing grounds they are rapped on their heads with clubs and laid low.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. TOWNSEND. I ask two minutes more. I should like to finish this description.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that his time be extended two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOWNSEND. At a convenient time a skinner comes along and skins the dead seals. The bodies of these seals are left there in great numbers. Not all of them are left. Some of them are used immediately for food by the natives, but a great number are left there.

Now, what I want to impress upon this committee in relation to the amendments that will be offered is this, that there is something more than the necessity of leaving a sufficient number of adult males to serve the cows on that island. I believe that a wild life like that can be destroyed in a very considerable degree by the unnatural conditions under which the seals are forced to live and breed. I mean that the breeding cows on the rookeries are absolutely made aware of the fact that this horrible and bloody slaughter is going on, in one case within 150 yards of them. I have been told that they make such an uproar that they are not aware of the noise of the killing. But the same authority states that the scent of a human being will frighten a seal at a very much greater distance than the distance between the killing grounds and the rookeries. Therefore I say a closed season of some limit should be imposed, because we are destroying that herd not only by this tremendous killing but by disturbing the natural conditions under which the greatest and most successful breeding is carried on. [Applause.]

I withdraw my pro forma amendment.
Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the amendment that I sent to the desk read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

To determine the number of fur seals to be taken annually on the Pribliof Islands, or any other islands, or shores of the waters mentioned in the first article of said convention and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, to which any seal herds hereafter resort, and to direct the taking of the same: Provided, however, That no seals shall be killed in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1912, except such as may be necessary for food purposes only: And provided further, That no seals shall be killed at any time except 3-year-old males not needed for breeding purposes: And provided further, That the number of 3-year-old males selected from among the finest and most perfect seals of that age, found on the hauling grounds, to be reserved for breeding purposes in each year ending August 1 shall not be fewer than the following: In 1913, 2,000; in 1914, 2,500; in 1915, 3,000; in 1916, 3,500; in 1917, and in each year thereafter until 1926, inclusive, 4,000; and in 1922, and in each year thereafter until 1926, inclusive, 5,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, e. realignments we incurive incurive.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. Is this offered as a substitute for the committee amendment to strike out? I notice that the language to be inserted is the identical language that the committee recommends to be stricken out.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. A portion of it is.
Mr. MANN. Is this offered as a substitute for the motion to strike out?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes. There is considerably more to this amendment than that which is stricken out.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Has the gentleman from Virginia changed his opinion as to the confusion of international and domestic policies in this respect?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will say to the gentleman from Missouri that I have not; but at a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Affairs this morning it was decided in deference to the views of the minority on this question in the committee to pursue this course.

Mr. KENDALL. If the gentleman will allow me, was not

Mr. KENDALL. If the gentleman will allow me, was not that proposition advanced by the chairman of the committee?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The chairman made the proposition as a peace offering to the minority.

Mr. KENDALL. We have not had anything yet from the chairman but war clubs.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I think the war clubs came principally from the gentleman from Iowa. I think the chairman of the committee was inclined to be peaceful, but the gentleman from Iowa and those who stood with him were inclined to make war on the chairman.

Mr. KENDALL. There has been only one section of the bill read; will the chairman allow me to make a suggestion? Does not the gentleman from Virginia think that it would be wiser to read the bill until we reach the place where his amendment comes in?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I would be glad to see that done. Mr. SULZER. I ask, Mr. Chairman, that the bill be now read, section by section, until we come to section 11.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

SEC. 2. That no citizen of the United States, nor person above described in the first section, shall equip, use, or employ, or furnish aid in equipping, using, or employing, or furnish supplies to any vessel used or employed, or to be used or employed, in carrying on or taking part in pelagic sealing in said waters, nor shall any of their vessels nor any vessel of the United States be so used or employed; and no person or vessel shall use any of the ports or harbors of the United States, or any part of the territory of the United States, for any purposes whatsoever connected with the operations of pelagic sealing in the waters named in the first section of this act; and no vessel which is engaged or employed, or intended to be engaged or employed, for or in connection with pelagic sealing in such waters shall use any of the ports or harbors or any part of the territory of the United States for any purpose whatsoever.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, on line 20, page 2, after the word "sealing," I move to amend by inserting the words "or in sea-otter hunting."

The Clerk will report the amendment. The CHAIRMAN.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 20, after the word "sealing" insert the words "or in sea-otter hunting." $\,$

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I also move to amend on page 3, line 2, after the word "sealing," by inserting the words "or sea-otter hunting."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SULZER. Also, on page 3, line 5, after the word "sealing" insert the words "or sea-otter hunting."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word

Mr. SULZER. Will the gentleman from Iowa allow the bill to be read until we get to section 11?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes; with the understanding that I shall be recognized at that time.

Mr. SHERLEY. But there are quite a number of gentlemen who want to speak, not particularly with reference to section 11. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to proceed with the reading of the bill until section 11 is reached.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think unanimous con-Mr. MANN. sent can be given to that without violating the rules of the

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, when at the opening of this discussion I inquired of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KENDALL] if Dr. Elliott had not admitted before the committee that he had changed his views on this question, the gentleman very courteously replied that he was surprised that I had so much misinformation and that Dr. Elliott had stated nothing of the kind. For the information of this committee, I desire now to read a portion of Dr. Elliott's testimony, reported on page 146 of the hearings before the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Dr. Elliott said:

Affairs. Dr. Elliott said:

Mr. Chairran and gentlemen of the committee, Dr. Evermann has read to you an extract from my testimony, given to a House committee in 1888, which declares that I then had no objection to the land killing as it was then conducted and is to-day.

That is a statement which I made in good faith, as I had stated it in my report of 1874, and 14 years after I had surveyed the work officially.

But when I again visited the islands in 1890 my studies then opened my eyes to the fact that I had been mistaken in my opinion of 1874, and, as quoted by Dr. Evermann, I called attention to this fact in my report of 1890 to the Secretary of the Treasury; that I was wrong in my theory of 1874; that the work done during the 16 years which had elapsed between 1874 and 1890 had satisfied me of my error.

And further, Mr. Elliott then said:

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Is it not a fact that in 1874, after Prof. Elliott had been on the islands from 1872 to 1874, 3 years instead of 16 months, as the gentleman said, the herd was so large, numbering 4,700,000, that he thought that the killing then going on would be unappreciable so far as the extinction of the herd was concerned, but that when he returned to the island in 1890, at the instance of Congress, he found that herd reduced to less than 1,000,000, because not only pelagic sealing but land killing had been going on and had exterminated the wild life.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield further, but I will answer the gentleman as I proceed.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I do not think I have the time. regret that I can not yield. I want to show to this committee by the record of the fur-seal rookeries that the killing of a proper number of males upon land will not diminish the herd. The facts are as stated by my colleague from Iowa, that when Russia took possession of the Pribilof Islands there were somewhere between four and five million seals on the islands, and it is a fact that by indiscriminate killing they were reduced in 1835 to something like 60,000. Then, contrary to the impression given by my colleague, and by a number of gentlemen upon this floor, the killing did not entirely cease up to the time when Alaska was ceded to the United States. It is true that there was a close season, but that was for only 10 years, and after the expiration of that time, under certain regulations, a grad-ually increasing number of the male seals were killed, until just the year before 1867, when Alaska was ceded to the United States, 75,000 male seals were killed by the Russians, and the herd was increasing all the time. There were between four and five million at the time that Alaska was ceded to this country. The first year we held it there were no regulations, and an enormous number, estimated at 360,000, were killed. After that time we proceeded under regulations to kill about 100,000 males each year without any perceptible diminution of the herd, until along in 1885, after pelagic sealing had commenced. That is the record, that under the supervision of the Russian Government, notwithstanding the fact that male seals were being killed right along, that herd continued to increase, and did not decrease, until pelagic sealing commenced. Pelagic sealing commenced in 1881, but did not reach any great proportions until 1885. Then, and not until then, it was found that the herd commenced to diminish. These facts are uncon-troverted and can not be controverted. They show that there is no necessity for a complete close season upon the islands, and that the herd will, under proper regulations, continue to increase if only a limited number of the male seals are killed.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I now ask that section 3 be

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard against the pro forma amendment.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on section 2 be closed after the gentleman from Kentucky speaks. Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I would suggest that there has been a sort of understanding that the reading would continue down to the point where I desire to offer an amendment, and that then I would have the floor.

Mr. SHERLEY. But the gentleman had the floor and ielded.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I yielded for the purpose of reading the bill down to the point where my amendment is germane. Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a suggestion? Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Kentucky will understand that we have agreed to vote on the bill and amendments at half after 3 o'clock. It might be possible to delay, by talking on previous sections, so that the section which is really the subject of controversy would not be reached by half past 3, and I think no one desires that.

Mr. SHERLEY. I have no desire to do that, and I will yield the floor with the understanding that at the end of the reading of this paragraph the gentleman from Virginia be recognized and that I then be recognized.

Mr. SULZER. When we reach section 12.

Mr. SHERLEY. The point is that I do not want to lose the opportunity of being heard.

Mr. SULZER. The gentleman will not lose that opportunity. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky will understand that the Chair has no power in the matter.

Mr. SHERLEY. Unquestionably not; but there is an understanding that can be carried out.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. KENDALL. But is the gentleman from Kentucky taken off his feet?

The CHAIRMAN. No; but the pro forma amendment has been withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. That the provisions of the first and second sections of this act shall not apply to Indians, Alous, Aleuts, or other aborigines dwelling on the coast of the waters mentioned in the first section of this act who carry on pelagic scaling in canoes or undecked boats propelled wholly by paddles, oars, or salls, and not transported by or used in connection with other vessels, and manned by not more than five persons each, in the way hitherto practiced by the said Indians, Aleuts, or other aborigines, and without the use of firearms: Provided, however, That the exception made in this section shall not apply to Indians, Alnos, Aleuts, or other aborigines in the employment of other persons or who shall kill, capture, or pursue fur seals under contract to deliver the skins to any person.

The following committee amendment was read:

Page 3, line 20, after the word "seals," insert "or sea otters."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, in line 9, after the word "Indians," strike out the word "Ainos."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9, after the word "Indians," strike out the word "Ainos."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. SULZER. In line 16, after the letter "g" in the word "aborignes," insert the letter "i."

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 4. That the importation or bringing into territory of the United States, by any person whatsoever, of skins of fur seals taken in the waters mentioned in the first section of this act, or of skins identified as those of the species known as Callorhinus alascanus, Callorhinus ursinus, and Callorhinus kurilensis, or belonging to the American, Russian, or Japanese herds, whether raw, dressed, dyed, or manufactured, except such as have been taken under the authority of the respective parties to said convention, to which the breeding grounds of such herds belong, and have been officially marked and certified as having been so taken, is hereby prohibited; and all such articles imported or brought in after this act shall take effect shall not be permitted to be exported, but shall be seized and forfeited to the United States.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, on page 3, line 24, after the word "seals," insert the words "or sea otters."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 24, after the word "seals," insert the words "or sea otters."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 6. That every person guilty of a violation of the provisions of said convention, or of this act, or of any regulations made thereunder, shall, for each offense, be fined not less than $200 or more than $2,000, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both; and every vessel, its tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo, at any time used or employed in violation of this act, or of the regulations made thereunder, shall be forfeited to the United States.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, in the first line of section 6, after the word "violation," insert the words "of any," so that it will read "guilty of a violation of any of the provisions."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 1, section 6, page 5, insert after the word "violation" the words "of any."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.
Mr. SULZER. And on line 3, the word "regulations" should be "regulation." Strike out the letter "s."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment,

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 3, strike out the letter "s" at the end of "regulations."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 7. That if any vessel shall be found within the waters to which this act applies, having on board fur-seal skins, or bodies of seals, or apparatus or implements for killing or taking seals, it shall be presumed that such vessel was used or employed in the killing of said seals, or that said apparatus or implements were used in violation of this act, until the contrary is proved to the satisfaction of the court, in so far as such vessel, apparatus, and implements are subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

The committee amendments were read, as follows:

On page 5, line 12, after the word "skins," insert the words "or sea-otter skins," and after the word "seals," in line 12, same page, linsert the words "or sea otters." In line 13, after the word "seals," insert the words "or sea otters."

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 9. That it shall be the duty of the President to cause a guard or patrol to be maintained in the waters frequented by the seal herd or herds and sea otter, in the protection of which the United States is especially interested, composed of naval or other public vessels of the United States designated by him for such service; and any officer of any such vessel engaged in such service and any other officers duly designated by the President may search any vessel of the United States, in port, or in territorial waters of the United States, or on the high seas, when suspected of having violated, or being about to violate, the provisions of said convention, or of this act, or of any regulations made thereunder, and may seize such vessel and the officers and crew thereof and bring them into the most accessible port of the Territory and States mentioned in the eighth section of this act for trial.

SEC. 11. That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, or his authorized agents, shall have authority to receive on behalf of the United States any fur-seal skins taken as provided in the thirteenth and fourteenth articles of said convention and tendered for delivery by the Governments of Japan and Great Britain in accordance with the terms of said articles; and all skins which are or shall become the property of the United States from any source whatsoever shall be sold by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in such market at such times and in such manner as he may deem most advantageous; and the proceeds of such sale or sales shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States. And the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall likewise have authority to determine the number of fur seals to be taken annually on the Pribliof Islands, or any other lands or shores of the waters mentioned in the first article of said convention and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States to which any seal herds hereafter resort; to direct the taking of the same; to deliver to the authorized agents of the Canadian Government and the Japanese Government the skins to which they are entitled under the provisions of the tenth article of said convention; to pay to Great Britain and Japan such sums as they are entitled to receive, respectively, under the provisions of the eleventh article of said convention; and to do or perform, or cause to be done or performed, any and every act which the United States is authorized or obliged to do or perform by the provisions of the tenth, releventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth articles of said convention; and to carry out the provisions of the said eleventh article there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $400,000.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Arkansas rise?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I wish to offer an amendment and have it pending while the gentleman from Virginia addresses the House.

Amend H. R. 165/I by striking out section 11 and substituting the following:

"Sec. 11. That from and after the approval of this act all killing of fur seals on the Pribilof Islands, or anywhere within the jurisdiction of the United States in Alaska. shall be suspended for a period of five years and shall be, and is hereby, declared to be unlawful, and all punishments and penalties heretofore enacted for the killing of fur seals shall be applicable and inflicted upon offenders under this section: Provided, That this prohibition shall not apply to the annual killing on St. Paul Island of 1,500 small male seals for natives' food and 500 small male seals for natives' food on St. George Island, the skins of which shall be preserved and annually sold by the Government, and proceeds of such annual sales shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States: Provided further, That at the expiration of the said five years' suspension of all commercial killing on the said Pribliof Islands said killing may be resumed thereon as the Government shall thereafter determine to be safe and proper."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. Is this offered as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] or as

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Arkansas to offer this as a substitute for the pending amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. MANN. It is not a substitute for the pending amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is trying to ascertain the manner in which it was proposed to be offered by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin].

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, I offered that as a substitute for section 11, as I understood.

Mr. MANN. It should read "strike out section 11 and insert," and so forth.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. That is the motion as set forth in the substitute and read by the Clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas desire to consider that substitute as pending?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has the right to make that re-

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I have offered is what was a bill, which was reported by the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and is now offered as an amendment to the pending bill in order to allay the fears of some members of the committee, who were apprehensive lest, after we pass the pending bill, this subsequent bill might not be enacted into law.

The bill, or amendment as it now is, is the result of a careful investigation by the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the fur-scal question, so far as it relates to the killing of the seals upon the American islands. It provides that there shall be a close season for one year. That was provided because there are now supposed to be only about 3,000 or 3,500 3-year-old males in the herd, and it was the sense of the committee that there should be no seals killed except 3-year-olds. The pelts of the 3-year-olds are more valuable than at any other age, and the committee had reached a determination to limit the killing to 3-year-olds. Then we ascertained, as I stated, that during the season of 1912 there would probably be only about 3,500 3-year olds. The treaty provides—

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt the gentleman right there?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield to the gentleman from Connecticut? Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. May I ask, for information purely, how it is determined what age they are, and what prevents the killing of others than male seals only?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I would say to the gentleman that the natives who do the killing seem to know the age prescribed, because they have killed very few in the past few years under the age limit prescribed by the department here, which is 2 years.

Mr. TILSON. So that an expert may tell by looking at them?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes; by looking at them. We were informed by the gentlemen who appeared before our committee that there would be no trouble in determining the 3-year-olds.

Now, as I was going on to say, the treaty provides that if there is any killing for commercial purposes, as distinguished from killing for food purposes, we shall deliver to England 1,000 skins and Japan 1,000. These 3-year-old skins are worth $40 apiece, so that the value of what we would give to each one of these nations would be $40,000, or $50,000 for the two. If we do not kill any for commercial purposes, but only for food purposes, the treaty provides that we shall pay these nations $10,000 each, so that there is a difference involved to us of $60,000 between killing any for commercial purposes and killing only for food purposes. For this reason we decided for the year 1912 that there should be no killing except for food purposes, and after that the purpose of the committee was to provide a sufficient number of males for breeding purposes

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. With pleasure.

Mr. SHARP. In the amendment which the gentleman proposes here the different numbers that he cites are not the number of male seals that are to be killed, but the number that are to be left. Is that correct?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. This amendment provides the number to be reserved, and they are to be the very best of these 3-year-old seals. We do not want to let the best of them be killed and reserve, as the gentleman from Ohio suggested once, the runts for breeding purposes. If this becomes a law, we provide that the very best of these 3-year-old seals shall be preserved for breeding purposes.

Mr. SHARP. The gentleman does not understand me, I think. In the numbers indicated of the different years the gentleman refers to the number left and not the number killed?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Exactly.

Mr. SHARP. So that in six or seven years, if the seals should multiply to such an extent that there should be 40,000 male seals, you could then slaughter 36,000 of those males and still have 3,500 or 4,000 remaining?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Exactly. We have proceeded upon the theory that when you reserve a sufficient number of the very best of these male seals for breeding purposes, every one you reserve above that is a loss to the Government and a disadvantage to the herd; and that position is sustained by the statement of every responsible person who has ever visited the islands and claims to have scientific knowledge on that subject.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield to the gentleman from Mississippi?
Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. I would like to ask the gentleman how many 3-year-old seals were reserved last year?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I think about a thousand were reserved last year. That is my understanding.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentle-

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield to the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. If so, why were more than 8,000 seals of less than 2 years of age killed last year, as is shown by the report of the American agent in London?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. No man has made such a stateman except this man Elliott. I have before me the statement of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and he says that only 92 seals out of over 12,000 were killed at a younger age than that required by the regulations of his department.

Mr. BUTLER. Younger than 2 years?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes; younger than 2 years. law provides 1 year, but the rules of the department provide that none can be killed under 2 years of age, and no human being has made a contrary statement except Mr. Elliott.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Will the gentleman yield? The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Virginia be extended five

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Sulzer] asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. If I can have an assurance that I will have sufficient time to complete my remarks.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I only want to ask the gentleman from Virginia if he has ever heard any reputable authority deny the accuracy of the table of weights and measures by which Prof. Elliott determined the age of the seal from which a particular skin was taken?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. And that table of weights and measures is the table that the Secretary of Commerce and Labor relies upon in his letter to Senator Jones, when he says that by that table of weights and measures only 92 seals under the age of 2 years were killed in 1910. And I understand there was not a greater number in 1911.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The testimony before the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor did not controvert the testimony of Prof. Elliott that something like 8,000 seals under the legal age had been killed.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The letter of Secretary Nagel was in the hearings before the Rothermel committee, and the accuracy of Elliott's statement is disputed and drawn in question, and the accuracy of Elliott's statements about everything else that he stated was drawn in question. [Applause.]

The amendment goes on to provide that 2,000 3-year-old male seals shall be reserved next year, 2,500 the next year, 3,000 the next year, 3,500 the year after, and for the next five years 4,000 yearly, and for the next five years 5,000 yearly. The gentleman who prepared this bill went over this matter carefully and ascertained that at the end of the 15 years that this treaty runs there would be 60,000 male seals reserved from the very best 3-year-olds that had been born upon those islands for breeding purposes. We undertook to find out how many cows there would be at the end of that period.

Dr. Evermann, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, who has had charge of this matter, said there would be 300,000 cows. Mr. Elliott said there would be 800,000 cows; but if there were 800,000 there would be 1 bull for every 14 cows. If there were 300,000 cows there would be 1 bull for every 6 cows; and no man, not even Elliott, has disputed the fact that the average seal harem upon those islands is 1 bull for every 30 cows; that is, that 1 bull for every 30 cows would be sufficient.

So the amendment which I have offered certainly provides a sufficient number of bull seals for breeding purposes upon these islands, regardless of whether Elliott is right about the number of cows that will be there at-the end of 15 years or whether Dr. Everman is right.

Mr. SHERLEY. As I read the gentleman's amendment, it provides that in 1926 there shall be at least 5,000 bulls.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Five thousand 3-year-olds reserved

Mr. SHERLEY. I understand; but it does not necessarily follow that there would be a greater number than that.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. There will have been 5,000 reserved during each of the four years preceding, and 4,000 each year during the five years preceding that, and from 2,000 and 3,500 for the years preceding that period. These seals live to be from 12 to 15 years of age, and the seals that we have reserved for this purpose at the end of the 15-year period would number 60,000. There can be no question that that will be a sufficient number for the purpose of breeding.

Now, the only remaining question was whether it was advantageous to this herd to allow all of the male seals to remain and rely upon the process of natural selection, or to have the officers of the Government pick out the best of the seal herd for that purpose. In order to ascertain what was the wise policy to pursue in this regard, the committee got the opinion of experts upon this subject. Ten gentlemen gave opinions upon this subject, and they were some of the most distinguished men in this country; some of them have spent years in investigating this question.

My friend from Iowa [Mr. KENDALL] says that Dr. Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University only spent 72 days there. The gentleman they call upon to dispute the conclusions by Dr. Jordan, Dr. Hornaday, never has been there a minute in his life, and all he knows about it is from the investigation of other people. Dr. Evermann spent season after season there. Mr. Lembkey spends every season there. Dr. Townsend, Dr. True, Dr. Stejneger, Dr. Lucas, and these other gentlemen who are accredited as scientists on this subject have been there, and all agree that the best thing that can be done for the herds is to kill the surplus males and only leave sufficient males for the purpose of breeding.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has again expired.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman from Virginia control 18 minutes, and the gentleman from Arkansa. 28 minutes, and that will take us up to half past 3, the limit for debate

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Why does the gentleman specify 18 minutes for me?

Mr. MANN. Because the gentleman has already used 10 minutes.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The gentleman does not take into consideration the fact that the opposition had 50 minutes to begin with.

Mr. KENDALL. But that was to even us up.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, there are a number of us that would like to speak on this subject.

Mr. MANN. I will withdraw the request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Virginia be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. This amendment is a wise provision for the seal herds, with due and proper regard to the welfare of the financial side of the question. I notice that the amendment offered as a substitute for section 11 by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goodwin] provides a close season for five years. The gentleman did not offer that the other day; his amendment then provided for a longer period. Elliott and Dr. Hornaday did not advocate a close season of 5 years, but of 15 years. These gentlemen who never have been upon the islands and have no knowledge of the subject, except what they have gleaned from others, have cut their closed season down to oneclosed season of 15 years, it would have been a loss to the United States of $15,000,000. If the closed season is for 5 years it will be less than one-third, but a very considerable amount. Now, I want to call attention to the fact that when we do our duty by that great Towniters of Alberta and the less than we do our duty by that great Territory of Alaska and give them a Territorial form of government, they have got to have some resources to support it, and among the best and most fruitful of the resources is the fur-seal herds of the Pribilof Islands. We ought not to cut off the revenue of Alaska upon a mere empty sentiment. The best thing that can be done for the seal herd aside from the financial question is to kill off the surplus male seals, and that position is sustained by everyone who has ever been there, except Prof. Elliott-if he is a professor-and I do not think that his testimony should have much weight, because he is first one way and then the other. His position seems always to have been controlled by his interest. In 1870 the right to kill seals on these islands was leased to the Alaska Com-In 1870 the right mercial Co., and Mr. Elliott was the hired attorney, agent, and lobbyist of that, and so testified before one of the committees of this House.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Will the gentleman name the committee and when it was?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I think it was the Committee on Ways and Means, and it was in 1888, when the Alaska Com-mercial Co. was doing the butchering, if butchering was done. Prof. Elliott appeared before the Ways and Means Committee and said that the killing of the surplus seals was no disadvantage to the herds. In 1890 this company that he represented lost that contract, and then he changed his position and became a great advocate for the preservation of the seal herd by stopping all killing. [Applause.]

In considering the question of the effect upon the increase of the species of killing these surplus males the views of scientists and those perfectly familiar with the subject have been taken into account. It may be said that of all those who have testified before this committee only two persons were found to be op-posed to this killing of the young males, while a much larger number of eminent experts have given their testimony in favor of a moderate and properly restricted killing.

Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, was the head of a distinguished commission in 1896-97 that visited the seal islands and made an exhaustive study of the seal herd. In the report of this commission, made as the result of this investigation, Dr. Jordan said:

Owing to the polygamous habit of the fur seals, the greater part of the male life born is superfluous for breeding purposes. For the 130,000 breeding cows found on the rookerles of St. Paul and St. George Islands in the season of 1897, 4,418 bulls were adequate, or at least out of fully 10,000 adult bulls ready and willing to serve harems, only this number were able to obtain them. Therefore only 1 bull in 30 is absolutely necessary under present conditions. That this limit could be materially lowered without positive danger to the herd is conclusively shown by the history of the Russian herd on Bering Island, where the observations of the past three years, as detailed by Dr. Stejneger, show that a male fur seal is capable of attending to the wants of between 100 and 200 cows.

male fur seal is capable of attending to the wants of between 100 and 200 cows.

Moreover, the removal of the superfluous male life is not only possible, but is really beneficial to the herd. As already indicated, the only deaths among adult bulls and cows discovered upon the rookerles of the islands resulted from the struggles of the bulls among themselves to obtain possession of the cows. In the death of young pups also this fighting and struggling of the bulls is a small, but by no means insignificant, cause of loss. In 1896 the great early mortality among nursing pups was wrongly ascribed to the trampling of the fighting bulls. But while the more complete and satisfactory investigation of 1897 shows another and more important cause, there still remains a considerable loss from this source. This loss is now insignificant, compared with what it was in the wild state of the herd. When the number of adult males and females was practically equal, the destruction both among the cows and among the pups must have been enormous.

Dr. Leonhard Stejneger, head curator of biology, United States National Museum, who has spent a number of years on the Russian seal islands studying seal life, and who was a member of the Jordan commission of 1896-97, makes the following statement:

ber of the Jordan commission of 1896-97, makes the following statement:

It was the unanimous opinion of the American-British Commission (Dr. D. S. Jordan, F. A. Lucas, L. Steineger, Prof. d'Arcy W. Thompson, J. M. Macoun, and G. E. H. Barrett-Hamilton) that the proportion of 1 bull to 30 cows was so excessive that a number of bulls were ordered killed off. The Islands are at present (1897) grossly overstocked with bulls, and yet the average size of the harem is about 30 cows. (Treasury Doc. 1994, p. 22.)

The present ratio of 1 to 40 is consequently a great improvement and, even if it should fall as low as 1 to 50, or even 1 to 60, as it may in 1905, no alarm need be felt, as 1 bull to 50 cows is probably the most satisfactory ratio to be had.

That close killing of males on land may have had an influence is utterly denied. The whole reasoning involved in such an explanation rests upon the fallacy of the assumption that all the male seals "haul out" on land each year. If all the seals "hauled out" and the killing were as close as alleged, there would be nothing but yearlings the next year, and we know, of course, that such is not the case. I need not enlarge upon this theme here, but will only quote the expert commission of 1896-97 to the following effect: "It is, indeed, to be doubted whether at any time the killing on the Islands could by any possibility be made close enough to endanger the supply of bulls, etc."

One of the British commissioners, Mr. Barrett-Hamilton, who in his report for 1896 held similar views with regard to the scarcity of bulls on North Rockery, Bering Island, abandoned them later after his additional experience of 1897.

From what I have stated above, it will be seen that I regard the status of the fur-seal herd on the Pribliof Islands to be as satisfactory as under the present circumstances (i. e., continued, though diminishing, pelagic sealing) It could possibly be. My own policy, therefore, would be to let well enough alone.

I realize, however, that the department may wish to be " only sufferer.

The taking of these young bachelors can not, by any possibility, affect the status of the herd, and from the standpoint of the Government must be regarded as desirable, in so much as there will be that many seals less for the pelagic sealers to prey upon. The company, therefore, might properly be encouraged to take as many yearling males as they can.

* * From what I have explained in the two foregoing chapters, it may be inferred that I am opposed to any stoppage of the killing of seals on land.

Dr. F. A. Lucas, now curator in chief of the American Museum of Natural History in New York, as a member of the Jordan Commission of 1896-97, reported as follows on this subject:

AMERICAN MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY, New York, August 17, 1911.

American Museum of Natural History,

New York, August 17, 1911.

Dear Sir: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 14, with its accompanying documents, in which you ask for my opinion regarding the merits of House resolution 277, suspending the killing of fur seals on the seal islands of Alaska for 15 years.

In response to this, I wish to say that I regard such suspension of killing as absolutely unnecessary as well as impractical and unscientific. I have never seen the slightest reason to modify my view that up to the present time the killing on land has had no effect in diminishing the numbers of the fur-seal herd; and there is no reason why a carefully regulated killing should do so in the future.

The suspension of land killing is impractical, because it would result in the absolute waste of many thousands of sealskins and many hundreds of thousands of dollars; this, too, at a time when, by treaty, Japan and Canada are to have a share in the proceeds of seals killed by the United States. Incidentally, I would say that in a period of 15 years every seal now living would die from old age or from other natural causes. Furthermore, it would seem that such suspension would be a direct attempt to evade our treaty obligations to Japan and Canada.

The cessation of killing is unscientific for the following reasons: We have for the first time an opportunity to test the conditions of the seal herd when unaffected by the attack of pelagic sealers, and it is of the utmost importance, for the making of future treaties and regulations, that we should know the exact facts in the case. The arbitrary suspension of killing for a period of 15 years would be extremely unside the winds importance, for the making of future treaties and regulations, that we should know the exact facts in the case. The arbitrary suspension of killing for a period of 15 years would be extremely under seal herd that has been reduced almost to extinction will so recover in from 5 to 10 years as to yield a large number of killable males

Dr. F. W. True, for many years head curator of biology, United States National Museum, now assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and special investigator on the seal islands in 1895, says:

It does not appear to me that any serious concern need be felt as regards the condition of the herd in 1903 and the prospects for the immediate future. It appears that in the breeding herd in 1903 there was approximately 1 bull to 42 cows. Should the increase in bulls and increase in cows continue in the same ratio in 1904 as in 1903, there would be approximately 1 bull to 54 cows. I think that the decrease in bulls might proceed until there was only 1 bull to 100 cows without menacing the welfare of the herd. If this view is correct, there is time for many years' observation before it would be imperatively necessary to take steps for the preservation of the herd from extinction.

The following extracts are taken from the report of the Bering Sea fur-seal investigations, by David Starr Jordan, assisted by Leonard Stejneger, Frederic Augustus Lucas, and George Archibald Clark, 1897 (Second Preliminary Report, Treasury Doc. 1994):

Doc. 1994):

The investigations of the present season have only served to confirm the conclusion reached last year, that killing, as practiced on land, has no conection whatever with the decline of the herd. Such killing is, and has been for half a century, confined to superfluous males, whose removal is a benefit rather than an injury. It would have been better for the herd if land killing had not been limited by the modus vivendl. The rockerles to-day are overstocked with adult bulls, which in their struggles to gain possession of the females tear them to pieces and trample their offspring.

The only way in which land killing could injuriously affect the herd is through a reduction of the male life to a point below that required for propagation. The records of the islands show that there was never anything approaching a dearth of breeding bulls on the rockerles. The mere fact that 14 years after the islands came into the possession of the United States approximately 100,000 seals were taken each year without difficulty shows that the usual birth rate was maintained. That the land killing was not connected with the decline of the herd at its beginning—about the years 1882—1885—may reasonably be inferred from the fact that in the years 1876-77 only 175,000 males were killed, whereas the total for 1875 and 1878 was 215,000, and for the five years preceding and succeeding a like proportionate number was taken. (This included pups taken for food in the fall.) The 40,000 males thus saved out in 1876-77 were of breeding age in 1882, and were still in their prime in 1885 and the subsequent years of decline.

Dr. Charles H. Townsend, director of the New York Aqua-

Dr. Charles H. Townsend, director of the New York Aquarium, for many years naturalist on the Fisheries steamer Alba-tross, member of the Fur-Seal Commission of 1896 and 1897, and for nine seasons special investigator on the seal islands, says:

Says:

My last visit to the islands was in the year 1900, when the number of surplus of nonbreeding males was much larger than it is now. At that time and for years before the number of large nonbreeding males in the rear of the breeding grounds was so large that I advised a closer degree of killing by the lessees than had been the custom. The slaughter of females by pelagic sealers had been for years very heavy, and the relative number of breeding males was on the increase. The lessees were then taking only the skins of what we were accustomed to regard as 3-year-olds, weighing perhaps 9 pounds or over. As the younger class of males, unlike the breeding males, wander away from the islands at times to feed, I advised that the lessees be permitted to take the smaller 4-year-olds. This was for the double purpose of increasing the catch by the lessees and decreasing the sea catch. This has naturally resulted in lessening the relative number of nonbreeding males.

I am well acquainted with the present Government agents on the islands, having had them associated with, me for several seasons while making the annual counts of both male and female seals present. I accept the figures which they furnish, knowing that they come from conscientious and careful observers.

Your statistics show that there is still a margin of over 500 young idle bulls. This surplus has occurred naturally, and shows that the policy of close killing of males has been a safe one.

As this surplus is decreasing from year to year, the time has evidently come to make provision for the saving of more breeding males. I would advise that the number taken by the lessees annually be curtailed and that the catch on land consist, as in former years, of practically 3-year-olds; tertainly none of the larger size, i. e., those whose skins weigh over 9 pounds, should be taken.

Your statistics do not show what proportion of the land catch-consisted of seals over 3 years old. Your agents can furnish you that information.

Indeed, if you wish to secure an immed

Your statistics do not show what proportion of the land catch-consisted of seals over 3 years old. Your agents can furnish you that information.

Indeed, if you wish to secure an immediate increase in the number of surplus males, you might restrict the catch absolutely to 3-year-olds. This will cover the number required for food and will give the lessees a chance to continue operations for two or three years on a small scale. I am not willing to admit that the danger point is reached until all idle bulls adjacent to the rookeries disappear.

A complete cessation of killing would remedy such a condition very rapidly, but in order that your department may be provided against criticism, I would counsel an immediate curtailment in about the manner above described. A total cessation of killing would increase the number of males more rapidly than is necessary, and would simply add an important number of valuable male skins to the pelagic catch.

As above stated, as long as there is a surplus of any kind the breeding grounds are safe. If there were any lack of adult males in the rookeries the so-called half bulls adjacent to the breeding grounds would at once be absorbed by the rookeries.

This subject has received the most thorough study at different times during the last dozen years at the hands of the foremost biologists of this country, spending months on the islands. I don't believe that the natural history of any wild animal of commercial importance is as well known as that of the fur seal.

The diminution of the fur seal:

The diminution of the fur seal:

I am not in sympathy with the measures set forth in the Senate bill referred to. It is not necessary to entirely cease killing males on land, for the reasons stated above. I would not for a single instant be party to any proposed killing of females. It would be an utterly immoral proceeding. We have no right to destroy the source of supply of anything useful to man simply because we can not control all the output.

Negotiations looking toward the cessation of George A. Clark, secretary Stanford University, secretary furseal commissions of 1896 and 1897, and special investigator (for the Government) on the seal islands in 1909, says:

I do not see that Mr. Elliott's contention that the land killing has yet endangered the breeding herd, or is likely to in the near future, is worthy of serious consideration. The very fact that the herd has supplied a quota of from 20,000 to 15,000 skins each year since 1896 is in itself proof that there has been no lack of breeding males for the rookeries. That there should be a decline in the quota must be conceded, but the cause of this is naturally to be sought in the killing of breeding females, with the attendant loss of young through starvation and otherwise due to pelagic sealing. (Clark in letter to Hitchcock, Dec. 30, 1903.)

No naturalist has enjoyed better opportunities for studying fur-seal problems than has Dr. Leonhard Stejneger, head curator of biology in the United States National Museum. After living for several years on the Commander Islands, where he carefully studied the Russian seal rookeries, he again returned to those islands in 1897 as a member of the fur-seal commission and made very exhaustive investigations on the rookeries and hauling grounds. He also visited and carefully studied the Japanese seal rookeries and our own seal islands. No one is better qualified by ability as a biologist or by experience to speak authoritatively on the various fur-seal questions.

From Dr. Stejneger's official report on the rookeries of the

From Dr. Stejneger's official report on the rookeries of the Commander Islands, season of 1897, page 16, in speaking of the action of the Russian managers of the Pribliof Islands in 1835, when they prohibited all land killing of males under the mistaken idea that thereby they could increase the species, and an identical action of the American Government in dealing with the same herd in 1891-1893, says:

What was the result? A single additional female on the rookeries? No; loss to the lessees and the Government of the bachelors spared; a corresponding gain to the pelagic sealers; a deplorable superabundance of bulls on the Pribilof rookeries, and numerous pups trampled to death soon after their birth. America has thus paid very dearly for her blunder. Are the Russians going to repeat it?

Edwin W. Sims, United States attorney for northern district of Illinois, solicitor Department of Commerce and Labor, and special investigator on the seal islands in 1906, says:

Special investigator on the seal islands in 1906, says:

That the decrease in seal life on the Pribilof Islands is due solely to pelagic sealing can not be seriously questioned. "Owing to the polygamous habit of fur seals," states the report of the Jordan Commission, "the greater part of the male life born is superfluous for breeding purposes. For the 130,000 breeding cows found on the rookeries of St. Paul and St. George Islands in the season of 1897, 4,418 bulls were adequate, or at least out of fully 10,000 bulls ready and willing to serve harems only this number were able to obtain them. Therefore, only 1 bull in 30 is absolutely necessary under present conditions. That this limit could be materially lowered without positive danger to the herd, is conclusively shown by the history of the Russian herd on Bering Island, where the observations of the past three years, as detailed by Dr. Stejneger, show that a male fur seal is capable of attending to the wants of between 100 and 200 cows." (Report of Fur Seal Investigations, 1896-97, pt. 1, p. 119.)

These quotations might be multiplied to show the belief of these gentlemen that abstention of land killing of surplus males is not an advantage to the herd, but is a positive detriment in that it increases the fighting amongst the adult bulls, causes an increase in the death rate through the crushing of the newly born, and the tearing of cows to pieces in endeavoring to snatch them from other harems, and involves a great money loss to the Government represented by the value of the pelts which could have been taken. Enough has been given, however, to show that such action on the part of this Government would be useless and without reason. [Applause.]

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I should like to have 10 minutes of time, and I ask that I be permitted to speak for 10 minutes. I do not know that I shall use the whole time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that he may be permitted to proceed for 10 minutes? Is there objection?

There was no objection. Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, in the midst of this conflict of expert opinion a layman may well hesitate to express any views of his own. I should certainly not attempt it now if I was not required by the presentation of these particular amendments to exercise a judgment in voting. For my own part, I am totally indifferent to the financial phase of this question. I hope the time has gone by in America when we will consider dollars and cents in considering the question of the preservation of the wild life of America or any of its possessions. [Applause.]

Now, the proposition as presented by the majority of the committee is that we can afford to kill a certain number of the male seals without interfering with the increase or the character of the seal herd. That places the burden upon them, and, in doubt, I propose to throw my vote on the side of safety. [Applause.]

We can not hurt the seal herd by having a closed season for a few years. We are told, and told with a backing of eminent authorities, that it is perfectly possible for man by interposing to so change the order of nature as to improve a breed or a species, or even to increase its numbers. When the proposition is stated that way it has my unquestioned assent. But I desire to call to the attention of the committee this idea: I know of no instance where man by interfering with nature and her law of the survival of the fittest has ever so improved a breed or increased its number without at the same time controlling the environment and the habits of the species.

plause.] The proposition presented here is not a proposition to what we are all familiar with as to selection in regard to domesticated animals. It is not a proposition where you are able to control the environment. Something was said about the breeding of cattle and horses. We have carried that to a very advanced stage, but in the breeding of the modern race horse we not only make a selection as to sires and mares but we protect by shoeing; we feed, we house, we protect from all of the natural enemies of the animals, and we create an entirely artificial condition under which this breeding is to take place. Here, however, you have animals that by their nature are migratory, animals that go out to sea and return after a certain number of months. There is no attempt in any way to regulate their habits of life. There is no attempt to protect them against their natural enemies at sea. There is no attempt to change nature's law but in one particular. Under the present plan nature, by the law of the survival of the fittest, selects as the progenitors of this species the strongest and most capable. It is now proposed by man's interposition to limit that selection of nature and to arbitrarily select or at least to reduce the number from which the selection can be made by nature. I, for one, with that condition confronting me, am not willing, with the testimony that has been adduced here, to accede to the proposition that no harm will result to the seal herd. It seems to me we can well afford to wait five years and to give a full chance to this herd. Nobody desires to see it ex-There is nobody who does not desire to see the herd increased at the most rapid rate possible, and yet we are asked here now to make this interference.

Bear in mind another thing, that no matter what regulations we may pass as to prohibiting the killing of the seals, when they are away from the islands, those regulations can not be and will not be entirely enforced. There will be evasions of the law. There will be enough human enemies who will evade the law and enough natural enemies to lessen this herd without our adding to it, and the whole proposition, when you strip it, is that we should authorize the killing of some of this herd for the value of the sealskin. You can not get away from that. That is what underlies it all. I have listened very carefully, and I can find no serious testimony to the effect that it is necessary to kill some of these seals who are 3 years old in order to let the herd increase.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes. Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will say to the gentleman that all of those who testified on the subject said it would be far better for the herd to kill the surplus males.

Mr. SHERLEY. As against the statement of even these eminent authorities I put the fact of a great herd when there was no interference by man. [Applause.] I am not undertaking to put myself up as an authority on this most intricate question—
Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that there was no pelagic sealing at that time?

Mr. SHERLEY. I am aware of the statements made in that connection. I present to this House the practical question. The burden is upon these gentlemen, and I do not think that they have taken care of that burden, to show that no injury will come to this herd. They have shifted their ground entirely. They made a plea here the other day that you must not touch this sacred bill which was to carry into effect the treaty, or we might interfere with the treaty, and yet the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Floop] himself comes now and proposes a close season for a year and then a limitation for the following years. If we are going to deal with the matter at all let us deal with We have made mistakes in the past in permitting the extermination of the wild life of America. I know of no mistake that has been made by the Congress of the United States in undue care in preserving such life, and I beg of this committee that they do not now take a step that even though it be backed by this eminent authority may lead us to a condition where we will find that we have not done that which we ought to do in the preservation of the seal.

I have nothing further to say. It is not with the idea that I speak as an expert. I am disgusted and unconcerned with the constant criminations and recriminations as to the characters of these various scientists who have testified. It seems to me that the eminent authorities who are sustaining the position of the majority of the committee could have spent their time in better demonstration of their case than in abuse and the questioning of the motives of those who differed with them.

[Applause.]

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, it is often difficult to do what is just and right concerning a matter of much public moment in the face of adverse criticism. I am trying to-day to perform a public duty-the duty of carrying out in good faith a treaty which is a governmental obligation. In doing so I have endeavored to look at the question involved from every angle, I am not prejudiced. There should be no petty politics in this matter. I have tried to be fair to all and courteous to all and patient with all. I have no disposition to find fault with gentlemen who differ with the position I take, or that a majority of the Committee on Foreign Affairs takes, in regard to the subject now under consideration. I want to give effect to the treaty. I want to stop pelagic sealing. I want to protect and preserve the fur seals and the sea otters of the North Pacific Ocean. I regret that a few Members on that side of the House see fit to criticize me when I am doing a public duty to the best of my ability.

Suffice it to say that the bill before the House and now under consideration was introduced by me in response to the following letter from the State Department:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 20, 1911.

The Hon. WILLIAM SULZER,

Chairman of the Committee of Foreign Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose a bill drafted by this department, after consultation with the Departments of Commerce and Labor, Treasury, and Justice, to give effect to the conven-tion between the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia for the preservation and protection of the fur seals and sea otter frequenting the North Pacific Ocean, concluded at Washington July 7, 1911.

I am sending this draft bill to you in the hope that, owing to the importance of the international relations involved in the prompt enforcement of this convention, which, it will be recalled, went into effect on the 15th instant, in accordance with Article XVI thereof, you will take the very earliest opportunity to introduce this draft bill into the House, in order that it may receive that early consideration of Congress which, as pointed out in the President's message of December 7 last, the discharge of the international obligations assumed by the United States under the convention necessitates. I have the honor to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

The negotiation and conclusion of this convention for the preservation and protection of the fur seals and sea otters which frequent the waters of the North Pacific Ocean was a signal triumph of American statesmanship and diplomacy, and when the convention is carried into effect by the high contracting parties, pelagic sealing, which is and has been the scourge of the fur-seal herd, will be a thing of the past, and those best able to judge confidently declare the fur seals will rapidly increase and the herd grow in a few years to its former proportions.

The fur-seal controversy, which for nearly 25 years has been the source of serious friction between the United States and the powers bordering upon the North Pacific Ocean, whose subjects have been permitted to engage in pelagic sealing against the fur-seal herds having their breeding grounds within the jurisdiction of the United States, has at last been satisfactorily adjusted by the conclusion of the north Pacific sealing convention entered into between the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia on the 7th of July last. This convention is a conservation measure of very great importance, and if it is carried out in the spirit of reciprocal concession and advantage upon which it is based, there is every reason to believe that not only will it result in preserving the fur-seal herds of the North Pacific Ocean and restoring them to their former value for the purposes of commerce, but also that it will afford a permanently satisfactory settlement of a question the only other solution of which seemed to be the total destruction of the fur seals.

Now, what is the controversy here to-day? . We are all agreed that we should stop pelagic sealing. We have been trying for a quarter of a century to do that. This bill carries into effect the treaty to stop pelagic sealing. Last week in my speech on the floor of this House I dwelt at length upon that. This morning the Committee on Foreign Affairs, as a concession to some of its members, and on my suggestion, agreed to accept the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Virginia to section 11 of the bill, to regulate the killing of the surplus male fur seals on the Pribilof Islands. I shall support the amend-ment, when offered by the gentleman from Virginia, because it was agreed to in our committee, and I believe when that amendment is adopted and this bill is passed two things will be done: First, pelagic sealing will be stopped and become a thing of the past—pelagic sealing has been the great scourge of the fur-seal herd, as everybody who knows anything about it has abundantly testified. Second, we will then be able, under proper governmental supervision, to regulate the killing of the surplus males on the Pribilof Islands in a scientific way, so that there will always be enough left of virile young males for breeding purposes, and I believe in this way the seal herd will hereafter increase and multiply until, at the expiration of the treaty, it will probably number upward of a million.

There has been a good deal of controversy about the scientists and the so-called experts. They seem to agree generally about the subject. I rest my contention to-day on their testimony. Let me read to the House what is said by one of the greatest living scientists, in my judgment, in this country.

Mr. KENDALL. Was he before the committee? Mr. SULZER. He is Dr. C. Hart Merriam. He was a member of the Fur Seals Commission and for many years Chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey in the Department of Agriculture. I wrote him a letter the other day and asked for his opinion regarding this matter.

The letter I have just received in reply to my inquiry is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 13, 1912.

Hon. WM. SULZER,

Chairman Committee on Foreign Affairs,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your letter of the 12th instant, I would state that I have twice visited the Pribilof Islands, in Bering Sea-first in 1891, as one of the commissioners representing the United States in the fur-seal controversy; second. in 1899, as a member of the Harriman Alaska expedition.

The decrease in the number of fur seals on the rookeries at the time of the second visit was appalling-the result of continued pelagic sealing.

In 1891 I visited every rookery on both islands (St. Paul and St. George) for the purpose of learning as much as possible of the condition and habits of the fur seals. The more important results of this investigation were published by Prof. Mendenhall and myself, in 1892, in the report of the first Bering Sea Commission.

With respect to the recently suggested prohibition of the killing of nonbreeding males (known as holluschickie), three important facts should be borne in mind:

(1) That the number of male and female seals at birth are approximately equal.

(2) That the fur seal is polygamous, the breeding seals arranging themselves in what are called harems, each male or bull having from 15 or 20 up to 50 or more females.

(3) That outside of the breeding rookeries the bachelor seals (holluschickie), comprising those up to the age of 5 or 6 years, haul out and herd by themselves-apart from the breeding seals. The bachelor seals, when they attain the age of 6 or 7 years, fight the older bulls for positions on the breeding rookeries, but owing to the polygamous nature of the animals it is obvious that only a small proportion of them can ever secure positions on the breeding grounds.

There is, therefore, as everybody knows, an immense disproportion of male seals, which not only are of no use whatever in the perpetuation and growth of the herd, but which, by reason of the large quantity of food they consume, must be an actual detriment, making it more difficult for the nursing mothers to secure the food necessary to produce milk for their

Inasmuch as this great excess of bachelor seals is of no use to the breeding herd, and, in fact, is a positive detriment to it, what is the objection to killing annually a large percentage of them, always leaving more than enough, of course, to replace from year to year the older bulls on the breeding grounds? The sale of skins of such seals should in a few years afford revenue sufficient to maintain the Government service at the islands.

If the number of bachelor seals killed each year did not exceed 75 or 80 per cent of the number present on the holluschickie hauling grounds, I firmly believe, not only that there would be no deterioration of the breeding herd, but that the virility and growth of the herd would be improved.

Respectfully,

C. HART MERRIAM.

As I said, Dr. C. Hart Merriam was a member of the Fur Seal Commission of 1801. For many years he was Chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture, and is one of the ablest and most distinguished living mammalogists. He states that not to kill the surplus male seals each year would be absurd and worse than useless. It would result in great injury to the herd. His letter speaks for itself and needs no further comment.

Mr. KENDALL. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. SULZER. I yield for a question,

Mr. KENDALL. Was that letter written in response to the statement of Dr. Elliott that this man agreed with him?

Mr. SULZER. I am informed he is one of the gentlemen to whom Dr. Elliott referred.

Mr. KENDALL. Did you have this gentleman before the

Mr. SULZER. No. I did not know about the matter in time or the gentleman would have been asked to appear.

Mr. KENDALL. Did the gentleman ever read that letter before the Committee on Foreign Affairs?

Mr. SULZER. This letter is dated the 13th instant-Mr. KENDALL. Why did not the gentleman read it this morning when we had a session of the committee? Mr. SULZER. I received the letter only a little while ago-too late to do that.

But to continue. Let me read the following from President

David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University, California: "A bill has been introduced into the present session of Congress by Congressman Sulzer designed to give effect to the fur-seal treaty of last July, which does away with pelagic sealing. This treaty binds the four nations concerned to the abolition of hunting of the seals at sea when beyond the 3-mile limit, the United States and Russia agreeing to pay a percentage of the land catch taken under Government supervision to Great Britain and Japan in lieu of the waiving by citizens of these countries of their right of pelagic sealing. Pelagic sealing is necessarily indiscriminate, and affects most heavily the female portion of the herd, 65 to 85 per cent of the animals killed at sea in recent years being gravid or nursing females, their death being attended by the death of their unborn or dependent young. It is this indiscriminate slaughter which has brought the herd to its present low condition, about 5 per cent of what it was in 1870. A vigorous nucleus of the herd remains, and with proper care it will recuperate and increase at a steady rate, probably increasing the quota of animals which may be taken on the land under Government supervision from its present minimum of about 12,000 to between 40,000 and 50,000 in 15 years. These skins are worth to the Government about $35 apiece with only nominal expenses, the cost of patrolling Bering Sea being done away with. The treaty provides that 15 per cent of the Government catch on the islands be given to Great Britain and a like percentage to Japan. This payment insures the cooperation of these nations in the abolition of pelagic seal-That the bargain is an advantageous one to the Government is shown by the fact that in the past 15 years at least 300,000 seals have been killed, most of them breeding females. from the herd of the United States, and their skins have been marketed by the pelagic sealers at an average price of from $15 to $20.

"Certain influences are at work to defeat or nullify this treaty. I may mention the Rothermel resolution of August 12 last (H. Res. 277), having for its avowed object the suspension of land killing for a period of 15 years, the period of the treaty. The intent, however, was evidently to cause the United States. to default in its payment of the percentage under the treaty; that is, no quota on land being taken, there would be nothing to share with Great Britain and Japan. The pelagic sealing interests would become dissatisfied, one or both nations would withdraw from the treaty, and pelagic sealing would inevitably be resumed. There is no necessity for the suspension of land killing. It is confined to the superfluous males of a herd of polygamous animals, being identical with the process by which domestic animals are treated.

"The Sulzer bill, being the logical continuation of the beneficent action taken in the treaty of last July, should by all means become a law without delay. Pelagic sealing would normally begin next month, the sealers starting out from Victoria and from Yokohama to prey upon the herd on its return journey along the coast. The animals come south in the early winter to the latitude of Santa Barbara and return slowly along the 100-fathom curve, reaching the islands in June, where their young are born and where they remain during the summer. It is on the spring migration and on the summer feeding grounds in Bering Sea that the destructive work of the pelagic sealers is done to the herd.

"DAVID STARR JORDAN."

Let me read some more expert testimony. Dr. Leonhard Stejneger, head curator of biology, United States National Museum, member of the Bering Sea Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, and one of the ablest and sanest naturalists in the world. Dr. Stejneger lived on the Commander Islands for several years, where he made a special study of the Russian fur seal. Since then he has repeatedly visited not only our seal islands, but also those of Russia and Japan, and his opinions, based as they are upon personal study on the rookeries and hauling grounds, should have great weight. Dr. Stejneger

"It was the unanimous opinion of the American-British commission that the proportion of 1 bull to 30 cows was so excessive that a number of bulls were ordered to be killed off. With only 30 cows to the harem the rookeries were greatly overstocked with bulls. * * * It is, indeed, to be doubted whether at any time the killing on the islands could by any possibility be made close enough to endanger the supply of bulls. * * * There should be no restriction on the killing of the smaller bachelor seals. * * * That close killing of males on land may have had an influence (in decreasing the herd) is utterly denied. The whole reasoning involved in such an explanation rests upon the fallacy that all the male seals out on land each year.

"* * * The taking of these young bachelors can not by any possibility affect the status of the herd, and from the standpoint of the Government must be regarded as desirable. "* * The sole cause of the decline of the fur-seal herd is found in pelagic sealing."

Dr. Frederic A. Lucas, director of the American Museum of Natural History, member of the fur-seal commissioners of 1896 and 1897, and one of the ablest, keenest, and most cautious naturalists in America, has been on the Pribilof Islands, where he spent many months studying as only a scientific man can study these very questions in the life history of the fur seal. Let me quote from his remarks at a hearing given by the Camp Fire Club last June. Dr. Lucas said:

"These surplus males are the ones that are killed. are allowed to grow up they grow up into idle bulls—bulls that are not wanted—and create trouble. * * * If there is no killing on the islands there is going to be an undue increase in the number of these large bulls, and they will disturb the breeding grounds. * * * It is believed by all naturalists breeding grounds. * that the check on the tremendous increase of fur seals in nature was the attacks of the unoccupied bulls. When a few years ago the Government agents noticed that the number of bulls was getting small, they allowed a certain number of large bachelors to escape, and in three years there were a plenty of spare bulls on hand to take the place of any that might die from natural causes. * * * To put a stop to killing on the islands would not do a bit of good."

George A. Clark, secretary of Leland Stanford University and secretary to the fur-seal commissions of 1896 and 1897, has given much study to the fur seal. He has spent at least three entire seasons on the Pribilof Islands, the last being in 1909, when he made very comprehensive and careful investiga-tions of the herd. Mr. Clark not only believes that a close season on the islands would serve no useful purpose whatever, but would really prove very detrimental to the herd, because it would result in great injury to the breeding cows and the trampling to death of many pups by the surplus and wholly unnecessary bulls that would invade the rookeries as a result of saving more bulls than are needed for breeding purposes. "The fur seal," he says, "is a polygamous animal, a fact which the Campfire Club seems to overlook. Actual enumeration shows that 29 out of every 30 males born are superfluous for breeding purposes. A reasonable proportion of these 29 may be killed for commercial uses without injury to the herd, and their withdrawal will have no more effect on the life of the herd than the killing of a like number of steers would have on a herd of cattle. Moreover, it is not merely feasible and safe to take these animals, but it is beneficial to the herd that they should be removed. To let these young males grow up to adult age would precipitate a condition of fighting and struggle on the rockeries which would be injurious in a high degree to the welfare of the herd. To illustrate by another analogy, the condition which their exemption from killing would produce would be exactly like that which would exist on a cattle and horse range if all the young male calves and colts were allowed to grow up as bulls and stallions to contest with one another the supremacy of the herd."

Let me say here that Dr. Barton W. Evermann, chief of the Alaska fisheries service and a member of the Fur-Seal Commission of 1892, when he devoted six months to field investigations concerning the habits of the fur seal, has testified before the Committee on Foreign Affairs to the effect that, now that pelagic sealing will cease, the fur-seal herd can be handled on the Pribilof Islands just as a stockman would handle his flock of sheep or his herd of cattle.

Mr. Joseph Stanley-Brown, for many years resident on the Pribilof Islands as Treasury agent, a careful, painstaking observer, who made a very thorough study of all matters pertaining to the fur-seal herd, and this is what he says. I read:

"Can anyone successfully maintain that in case of polygamous animals the taking of the surplus male life and reserving the females can destroy the herd? If this can be demonstrated, then our stock raisers are at fault and the evidence derived from Russian management goes for naught.

"The bachelor seals are a merchantable commodity of great value to the United States Government, and, being largely in excess of the requirements for breeding purposes, it would be utter folly, ridiculous folly, for the Government not to take them and market the skins. * * * More than that, it is very essential to keep up the market for first-class sealskins if these rookeries are to continue to be of value. The business organization required to maintain the sealskin business and to make this fur a fashionable article of wearing apparel is very considerable.

"You can make the selection of males for breeding purposes with exactly the same ease as you can a stock farm. when a matter is so completely under control, there is no good reason why the excess of marketable male seals should not be taken. If there is any sound reason to the contrary I have never heard of it. It is just as easy intelligently to select these young seals as it is to take from your stock farm the excess of male life and market it, and there is no more risk of injury to the seal herd.'

Dr. Charles H. Townsend, director of the New York Aquarium, for many years naturalist on the steamer Albatross, member of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897, has spent many seasons on the Pribilof Islands and has made careful study of the habits of the fur seal. He says:

"I am well acquainted with the Government agents on the islands * * * and know them to be conscientious and careful observers. * * * A total cessation of killing would inislands * crease the number of males more rapidly than is necessary.

* * This subject has received the most thorough study at different times during the last dozen years at the hands of the foremost biologists of this country, spending months on the islands. * * * The diminution of the herd is due to pelagic sealing. It is worse than idle to attribute it in any way to our management of the islands."

Prof. James M. Macoun, naturalist of the Canadian Government and member of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1891, 1892, 1896, and 1897, has spent many seasons on the Pribilof Islands and is the best-informed foreign naturalist who has ever visited those islands. He was also the expert adviser of the British plenipotentiaries during the conferences resulting in the signing of a fur-seal treaty last July. Prof. Macoun agreed entirely with the other members of the Fur Seal Commissions of 1896 and 1897 that the sole cause of the decrease of the herd was pelagic sealing, and that the killing of the surplus males on land was essential to the best management of the herd.

Let me read a few lines from what Prof. Macoun says:

"There is no doubt that fighting bulls have caused incalculable injury to the seal rookeries, and judicious killing of the surplus males should be carried on from the date that there is known to be more than a sufficient supply for breeding purposes. There is no doubt that with proper management an increasing number of the surplus males may be killed every year with great advantage to the rookeries."

It has been urged by some who have never seen a fur seal that the only way to rehabilitate the herd is to let it severely alone; let nature, they say, take its course for 15 years. These persons ask if man can improve upon the methods of nature. The answer to this question is "Yes"; and the correctness of that answer will be easily understood by anyone who gives the matter a moment's thought. That man has improved upon the methods of nature is evidenced by every domesticated or semidomesticated animal in the world; by every grain, by every fruit, by every berry, and by every flower that man cultivates. Compare the little scrawny native potato, the highest product of nature's method, with the score and more splendid varieties of potatoes which we now have as the result of the application of the methods of Luther Burbank and others like him. Compare the wild horses of the plains with the modern race horse. Nature's methods produced the little, wild mustang; man's method produced Salvator, Lou Dillon, and Dan Patch. Nature's method produced the little, sour raspberry, while Luther Burbank's method produced the famous Logan berry. Nature produced the little, bitter, wild crabapple, with no market value at all, as the best she could do in that line; man's method has given us the delicious Grimes Golden, the Roman Beauty, and the splendid Albemarle Pippin, worth $6 to $10 a barrel. Nature's method gave us the various kinds of wild roses, with few petals and little fragrance; man produced the American Beauty.

Man's method of selective breeding, reserving the best and eliminating the unfit, has improved the quality and increased the quantity enormously with the great multitude of species of animals and plants with which he has worked. Of course, nature's methods can be improved upon. Darwin has demonstrated it; every great scientist has proved it conclusively. Were it not so we should have no stock farms, no orchards, and no fields of growing grain. We should have no agriculture, no horticulture, no factories, no cooking of food, no clothing; in fact, no civilization.

The fur seal is highly polygamous, just as are sheep, cattle, and poultry. The sexes are born in approximately equal numbers in each of these animals, and this results in an excess of male life. Every stockman who knows the first principles of animal breeding and farm management will save only so many rams, bulls, and roosters as may be needed to serve the ewes, the cows, and the hens on his farm; the surplus males he will market at the time when they will yield the maximum financial return; to do otherwise would show a total lack of biological knowledge, of animal-breeding sense, and business judgment and foresight.

Are the dozen or more well-known zoologists and eminent naturalists who have devoted many seasons to studying the fur seal on the Pribilofs, and have long worked for the cessation of pelagic sealing, to be deprived in the end of the opportunity to put into practice what they believe to be a rational system of fur-seal farming? If Congress should be persuaded to let sentimentalists dictate the policy to be pursued on the national seal farm it would mean a very slow rehabilitation of the seal herd. We can not afford to ignore what has been learned about the fur seal by the patient investigations of the past 25 years and thus take a long step backward.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I have often been accused of being swayed by too much sentiment in the consideration of questions of this kind, and I have often reproved myself for that reason. On first blush—even in this case, Mr. Chairman—I was inclined to side with those who oppose the killing of seals. But I came to the conclusion, upon hearing the testimony of distinguished experts on both sides of the question—I say on both sides, but they were really all on one side, with the exception of one; and there is, in fact, only one side to this question—after also hearing the Secretary of Commerce and Labor—and a more conscientious and painstaking official does not exist in the Government of the United States-I came to the conclusion, as I said, that there must be consistency even in sentiment. In other words, if we are opposed to the killing of seals for humanitarian or sentimental reasons, then we should extend the sway of our sentiment to other fields. We should oppose, for instance, the killing that is going on in the slaughterhouses of Chicago, and we should also oppose the killing that is going on daily in the farmhouses of this country, in order to be con-But this is not a sentimental question. It is a question to be determined by scientific facts.

I regret that a change has been made in the disposition of this bill. I was in favor of carrying out the treaty first, and then passing a separate bill treating with a domestic question then passing a separate bill treating with a domestic question as to whether any seals should be killed, or how many, in the future. That treaty, Mr. Chairman, was a shining example of American statesmanship. We induced Japan, Great Britain, and Russia to finally agree with us to stop pelagic sealing. That was one of the scourges, if not the main scourge, which diminished the hard diminished the herd.

If you stop pelagic sealing, Mr. Chairman, the whole question is really solved. The second scourge was the practice of turning over the seal herd to a private company for private profit. That has been stopped and the Government of the United States has taken charge of that proposition. Now, I am going to state this question just as it portrays itself in my mind, and I do not know whether I will succeed in giving the House a descriptive photograph of my mind on the subject or not. Certainly I shall not be influenced by any Anglo-Saxon prudery on this question, and shall call a spade a spade.

There are certain questions upon which all sides agree, Mr. Chairman. One is that just as many males are born as females. On that we all agree. The second proposition upon which there is no disagreement among scientists is that each male seal requires from 20 to 80 females. That question has not been disputed before the committee. Consequently there must necessarily be a surplus of male seals, and if you do not dispose of that surplus of male seals there will be contests and fights between the males, which will result in the trampling to death of the pups and the killing of the male seals. On that proposition there is no dispute. Now, consequently, Mr. Chairman, I think we will be on the side of safety, that safety which has been described so well by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY], if we allow a certain number of surplus male seals to be killed annually. To do so will be better for the propagation of the herd, so we have been told by every expert before the committee save one, and that one is unreliable, in my judgment, because he has been on both sides of the question.

In favoring that proposition I am not controlled in any way by the financial element involved in it. I do not care whether or not this Government receives any revenue. But one thing is certain, and that is, if we do not carry out in good faith the treaty stipulations which we have made with Japan and Russia and Great Britain, at the expiration of the term of that treaty these countries will not be willing to enter into another agreement with us, and consequently pelagic sealing will go on again. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, one very important phase of this problem has not been discussed, and therefore I desire briefly to call it to the attention of the committee. A principle is involved here, a principle of great importance. It is found in the answer to this question, namely, Shall a seal herd, property of the United States, worth millions of dollars now, and to be worth many more millions in the future, be turned over without any restriction in the law, to be killed or kept in the discretion of an executive officer? That is the question in this

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit an interruption right there?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Missouri?
Mr. COOPER. I have only a very few minutes.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I merely wanted to suggest to the gentle-man from Wisconsin this fact, that if we can not trust our own officials, the officials of our own Government, then we might as well go out of business.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I am surprised that a libertyloving man like my friend, the gentleman from Missouri, should say that if we can not trust our own officials the Government of the United States should go out of business. That would apply to any officer of the Government. Why not trust the President of the United States with unrestricted authority? Why not give any man in authority in this Republic all that he asks for, simply because if we can not trust our officials we had better go out of business? There is no force in the gentleman's suggestion; none whatever. This is a Government of laws and not of men. [Applause.]

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit one question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania? Mr. COOPER. No; I can not yield.

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Just for one question. Mr. COOPER. Well, I will yield.

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Is it not a fact that, according to the Bible, the very first two people that God created were tempted? Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Only one of them. [Laugh-

Mr. MANN. How pertinent that is!
Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, with all respect to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I beg to observe, and in no spirit of unkindness, that in my judgment the interrogatory that he propounded to me is not germane, and to suggest that if he will now kindly subside before propounding another such question I shall be obliged to him, and I think the committee will. [Laughter.]

Mr. DIFENDERFER. I desire to explain—
Mr. COOPER. I can not yield. The gentleman's desire would be gratified if I had a little more time, but I have not the

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Did not the gentleman's expression contain a reflection on me?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin declines to yield.

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Will not the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. Oh, well, I will yield to him. [Laughter.] Mr. DIFENDERFER. The point I wanted to make is this:

That I do not believe as sacred a proposition as this should be intrusted without restrictions to the discretion of an executive officer. I take the same position as the gentleman does. I think the law should prevail, and this herd should be protected, because the disposition of man is to destroy if temptation is

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman if there is an interrogation point or an exclamation point after that? [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman's time be extended five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer] asks that the time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cooper] be extended for five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I want to state that I will not object to extending the time of the gentleman from Wisconsin, but it occurs to me that this question has been very fully discussed, and that all the members of this committee understand it, and have their minds made up about it and as to how they are going to vote upon this question; and, therefore, I am inclined to object to extensions for a much further length of time for debate in regard

The CHAIRMAN. If there is no objection, the gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for five additional minutes.

Mr. COOPER. My friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Buchanan], for whom I have a high regard, will remember that I am a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and that, from the time this bill first came before the House a week ago, I have not asked the indulgence of the Committee of the Whole nor trespassed upon its attention even to the extent of asking a question.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I have no objection to the extension of the gentleman's time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, during this debate we have heard much about the necessity of having the provisions of the pending bill relate only to the question of suppressing pelagic sealing-killing at sea-and of leaving to subsequent legislation the question of killing on land.

Now, in order that the committee may understand exactly what that suggestion means, in view of the bill as reported and now before us, I ask the attention of every member of the committee, including the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Buchanan].

It is said this bill as reported is for no other purpose than to control pelagic sealing; that it is not intended that it should have anything to do with the regulation of land killing. And yet section 11 originally provided that-

The Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall likewise have authority-

That is authority without limitto determine the number of fur seals-

It did not even say male seals, but the number of fur sealsto be taken annually on the Pribilof Islands, or any other islands or shores of the waters mentioned in the first article of said convention and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, to which any seal herds hereafter resort, to direct the taking of the same—

And so forth.

Mr. SULZER. The committee struck that out.
Mr. COOPER. But I am going to show the point, if the gentleman will give me an opportunity to explain to the House just what it means. The gentleman knows perfectly well what it means, and so do I.

Mr. SULZER. This committee has just struck that out.

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman knows the already

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman knows the circumstances under which it was stricken out; and, inasmuch as the gentleman has referred to that meeting, he knows that it was directly charged that there had been, if not a violation of an explicit understanding, at least an utter forgetfulness of it that was surprising. Now, I know that that clause has been stricken out and that, on the face of the bill, it would appear that absolute power over the seal herd is to be done away with; but if the pending bill, in its present form, were to become a law would the present absolute power of the Secretary of Com-merce and Labor over the herd be done away with? The gentleman knows that it would not. I know that it would not, and I shall demonstrate that it would not.

Section 1, chapter 183, of Thirty-sixth United States Statutes at Large, passed in April, 1910, to regulate the seal industry, gives to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor practically unis the same authority originally contained in lines 14 to 19, inclusive, of section 11 of the bill before us, but which were stricken out of the bill as reported. But, although that provi-sion is stricken from this bill, it still leaves section 1, of chapter 183, of Thirty-sixth Statutes at Large, passed in April, 1910, unrepealed.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. COOPER. One moment. It leaves that section 1 unrepealed, and so leaves unrestricted authority in the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. There are good reasons why we know this to be true. First, there is no clause in this bill providing for the repeal of section 1, chapter 183, of the Statutes at Large, under which the Secretary now has such authority; and, second, because repeal by implication is not favored in the law, and, moreover, there is nothing here to justify a claim of repeal by implication. That this is the construction which the courts by implication. That this is the construction which the courts would give it if called upon is made still more certain by a reading of lines 19 to 22, on page 8 of the bill, by which the Secretary is given authority to deliver to the agents of the Canadian Government and the Japanese Government the skins to which they are entitled, and so forth, thus clearly showing that killing on land is contemplated. I make no attack upon any official; I speak simply for a principle.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, one moment. I ask five minutes more, if I may have it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Will the gentleman yield for another question there?

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, this bill appears upon its face not to deal with the killing of seals upon the land, yet if made a law would have that practical effect, because it would leave section 1 of chapter 183, Thirty-sixth United States Statutes at Large, unrepealed. This being so, we would, in effect, by passing this bill as reported, make a law governing killing on land and leave to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor unrestricted control. Is not that true, Mr. Chairman? Let the gentleman from New York answer.

Mr. SULZER. I think the gentleman from Wisconsin is laboring under a misapprehension.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman permit me—

Mr. SULZER. The committee has already stricken out of the bill the matter to which the gentleman refers, and there is pending an amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia and a substitute offered by the gentleman from Arkansas, Mr. COOPER. The gentleman from New York does not answer the question. The gentleman can not answer it truthfully, except as I have myself answered it. For if we enact this bill into law

Mr. SULZER. Has the gentleman heard read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. COOPER. That has nothing to do with it. The gentleman can not get away from that question. [Laughter.]

Mr. SULZER. I wish to give the gentleman all the time he wants, but I want to pass this bill to-day. Will the gentleman ask his question again?

Mr. COOPER. I want to know if the claim the gentleman made the other day when he said this bill, if enacted into law, would have nothing to do with the regulation of land killing

Mr. SULZER. I never said anything of the kind. answers that question.

Mr. COOPER. Why, I am astounded. I have the gentleman's speech delivered a week ago, in which he says:

The bill proposed legislates on the subject matter without regard to the question of killing the surplus seals on the Pribilof Islands; that is purely a national or domestic question about which there is much difference of opinion.

Repeatedly in the same speech he said that this bill was confined exclusively to pelagic sealing.

Mr. SULZER. So it was at that time. Mr. COOPER. The bill has not been changed on that point. Mr. SULZER. The bill has been amended to-day, and amendments have been offered by the gentleman from Virginia, and one also by the gentleman from Arkansas to regulate

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is not familiar with what has been done here to-day.

Mr. COOPER. I want to inform the gentleman that I have been here all of the time, and also that the amendment to which the gentleman refers has not been adopted. The gentleman from Virginia was offered an opportunity to present an amendment, but his amendment is only pending and can not become a part of the bill until it shall have been adopted.

Mr. SULZER. It will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, in support of the proposition of the gentleman from Wisconsin, perhaps I can make it plain to the House. He says, in effect, that the last section of the proposed bill does not repeal the law which now gives the Secretary of Commerce and Labor the discretion of killing as many seals as he may think best. There is no repeal of that law, and that is the point the gentleman desires to make

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, I understand that all debate is closed.

The CHAIRMAN. All debate will close at 3 o'clock and 30 minutes

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Chairman, I said, in the outset of my remarks this morning which were limited to 15 minutes, that this report was based upon a fiction; that there was not one single word of testimony of a reliable nature in itnot one word has been brought into the record upon which that report could have been based. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CLINE] quoted from Prof. Elliott. That quotation is the same CLINE] quoted from Prof. Elliott. That quotation is the san old myth and fiction which Prof. Elliott says is full of errors.

Mr. KENDALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Yes.

Mr. KENDALL. Is it not true that the only two men who appeared before the Committee on Foreign Affairs to testify on the subject at all against the closed season were Mr. Evermann and Mr. Lembky?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Both in the employ of the Government.

Mr. KENDALL. Is it not true that all the other scientific testimony to which the gentleman from Virginia has so often referred is simply private correspondence alleged to be received from eminent men?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Why does the gentleman say "private correspondence"?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I will say that there were ex parte statements made by individuals that the gentleman from Virginia brought before the committee. They were addressed to the distinguished chairman, some of which were read and others not disclosed, and all of which were incorporated in the report of the chairman, and yet Prof. Elliott, having seen some correspondence, has given the distinguished chairman of the committee his answers thereto, with not the implied but the express promise of the chairman that his answers should be incorporated in the report.

The CHAIRMAN. The hour of 3 o'clock and 30 minutes has arrived. By order of the House the committee will now rise.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Davis of West Virginia, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 16571) to give effect to the convention between the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia for the preservation and protection of the fur seals and sea otter which frequent the waters of the North Pacific Ocean, concluded at Washington July 7, 1911, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to, and had further directed him to report that there is now pending an amendment to section 11 of the bill, and a substitute for that amendment, and on those amendments the committee had come to no resolution.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment which I sent to the desk in committee be withdrawn and that the following be substituted

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that the amendment which he offered be withdrawn and that that which he now sends to the desk be substituted therefor. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the amendments agreed to in the committee be now adopted, and that a separate vote be had upon the amendments offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GOODWIN]

The SPEAKER. Is there a separate vote demanded on any particular amendment to which the committee agreed?

Mr. SULZER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. A separate vote is only asked upon the amendments to section 11, one offered by the gentleman from Virginia and the other by the gentleman from Arkansas, and I think that is done by agreement. Mr. SULZER. That is right.

The SPEAKER. The question will then be taken en gros on the amendments excepting those two.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.
The SPEAKER. The question will now be taken on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood], which, without objection, the Clerk will again report.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the amendment

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend H. R. 16571 by striking out section 11 and substituting the following:

"Sec. 11. That from and after the approval of this act all killing of fur seals on the Pribliof Islands, or anywhere within the jurisdiction of the United States in Alaska, shall be suspended for a period of 10 years, and shall be and is hereby declared to be unlawful, and all punlshments and penalties heretofore enacted for the killing of fur seals shall be applicable and inflicted upon offenders under this section: Provided, That this prohibition shall not apply to the annual killing on St. Paul Island of 1,500 small male seals for natives' food an 1500 small male seals for natives' food on St. George Island, the skins of which shall be preserved and annually sold by the Government, and proceeds of such annual sales shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States: Provided further, That at the expiration of the said 10 years' suspension of all commercial killing on the said Pribliof Islands said killing may be resumed thereon as the Government shall thereafter determine to be safe and proper: And provided further, That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall likewise have authority to deliver to the authorized agents of the Canadian Government and the Japanese Government the skins to which they are entitled under the provisions of the tenth article of said convention; to pay to Great Britain and Japan such sums as they are entitled to receive, respectively, under the provisions of the eleventh article of said convention; and to do or perform, or cause to be done or performed, any and every act which the United States is authorized or obliged to do or perform by the provisions of the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth articles of said convention; and to do or perform, or cause to be done or performed, any and every act which the United States is authorized or obliged to do or perform by the provisions of the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth articles of said convention; and to

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. One moment, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I want to call the attention of the Chair to a clerical error in the amendment. Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KENDALL. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Goop-WIN] presents a substitute restricting the killing to 5 years, and it reads 10 years as read from the Clerk's desk.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. That is an inadvertence, Mr. Speaker. I failed to strike it out in the carbon copy. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I ask unanimous consent that the word "ten" may be stricken out and the word "five" be substituted therefor.

The SPEAKER. What is the statement the gentleman from Arkansas is making?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. The words "10 years" are an inadvertence. It should read "5 years." The original said 5 years and this carbon copy has it 10 years.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent to correct an inadvertence in figures. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the word "ten" and insert the word "five."

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Wherever it may appear. The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the word "ten" and insert the word "five" wherever it may appear.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to that change? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. KENDALL. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary in-niry. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. When the vote was taken just now the Chair announced that the ayes had it.

The SPEAKER. No; the gentleman is mistaken; the Chair never announced that the ayes had it, but the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it, whereupon the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Kendall] arose and demanded the year and nays.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. My inquiry is, Which side had it-the ayes or noes?

The SPEAKER. As a matter of fact, neither side had it, but, as a matter of fact further, the noes seemed to have it. Thirty-five gentleman have arisen in the affirmative and 125 in the negative, a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 98, nays 177, answered "present" 11, not voting 106, as follows;
